Our history

Over two centuries ago, the foundations of the company were laid in pioneering fashion when in 1798 Richard Taylor launched the Philosophical Magazine, one of the first scientific journals produced by an independent company. It was the start of much close collaboration with scholarly societies. Dr William Francis, a chemist, joined Richard Taylor in 1852 and continued the tradition of the close links between the academic community and the company.

Today, we continue to be fully committed to the publication of academic and scholarly information of the highest quality and this remains our primary goal.

Taylor & Francis has grown rapidly to become a leading international, academic publisher. With offices across the globe, the Taylor & Francis Group now publishes more than 2,200 journals and over 5,200 new books each year; with a books backlist in excess of 110,000 specialist titles.

Prices featured are correct at time of going to press but are subject to change without notice.

Book orders should be addressed to the Taylor & Francis Customer Services Department at Hachette, or the appropriate overseas agent.

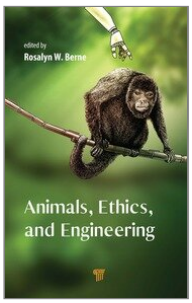
Animals, Ethics, and Engineering

Intersections and Implications



Rosalyn W. Berne

Animals, Ethics, and Engineering: Intersections and Implications is a seminal work that explores the intricate relationship between technology, ethics, and the welfare of non-human animals. Edited by Rosalyn W. Berne, this volume brings together leading scholars and practitioners to examine the ethical responsibilities inherent in technological progress and its impact on animal well-being.

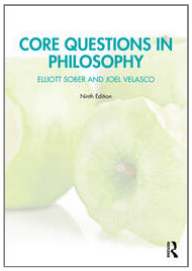
9TH EDITION

Core Questions in Philosophy



Elliott Sober , Joel Velasco Texas Tech University, USA.

In this 9th edition, Elliott Sober and Joel Velasco use an engaging lecture-style format to show students how philosophy is best used to evaluate many different kinds of arguments and to construct sound theories. Well-known historical texts are discussed, not as a means to honor the dead or merely to describe what various philosophers have thought but to engage with, criticize, and even improve ideas from the past. In addition—because philosophy cannot function apart from its engagement with the wider society—traditional and contemporary philosophical problems are brought into dialogue with the physical, biological, and social sciences.

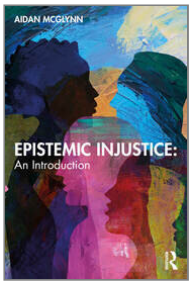
Epistemic Injustice: An Introduction



Aidan McGlynn University of Edinburgh, UK

Epistemic injustice refers to the idea that a person can be harmed simply in their role as a knower. It includes exclusion, silencing and the distortion or undervaluing of one's testimony and has had a significant impact on discussions about race and racism, gender, intersectionality and education. This much-needed introduction explains what epistemic injustice is and examines it from a philosophical standpoint. With chapter summaries, further reading, and a glossary, it is an ideal starting point for anyone coming to the topic for the first time. Essential reading for those in philosophy as well as gender studies, sociology, law, education, politics and health.

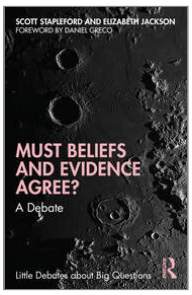
Must Beliefs and Evidence Agree?

A Debate



Scott Stapleford St. Thomas University, Canada., Elizabeth Jackson Saint Louis University, USA.

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Should our beliefs be proportioned to our evidence? Are we doing something wrong in believing with little or no evidence? And may our beliefs be based partly or wholly on moral considerations? These questions are harder than you think. Scott Stapleford and Elizabeth Jackson agree on the priority of evidence, but they differ on the degree of permissible slack and the relevance of other considerations.

2ND EDITION

What is this thing called Philosophy?

Edited by Duncan Pritchard University of California, Irvine & University of Edinburgh

Series: What is this thing called?

The definitive textbook for all who want a thorough introduction to the field. It introduces philosophy using a question-led approach that reflects the discursive nature of the discipline. Each section is written by a high-profile contributor focusing on a key area of philosophy, and contain question-based chapters offering an accessible point of engagement. This second edition has been revised throughout, with chapters being brought up to date and improved. There is also a new section on the philosophy of language and the addition of 'spotlight' questions at the end of each section, as well as an updated Introduction and Glossary of Key Terms.

Analytic Philosophy and 4E Cognition

Conceptual Analysis, Embodiment and Situatedness

Edited by Manuel Heras-Escribano University of Granada, Spain

This volume is the first collection of essays fully devoted to examining the conceptual and methodological relations and tensions between analytic philosophy and the embodied-embedded approach to cognitive science, or 'e-cognition'. After an introduction by the editor placing the topic in philosophical context, the contributors explore topics that cut across both analytic philosophy and 4e-cognition, including skillful coping, habits, the status of representations, the nature of consciousness or the role of communication and sociopolitical implications of these views, considering at the same time how different theories within both traditions apply them.

Avicenna's Theory of Intentionality

Zhenyu Cai

Intentionality – how thoughts represent reality – lies at the heart of many contemporary philosophical questions in the philosophy of mind. Over the past twenty years, Avicenna's conception of intentionality has received considerable scholarly attention. This book provides the first comprehensive analysis of Avicenna's theory of intentionality. Scholars and students of medieval philosophy, Islamic intellectual history, and philosophy of mind will find it essential reading. It is also suitable for academic libraries, philosophy publishers, and those exploring non-Western philosophical traditions.

Conventionalism about Personal Identity

Edited by Alfonso Munoz-Corcuera Complutense University of Madrid, Nils-Frederic Wagner

This volume explores conventionalism about personal identity, the argument that persons are, at least partly, constituted by conventions. Such an approach offers key insights for addressing both the metaphysical and ethical challenges of personal identity, including personhood, Buddhism and dementia, and issues in medical ethics - all topics explored by contributors to the volume. Featuring both defenders and critics of conventionalism, Conventionalism About Personal Identity will be of great interest to upper-level students and scholars studying personal identity, metaphysics and ethics.

Dialogues on Free Will

Laura W. Ekstrom William and Mary University, USA.

Series: Philosophical Dialogues on Contemporary Problems

How do things go when two intelligent and informed college students get together to discuss their viewpoints on free will – one a strong believer in free will, and the other certain that we don't have it? Their friendly but pointed, lively, and thought-provoking conversations are captured in this book. Dialogues on Free Will provides an engaging introduction to free will that is accessible and fun to read. The book also introduces readers to philosophical issues connected with free will, such as the nature of love, meaning in human life, and relations between God and human agency.

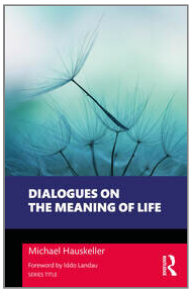
Dialogues on the Meaning of Life



Michael Hauskeller University of Liverpool, UK.

Series: Philosophical Dialogues on Contemporary Problems

What does it mean to live a meaningful life? Can life be meaningful at all, and if it can, what exactly makes it so? This new volume in the Philosophical Dialogues on Contemporary Issues series addresses these questions through fictional dialogues that relate the theoretical problems that philosophers tend to focus on to the lives of ordinary people. Overseeing the seven dialogues presented in this book is the Socrates-like character, Richard Roe, a middle-aged man who has recently lost his son to Covid, a tragedy that sets him out on a quest to understand what makes people pursue the goals they do to give their lives meaning.

Digital Development

Technology, Ethics and Governance

Edited by Mirko Farina Xiamen University and Lomonosov Moscow State University, Xiao Yu , Jin Chen

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This volume offers reflects on the impact of AI in technology, epistemology, ethics, and governance. It begins with an analysis of some of the most important historical, epistemological, ethical, and phenomenological questions relevant to the concepts of digital development and digital innovation. It then reviews and evaluates the merits, possibilities, and potential challenges associated with the implementations of digital and artificial systems in 'lived environments'. Finally, it advocates for Human-Centric values and emphasizes the need to design multipolar policies that prioritize harmonious societal well-being.

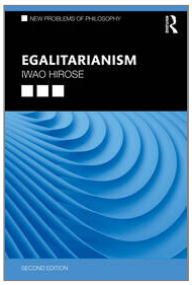
2ND EDITION

Egalitarianism



Iwao Hirose McGill University, Canada

Series: New Problems of Philosophy

A superb introduction to the problem of contemporary egalitarian theories. It explains how rival theories of egalitarianism evaluate distributions of well-being, and carefully assesses the theoretical structure of each theory. It also examines how egalitarian theories are applied to health and health care, thus bringing a deceptively complex philosophical debate into clear focus. Updated and revised throughout and includes a new chapter on relational egalitarianism. Essential reading for anyone studying distributive justice, and will also be of interest to students and researchers in philosophy, economics, political theory, public policy, and public health.

Emerson's Affinities

Father of the American Mind

Edited by Emile Alexandrov University of Notre Dame, Australia, Steve Stakland Northern Virginia Community College, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

This volume presents Ralph Waldo Emerson's engagement with diverse philosophical traditions with the concurrent aim of showing the contemporary relevance of his Transcendentalism. Thematically organised into three parts, the volume first situates Emerson within Romanticism and Platonism. Part Two examines his metaphysics and his intersections with both Eastern and Western religious thought. Finally, Part Three applies his philosophy to education, aesthetics, environmental ethics, and politics. The cosmopolitan essays in this collection situate Emerson not only within Western thought but also in dialogue with Greek, Buddhist, Islamic and Vedāntic philosophies.

Environmental Ethics and our Collective Character

David Clowney

Series: Routledge Environmental Ethics

Faced with the global crisis of human caused environmental harm, this eloquently written text explores the connection between our individual virtues and vices and those of larger groups, such as societies, nations and businesses. It demonstrates how this huge collective crisis is our moral problem as individuals, and what we can do about it, together. Environmental Ethics and our Collective Character will be an important discussion text for students, academics, and instructors in the field of environmental virtue ethics, virtue ethics more broadly, business ethics, political and social philosophy, and environmental and policy studies.

Exploring Suicidal Ambivalence

Philosophical and Psychological Perspectives

Edited by René Baston Dortmund University of Technology, Germany, Martin Weichold Dresden University of Technology, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This volume offers an interdisciplinary exploration of ambivalence in suicidal agency. It examines the structural features of ambivalence in suicidal individuals, focusing, among other things, on the conflicting desires to end one's life versus the desire to live. By analyzing these opposing features, it clarifies the psychological and philosophical dimensions of ambivalence and its impact on the transition from suicidal ideation to action. Additionally, it critically evaluates whether ambivalence reflects diminished rationality and whether suicidal ambivalence potentially justifies paternalistic interventions.

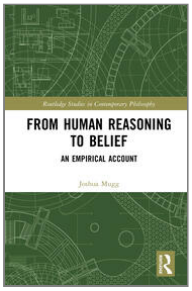
From Human Reasoning to Belief

An Empirical Account



Joshua Mugg Park University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book examines the relation between taxonomy and cognitive architecture in human reasoning. It offers an argument for voluntarism of belief that is grounded in empirical research. On the architectural side, it offers an empirically motivated alternative to Dual-Process Theory and Spinozan Theory. The author argues that the reasoning system operates like a soundboard in that the various property-pairs are like slides on a mixing-board, and the process can be rerun multiple times. Because the reasoning system's final, settled outputs are beliefs, and a subject can rerun the reasoning process, adjusting the slides as they go, subjects exercise some control over what they believe.

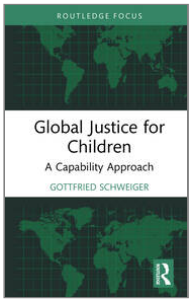
Global Justice for Children

A Capability Approach



Gottfried Schweiger University of Salzburg, Austria

Series: Routledge Focus on Philosophy

While global justice is a hot topic in political philosophy, the place of children and children as a particular group of agents has been largely ignored. This book explores global justice for children from the perspective of the capability approach.The capability approach represents a fruitful normative basis to explore the issue of global justice for children. This book raises essential questions regarding the non-ideal conditions in which children's claims can be conceptualised. It also clarifies central categories of childhood such as vulnerability, responsibility, and social status.

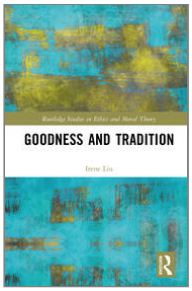
Goodness and Tradition



Irene Liu Le Moyne College, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

Secularization has gradually loosened both the hold and the appeal of religion in the West.This book is motivated by the idea that something important was lost along the way. Arguing that a lack of spirituality has weakened secular moral life, the author seeks to identify an alternative source of spirituality that is not divine or supernatural. She considers three perspectives that offer potential sources of secular spirituality: Aristotelian humanism, existentialist humanism, and Confucian humanism. The book defends the view that traditions are intrinsically good as creations that elevate human nature through their customs, practices, and institutions.

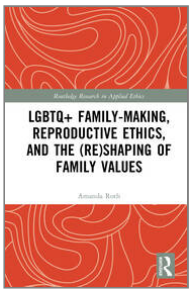
LGBTQ+ Family-Making, Reproductive Ethics, and the (Re)Shaping of Family Values



Amanda Roth SUNY Geneseo, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Applied Ethics

This book examines ethical issues surrounding assisted reproductive technologies and queer family-making. Focusing on LGBTQ+ experiences, it challenges dominant views in philosophical bioethics. The book first introduces the idea of queer epistemic privilege regarding issues of family and reproduction and applies this notion to the bioethical debates around donor conception. Next, it problematizes the typical philosophical conception of the debate over donor anonymity by centering queer perspectives. Finally, it draws attention to known donation and donor sibling contact/relationships, and shows what's missed when these queer practices are erased from bioethical discussions.

Life Transformation Unveiled: Theory, Practice, and a New Model for Action

The Environmentalism

Medani P. Bhandari

Series: River Publishers Series in Social, Urban, Economic and Environmental Sustainability

This book presents a comprehensive collection of transformative theories that delve into the practicalities of personal growth, societal change, and global improvement. It is both a guide and a philosophical roadmap, offering readers insight into the core concepts that shape human development and societal evolution. It illuminates how these frameworks can be applied in everyday life by covering a wide range of contemporary knowledge bases and transformative theories, encouraging readers to adopt an approach rooted in equity, ethics, and giving back. It aims to foster a world where no one is left behind and to nurture a more humane, compassionate, and peaceful society.

Living Ethics in Theory and Practice

Edited by Eric Racine Montreal Clinical Research Institute & University of Montreal, Canada, Bénédicte D'Anjou McGill University, Canada, Caroline Favron-Godbout University of Montreal, Canada, Giulia Inguaggiato Amsterdam University Medical Center, The Netherlands, Suzanne Metselaar Amsterdam University Medical Center, The Netherlands, Gabriel Saso-Baudaux University of Sherbrooke, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

This volume advances a new approach to ethics: "living ethics". As an ethical and philosophical orientation, living ethics offers a new perspective on how difficult human situations are opportunities for co-learning and co-creative ethical thinking. Living ethics starts with the observation that moral problems are living and vital problems that affect our daily lives. It orients scholarship and practice by using theory in a pragmatic way to solve real-life problems, by fostering spaces for dialogical reflection on these problems, and by working closely together with stakeholders to co-imagine solutions.

Markets in Human Organs for Transplantation

Controversy and Contention

Edited by James Stacey Taylor The College of New Jersey, USA, Mark J. Cherry St. Edwards University, USA

Series: Routledge Annals of Bioethics

This volume presents a comprehensive examination of one of bioethics' most divisive debates: whether human organs should be bought and sold. Contributors include both proponents who argue that properly regulated markets would increase organ supply and reduce suffering, and opponents who contend that commodification of organs violates human dignity and risks exploitation. The collection examines utilitarian, libertarian, and communitarian approaches while considering real-world policy implications. It also offers nuanced analysis of paternalistic prohibitions, feasibility concerns, and alternative procurement systems.

Quantum Gravity and Computation

Information, Pregeometry, and Digital Physics

Edited by Dean Rickles University of Sydney, Australia, Xerxes D. Arsiwalla Wolfram Institute, USA, Hatem Elshatlawy

Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Mathematics and Physics

It has become apparent a new theoretical framework is needed to solve the problem of quantum gravity. This kind of framework goes beyond conventional mathematical conceptions of space, time, and matter. The volume explores this approach from a variety of perspectives, including physics-based, mathematical, computational, and philosophical. By probing at a level of structure beneath the ordinary structures used in general relativity and quantum mechanics, the volume finds new ways of showing how these higher-order structures can be constructed from the deeper elements.

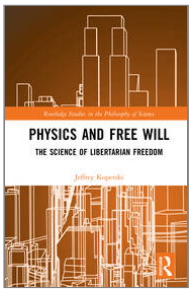
Physics and Free Will

The Science of Libertarian Freedom



Jeffrey Koperski Saginaw Valley State University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Science

Can libertarian free will survive our best physical theories? While prominent physicists argue that genuine agency contradicts science, this book demonstrates that contemporary physics actually provides robust foundations for human freedom. Koperski develops a framework that preserves libertarian intuitions about genuine choice while remaining consistent with physical theory. Through meticulous examination of determinism, reductionism, and the causal closure of physics, this comprehensive work reveals how contemporary science's recognition of emergent causation provides ample space for genuine human agency.

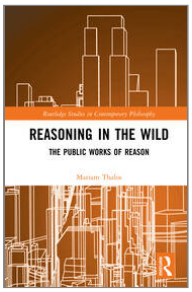
Reasoning in the Wild

The Public Works of Reason



Mariam Thalos University of Tennessee, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book is founded on the principle that the relation of logical consequence is best understood as a relation between concrete acts, not between abstract propositions inhabiting inference systems. The author illuminates the following: the concept of the common mind; how reasoning is inherently social; that communication shapes action within the context of the common mind; that public sentiment is a powerful, macrosocial force shaped by interlocking processes of shared understanding and strategic communication; and finally, how a disjointed common mind can result from persistent false narratives.

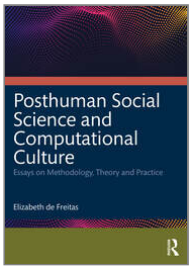
Posthuman Social Science and Computational Culture

Essays on Methodology, Theory and Practice



Elizabeth de Freitas

This book offers theoretical and practical insight into posthuman social science research methods, addressing new challenges in computational culture. Philosophy and theory from media studies, software studies, and science and technology studies (STS) are used to make sense of cultural trends and empirical experiments. It will be of interest to graduate students and researchers in the social sciences and humanities, who are interested in the power of theory and philosophy, and are designing empirical experiments to investigate the complex ways that computation and digital technology are changing our lives and our sense of how and why we do 'social' research.

Recognition: Historical and Philosophical Perspectives

Edited by Matthew Congdon Vanderbilt University - Nashville, USA, Thomas Khurana University of Potsdam, Germany

Series: Rewriting the History of Philosophy

In the last few decades, the concept of recognition has moved to the forefront of philosophical research, particularly in political and social philosophy but also related areas, including, race, gender, philosophy of mind and social psychology. It is also a concept with deep roots, going back to Rousseau and Hegel through to the work of recent thinkers, such as Charles Taylor and Axel Honneth. This volume explores the philosophy of recognition from multiple standpoints, providing a wide-ranging reassessment of the concept. It is vital reading for those in philosophy as well as related disciplines such as political theory, sociology, social psychology and psychoanalysis.

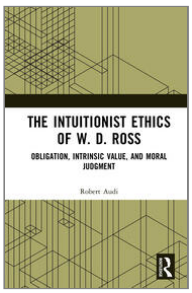
The Intuitionist Ethics of W. D. Ross

Obligation, Intrinsic Value, and Moral Judgment



Robert Audi University of Notre Dame, USA.

This is the first full-scale monograph on the moral philosophy of W. D. Ross. It shows why Ross is admired as a major figure in ethics. He provided one of the most distinctive and powerful theories in the field, and Robert Audi sets out and explains Ross's comprehensive ethics, including his theory of obligation—of duty and the right—and his theory of value, of the good and the bad. Ross is conceptually sophisticated, rich in ideas, and historically informed. He reflects the best in Aristotle's ethics and is an astute critic of Kant, Mill, Moore, and others.

The Plasticity of the Emotions

Puzzles in the Science of Emotion

Raamy Majeed University of Manchester, UK

The emotions is a topic at the forefront of research in philosophy, yet most studies focus on the emotions and rationality, how emotions differ from feeling and whether there is a science of the emotions. Relatively overlooked, however, are the philosophical questions raised by the fact that our emotions develop and change over time. Raamy Majeed proposes a novel perspective on emotional development, one that synthesises the best features of existing frameworks and solves some of the major puzzles. It will be of interest to those studying and researching the philosophy of the emotions and philosophy of psychology, philosophy of mind and philosophy of cognitive science.

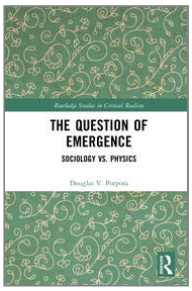
The Question of Emergence

Sociology vs. Physics



Douglas V. Porpora Drexel University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Critical Realism

This book takes the relationship between physics and sociology as its subject, focussing on the philosophical dispute between emergentism and reductionism. It argues that the mystery behind emergence disappears when we abandon the lawful understanding of causality, in favour of a powers view. The first book-length publication addressing the debate over emergence and reductionism, it gives attention to emergence across the ontological levels from physics to social behavior and will have a lively readership among critical realists. Of interest to philosophers of mind and science, social scientists, and theoretically-oriented practitioners in chemistry, biology, and psychology.

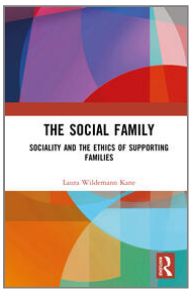
The Social Family

Sociality and the Ethics of Supporting Families



Laura W. Kane University of Worcester, USA.

This book argues for an inclusive definition of the family that recognizes diverse caregiving relationships and outlines distinct familial and governmental obligations based on a taxonomy of needs. In doing so, it de-emphasizes marriage, biological ties, or shared values as the basis for familial relationship in social and legal contexts. Kane reconceives the family as a unique social group centered on providing intimate care for the mutual flourishing of all its members, regardless of gendered or intergenerational roles or relations.

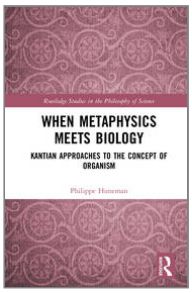
When Metaphysics Meets Biology

Kantian Approaches to the Concept of Organism



Philippe Huneman Paris I Sorbonne, France

Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Science

This book explains the background and meaning of Kant's account of the life sciences in the Critique of Judgment by reading the development of Kant's ideas on the living since his 1763 precritical essays, in parallel with analyzing several milestones in the constitution of the concept of organism as a self-organized totality, studied by biology. It offers a philosophical interpretation of the emergence of biology in Kant's thinking, and sheds light on the philosophical issues currently embedded within the conceptual structure of biology.

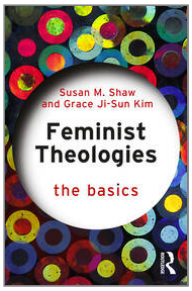
Feminist Theologies: The Basics



Susan M. Shaw , Grace Ji-Sun Kim

Series: The Basics

Beginning in the early 1960s, feminists identified ways traditional theologies omitted, ignored, and vilified women's experiences, issues, and perspectives. In the past 60 years, feminists have developed a vibrant theological tradition that is essential for a full understanding of Christian theologies. Feminist theologies engage some of the most important and controversial issues of our time, from the roles of women in society to sexuality, abortion, gender identity, and the environment. This book is an ideal starting point for anyone seeking a full introduction to feminist theologies as well as broader themes in theology, gender, and sexuality.

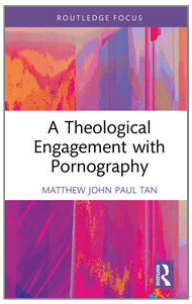
A Theological Engagement with Pornography



Matthew John Paul Tan

In Christian circles, consuming pornography has been treated primarily as a moral issue, and the analysis of pornography has dealt with motivations, harms and responses. This book explores how such analyses end up missing important theological dimensions of pornography, and in so missing those dimensions, leave important aspects of the cultural power of pornography unaddressed. Ultimately, the book argues that pornography distorts the very act on which it trades, namely the viewing of the sexual act. More specifically, it states that pornography is not sexual, erotic or embodied, arguing instead that it is Christological, mimetic and divinizing.

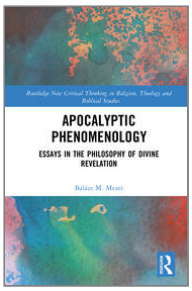
Apocalyptic Phenomenology

Essays in the Philosophy of Divine Revelation



Balázs M. Mezei Corvinus University of Budapest, Hungary

Series: Routledge New Critical Thinking in Religion, Theology and Biblical Studies

The concept of 'apocalyptic phenomenology' is rooted in the phenomenological tradition of 'Offenbarung' (revelation, revealing) as the basic feature of phenomena. In the author's view, reality is self-disclosing, 'apocalyptic', and thus he explains the connections between the original, Biblical notion of apocalupsis and the important developments of our philosophical traditions leading up to the 'theological turn of phenomenology'. The chapters are framed around a focus on newness and engage with the work of key thinkers such as Edmund Husserl, Martin Heidegger, Paul Ricœur, Hans Urs von Balthasar and Anton Günther.

Biblical and Socio-Scientific Approaches to Religious Enmity

Edited by Christopher A. Porter , Elizabeth E. Shively , Kenneth I. Mavor University of St Andrews, UK

Series: Routledge Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Biblical Criticism

This book examines how Christian teachings on love and enmity shape group identity and conflict, with scripture and theology used both to justify violence and call for reconciliation. This book is ideal for scholars, students, clergy, and readers in theology, biblical studies, religious ethics, and political theology who seek to understand the intersection of faith, social identity, and enmity. It serves academics exploring socio-cognitive approaches to religious conflict as well as practitioners working to address religious polarization in contemporary communities and interfaith contexts.

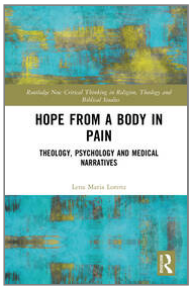
Hope from a Body in Pain

Theology, Psychology and Medical Narratives



Lena Maria Lorenz

Series: Routledge New Critical Thinking in Religion, Theology and Biblical Studies

This book explores the phenomenon of hope in the context of long-term ill-health. It brings medicine, psychology and theology in dialogue with the voices of those with first-hand experience of chronic pain. The author challenges a highly individualistic and positivistic view on hope and argues for hope as intuitive, reflective, active and communal. Rape Culture and the Bible

Scholars Reflect

Edited by Barbara Thiede University of North Carolina, Charlotte, USA.

Series: Rape Culture, Religion and the Bible

Rape Culture and the Bible: Scholars Reflect offers readers the opportunity to hear from prominent and influential biblical scholars and scholar activists as they reflect on their work on sexual violence vis-a-vis the Bible. The book covers major points of inquiry in the field, focusing primarily on the Hebrew Bible and the New Testament. It explores debates on appropriate terminology; intersectionality of sexual violence, gender and race; how survivor perspectives inform the reading of violent texts; male-on-male sexualized violence in biblical literature, and the connections of Judeophobia with sexual violence in early Christian literature.

Religious Authorities and Practices of Conflict Resolution

Edited by Carla Bagnoli , Vincenzo Pacillo

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion

Religious Authorities and Practices of Conflict Resolution asks the following important questions: How is interfaith dialogue to be conceived and structured? Is such a dialogue even possible, if each religious group is entitled to claim decisive and exclusive authority? This volume proposes that the challenge be addressed by taking a transdisciplinary approach, which appropriates resources and methods from different perspective philosophy, sociology, economics, and law. By integrating perspectives from philosophy, sociology, economics, and law, the book provide a holistic understanding of how religious authority can influence conflict resolution.

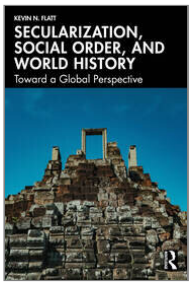
Secularization, Social Order, and World History

Toward a Global Perspective



Kevin N. Flatt

This book provides a new perspective on the nature of secularization, and demonstrates that the concepts of "religion" and the "secular" that are assumed in traditional accounts of secularization are not universal human categories, but specifically modern and Western ideas. As the secular order has been exported around the world, it has provoked movements for the restoration of sacred-social order that are often misunderstood as mere religious revivals or a clash of civilizations. Bridging sociology, history, religious studies, and philosophy, this work offers an innovative, global account of secularization and its discontents.

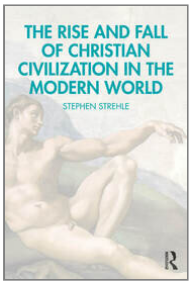
The Rise and Fall of Christian Civilization in the Modern World



Stephen Strehle

This work traces two movements that defined our modern world: the rise of Puritan ideals that birthed concepts of liberty, equality, and democracy, and the subsequent emergence of secular society that challenged religious authority. It offers both general readers and scholars a comprehensive understanding of how Christianity's cultural influence evolved from a dominant force to one voice among many in our contemporary pluralistic society. More than a historical account, it provides crucial insights into the ongoing dialogue between faith and secularism in modern life.

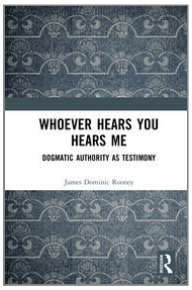
Whoever Hears You Hears Me

Dogmatic Authority as Testimony



James Dominic Rooney

Many oppose dogma fearing that heresy accusations lead to violence; similarly, opposition to claims of infallible church authority stems from fears of fanaticism, closed-mindedness, and blind obedience. The book justifies dogma while firmly opposing violence, fanaticism, closed-mindedness, and mindless deference. It demonstrates through philosophical reasoning that Christian theists who reject dogma or dogmatic authority ultimately adopt self-defeating positions. These insights reveal why Christians should unite in restoring communion within one holy, catholic, and apostolic Church. The book will appeal to scholars of theology, philosophy of religion, and ecclesiology.

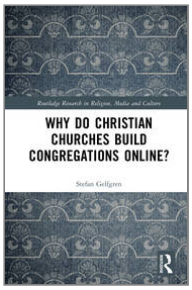
Why Do Christian Churches Build Congregations Online?



Stefan Gelfgren

Series: Routledge Research in Religion, Media and Culture

Why do Christian Churches Build Congregations Online? examines the different ways that Christian churches and denominations perceive and use digital media in their external work. This is explored through three different case studies to understand the prerequisites and conditions for media usage from a religious institutional perspective. This volume provides an understanding of the relationship between external (societal) and internal factors (such as theology and historical origin). This book will also broaden the understanding of the field of "digital religion" and emphasise the need to discuss contemporary religion in terms of "religion in a digital age".

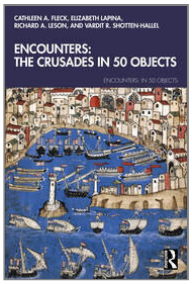
Encounters: The Crusades In 50 Objects



Cathleen A. Fleck , Elizabeth Lapina , Richard A. Leson , Vardit R. Shotten-Hallel

Series: Encounters: in 50 Objects

From the late eleventh to the early fourteenth century, western Europeans established the crusader states of the Levant and had unprecedented commercial, cultural, and military exchanges with the Middle East. Through a focused analysis of fifty objects, this book examines what material culture can tell us about interpersonal, interfaith, cross-cultural, and trans-regional encounters during this period of the medieval crusades.

2ND EDITION

Key Issues in Historical Theory

Herman Paul Leiden University, The Netherlands

Key Issues in Historical Theory is a fresh, clear and well-grounded introduction to a vibrant field of inquiry. With examples from novels, music, journalism and politics, the book expertly engages the reader in discussions of what history is, how people relate to the past and how they are formed by the past. This thoroughly revised edition is brought up-to-date with new examples, while also covering recent debates on presentism, post-truth and the Anthropocene. With text boxes providing additional focus on a range of key topics, this is an accessible and innovative guide to the field of historical theory.

3RD EDITION

The European Union Since 1945

Alasdair Blair

Series: Seminar Studies

The European Union faces immediate and long-term challenges as it responds to the changing nature of the 21st century global order. Whilst the EU is the world's most successful multilateral institution that continues to attract applications from prospective member states, it faces the challenge of responding to the increasing support for populist political parties and dealing with erosion to democratic values within its member states. In this fully revised and updated third edition, Alasdair Blair examines the economic, political, personal and social factors that have shaped the process of European integration since the end of the Second World War.

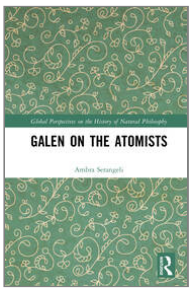
Galen on the Atomists

Anti-teleologism, Theory of Matter and Medical Corpuscularism



Ambra Serangeli

Series: Global Perspectives on the History of Natural Philosophy

This volume provides the first comprehensive analysis of his fierce critique of atomism, which is the most emblematic and disputed example of his polemical accounts, and demonstrates his reliability. It offers a close analysis of Galen's account on atomism, contributing to the current debate on his role as a source on previous and contemporary philosophical and scientific thought, shedding new light on the still little-known relationship between Epicureanism and medicine. It additionally offers a new perspective on the debated question of the philosophical background of Asclepiades' medical corpuscularism.

Shopping in Eighteenth-Century Europe

Experiences and Identities

Edited by My Hellsing , Johanna Ilmakunnas

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Cultures and Societies

This volume explores the practices of shopping in Europe during the long eighteenth century, a period during which consumption choices expanded to encompass much larger groups than before. Shopping functioned as an act of social distinction, where retail practices not only reflected and reinforced social aspirations and identities, but were a means of creating relationships through shared information and exchanges.

Societies in Late Medieval Prussia: Ethnicities

Edited by Krzysztof Kwiatkowski , Radosław Biskup

Series: Studies in Medieval History and Culture

This collective volume takes up the subject of ethnicity in Prussia between the 13th and 16th centuries and shows several other aspects of this phenomenon in a region on the outskirts of late medieval Europe. Lithuanians arriving from the east, Poles migrating from the south and Curonians living in the north-eastern peripheries come to light, but the volumes also analyse issues of interethnic relations, both in the so-called 'period of conquest' (13th century) and at the turn of the Middle Ages and the Early Modern period (15th/16th centuries).

The Cold War of Labor Migrants

Opportunities, Struggles and Adaptations across the Iron Curtain and Beyond

Edited by Sara Bernard , Rory Archer , Yannis G.S. Papadopoulos

This book overturns conventional wisdom about labor migration during the Cold War era, revealing a complex landscape of mobility that transcended the supposed rigid boundaries between socialist and capitalist worlds. Drawing on rich case studies from the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, Western Europe, and Yugoslavia, the contributors demonstrate how the Cold War's unique socio-economic and political context fostered unexpected experimentation and adaptation in labor mobility policies and practices.

The Common Law Tradition in America

A Personal Statement

John V. Orth

Using a thematic approach to American law and legal history, The Common Law Tradition in America introduces readers to the scholars, judges, and critics who made the law at once a stable source of rules and a dynamic system capable of responding to social and economic changes. As befits "a personal statement," The Common Law Tradition in America is written in a relaxed style, enlivened with engaging anecdotes. It offers law students, researchers of legal history, practicing lawyers, and the general reader an overview of law and legal development, above the technicalities of law school and practice.

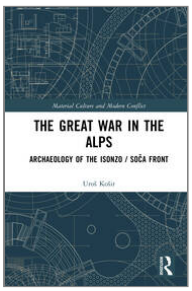
The Great War in the Alps

Archaeology of The Isonzo / Soča Front



Uroš Košir University of Ljubljana, Slovenia

Series: Material Culture and Modern Conflict

This book provides the first account of the Isonzo / Soča frontline, characterised by high altitude, karstic landscapes, through the multidisciplinary lens of modern conflict archaeology, offering unique insights into its multilayered conflict landscapes. The book is intended for all those interested in the archaeology and history of the somewhat lesser-known Soča Front of the First World War. Due to its focus on the topic of modern conflict archaeology, the book is aimed at archaeologists, historians, anthropologists, geographers, and others who study conflict landscapes, material culture, and the multilayered legacies of the First World War.

The Emergence of the Nobility in East Central Europe between the Eighth and Thirteenth Centuries

Edited by Robert Antonín , Jiří Macháček

Series: Studies in Medieval History and Culture

This book explores the formation and evolution of medieval elites in the frontier and peripheral regions of the Frankish/East Frankish Empire and East-Central Europe between the 8th and 13th centuries. It addresses the dynamics of elite emergence during a transformative era marked by the interaction of established centres and developing borderlands. By focusing on regions such as Saxony, Poland, the Baltic, Bavaria, Carinthia, the Czech lands, Great Moravia, Hungary, and Croatia, the book offers a geographically broad perspective on the mechanisms of power and social hierarchy in early and high medieval Europe.

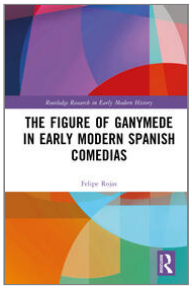
The Figure of Ganymede in Early Modern Spanish Comedias



Felipe Rojas

Series: Routledge Research in Early Modern History

Focusing on comedias, this book identifies sixteen overt references to Ganymede across works from Lope de Vega, Tirso de Molina, Juan Ruiz de Alarcón, Ana Caro, Andrés de Claramonte, and others, ranging from La escolástica celosa (1596–1602) to Fray Manuel de Guerra's Aprobación (1682). By analyzing canonical and noncanonical plays alike, it demonstrates how Spanish playwrights reimagined Ganymede as a political, moral, and erotic figure whose meanings were fluid and contested.

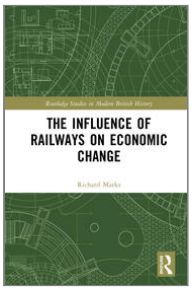
The Influence of Railways on Economic Change



Richard Marks

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern British History

The book approaches the history of railway building and its impact upon economic change in a new way. Using a more granular approach than has been used in the past based upon detailed case studies, the book aims to establish the effect of railway building on local economies and individual sectors within those micro-economies.The volume is aimed at undergraduates, postgraduates and scholars who are examining the economic and social history of the Victorian period. It would also be of value to business schools. The book aims to be an accessible history of nineteenth century economic history which will be of general interest to book sellers, librarians, and the casual reader.

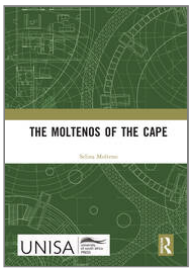
The Moltenos of the Cape



Selina Molteno

This work recounts the remarkable story of the Molteno family, whose legacy is connected with the evolution of South African society an Anglo-Italian descent and rooted in the Cape, the Moltenos were a family whose contributions spanned politics, activism, and civil service. At their helm was Sir John Charles Molteno, the Cape Colony's first prime minister. His vision and principles were inherited by five of his children, each carved a notable path and Later generations carried the flame. Collectively, the Moltenos stood for equality, unity, and progressive values in a deeply divided land. Their legacy, marked by anti-racism, anti-imperialism resonates strongly today.

The Mythistory of Kajir Ronghangpi

The Making of Kaziranga National Park

Edited by Dharamsing Teron , Vulli Dhanaraju

Kaziranga National Park is globally recognised for its biodiversity, but for the Karbi people, it is equally a space of cultural meaning. This book centres on Kajir Ronghangpi, a legendary Karbi figure whose name is believed to give the park its identity as Kajir Arong, the land of Kajir. Her story, preserved through generations of oral tradition, is central to Karbi identity. Through an interdisciplinary lens that draws on oral history, folklore studies, environmental anthropology, and indigenous knowledge, the book documents how Karbi narratives construct Kaziranga as a living cultural landscape.

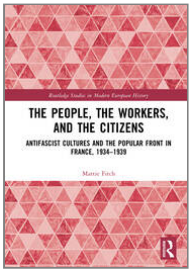
The People, the Workers, and the Citizens

Antifascist Cultures and the Popular Front in France, 1934–1939



Mattie Fitch Marymount University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern European History

In the 1930s, activists with France's Popular Front mobilized culture against fascism. Examining music, theater, film, art, and festivals in Paris, Marseille, and Rouen, this book analyzes approaches to antifascism and how they varied and interacted across different regions and left-wing traditions. Aimed at a scholarly audience, it engages with historians of modern France and the interwar period in Europe, and will interest researchers in antifascist and fascist studies, as well as the fields of cultural politics, republicanism, communism, socialism, and national and regional identity.

Shropshire

Art, Architecture and Archaeology from Roman Wroxeter to the Sixteenth Century

Edited by John McNeill Secretary of the British Archaeological Association, UK, Elizabeth New

Series: The British Archaeological Association Conference Transactions

Shropshire: Art, Architecture and Archaeology from Roman Wroxeter to the Sixteenth Century considers the shift in the regional administrative centre from Wroxeter to Shrewsbury, the powerful evidence for investment in the material fabric of the middle Welsh March, particularly between the late 11th and 13th centuries, and Shropshire's great monastic hinterland. Shropshire: Art, Architecture and Archaeology from Roman Wroxeter to the Sixteenth Century updates and enlarges our knowledge of the middle Welsh March and is for medieval archaeologists and historians.

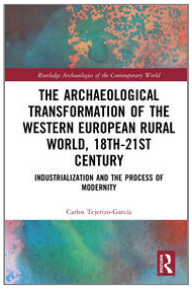
The Archaeological Transformation of the Western European Rural World, 18th-21st Century

Industrialization and the Process of Modernity



Carlos Tejerizo-García University of Salamanca (Spain).

Series: Routledge Archaeologies of the Contemporary World

How the rural world in Western Europe became modern? Who were the main agents of this change? Did these transformations had an impact on the local environment? This book explores the process of transformation of Western pre-industrial rural societies into industrialized ones through an archaeologically-driven analysis based on two villages in northwestern Iberia. This book is intended for researchers in the fields of historical and contemporary archaeology as well as modernity studies, industrial archaeology and history and social history.

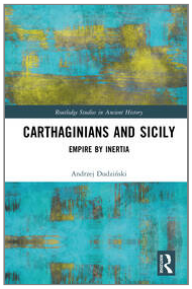
Carthaginians and Sicily

Empire by Inertia



Andrzej Dudziński Jagiellonian University, Poland

Series: Routledge Studies in Ancient History

This book analyzes the Carthaginian policy towards Sicily from the earliest recorded contacts in the 6th century to the expulsion of Punic influences by the Romans in the 3rd century. It reconstructs Carthaginian policy and strategies towards the island by looking beyond the opinions of the partisan accounts of the Greek and Roman historians. The emerging picture shows how the Carthaginians struggled with the "Sicilian question" on their part, and that far from embracing a truly expansionist policy, Carthage was in fact drawn deeper and deeper into the affairs of the island and motivated mostly by the account of gains and losses.

Graeco-Roman Horror and its Modern Reception

Unleashing Classical Dread

Edited by Isidro Molina Zorrilla , Nuno Simões Rodrigues , Vasileios Balaskas

Series: Routledge Monographs in Classical Studies

This volume introduces an exploration of Classical literature and its engagement with tragedy, horrific events, and fear-inflicting episodes. It explores how fear, terror, and horror have been manifested in Graeco-Roman culture and their reception. It examines themes such as body horror, haunted spaces, and suspense in the Graeco-Roman tradition and its modern reinterpretation, expanding the scope of traditional scholarship and providing fresh insight into the genre in classical literature and culture.

Liminal Spaces and Spatial Practices in Byzantium

Edited by Buket Kitapçı Bayrı , Myrto Veikou

Series: Birmingham Byzantine and Ottoman Studies

Liminal Spaces and Spatial Practices in Byzantium offers a novel twist, combining intra-/inter-disciplinary research across the humanities and social sciences by transforming two distinct disciplinary concepts (liminality from social anthropology and space from cultural geography) into methodological devices for historical investigation. The focus has been an investigation of conceptions of spatial liminality in the Byzantine world. This book will appeal to students and scholars alike interested in Byzantine history and culture.

Material Religion in Byzantium and Beyond

Papers from the 54th Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies

Edited by Ine Jacobs , Jaś Elsner , Julia Smith

Series: Publications of the Society for the Promotion of Byzantine Studies

This volume introduces the insights of Material Religion to the field of Byzantine studies. It presents Material Religion as a new theoretical lens to Byzantinists, who have long explored religious life through behaviours, practices, and material culture, and who have long recognised their significance. Material Religion in Byzantium and Beyond will appeal to a broad audience, from students of Byzantium to established scholars who may be unfamiliar with the Material Religion framework.

Poetry and Poetics, Greek and Beyond: Essays in Honour of M.S. Silk

Edited by Fiona Macintosh , David Ricks

Series: Publications of the Centre for Hellenic Studies, King's College London

The publication of Interaction in Poetic Imagery: with special reference to early Greek poetry in 1974 inaugurated Michael Silk (1941-) as a Hellenist of exceptional learning and critical acumen, as a strenuous and ambitious theorist of literature, and as a comparatist of wide reach within the Western tradition. The present volume honours this distinctive voice in literary studies with a range of papers addressing some of his many interests, reflecting his deep and growing influence over half a century, and marking out areas for ongoing debate and development.

Ritual, Gender, and the Body in the Early Christian World

Edited by Richard E. DeMaris Valparaiso University, USA, Soham Al-Suadi University of Rostock, Germany, Richard S. Ascough Queen's University, Canada

Series: Ritual in the Ancient Mediterranean

This volume investigates the central role of physical bodies, ritual technologies, healing practices, gender constructions, and visual imagery in creating and sustaining religious meaning in antiquity. Drawing from a rich array of primary sources and theoretical frameworks, especially gender studies and ritual studies, the chapters collectively emphasize that religion in this period was fundamentally experienced through ritualized actions, embodied transformations, and visually charged sacred spaces. It is suitable for students and scholars working on the New Testament and early Christianity, and issues of ritual, gender, and the body in the early Christian world.

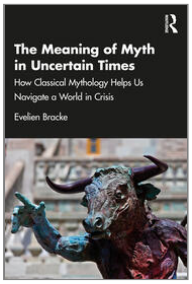
The Meaning of Myth in Uncertain Times

How classical mythology helps us navigate a world in crisis



Evelien Bracke

This book reveals how sociocultural and political debates today are still heavily influenced by ancient mythology. It explores how ancient stories shape how our modern secular society thinks about the interconnected geopolitical, technological, and ecological issues we are facing, and our potential futures. This expanded English edition of Evelien Bracke's award-winning Dutch book Leidraad door het labyrint explores how and why Greek and Roman myths, despite their ancient origins, have become surprisingly meaningful in times of uncertainty. Suitable for students, scholars, teachers, and general readers interested in ancient mythology.

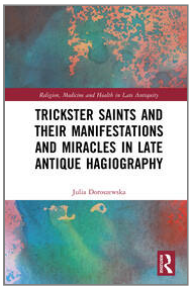
Trickster Saints and Their Manifestations and Miracles in Late Antique Hagiography



Julia Doroszewska

Series: Religion, Medicine and Health in Late Antiquity

This book explores how late antique miracle collections depict Christian saints as subversive, theatrical tricksters who blur the boundaries between sacred and profane, human and divine.The volume demonstrates that idiosyncrasies in the characterisation of the saints in these texts form a coherent model when approached with the template of the trickster paradigm, offering a readers new understanding of sainthood in late antique Christianity. Suitable for scholars and students of late antique Christianity, hagiography, religious studies, classical studies, and those interested in the intersections of literature, folklore, and cultural history.

Global South Creator Cultures

Edited by Tugce Bidav , Smith Mehta

Global South Creator Cultures examines social media creators' labor within national contexts, analyzing working conditions and geographical challenges through a four-part framework. Instead of North-South binaries, it highlights local factors shaping digital production. Eight chapters explore creator labor through media, communication, cultural, and platform studies. Featuring experiences of Global South creators, this collection is essential for students and academics interested in the relationships between nation-states, platforms, and creators across diverse geographical contexts.

Advancing Student Experience in the Art and Design Curriculum

Project-Based Learning

Edited by William Platz

Series: Routledge Focus on Design Pedagogy

Advancing Student Experience in the Art and Design Curriculum: Project-Based Learning will renew the critical attention paid to projects in the art & design curriculum and rigorously consider impacts on student experience. How exactly do we conceive of 'projects' in the context of a post-secondary creative arts curriculum? Each chapter in this book confronts the project as a specific, potent and transformative site of learning with vast engagement potential for the contemporary student. What unites the project-based learning methods in this book is an emphasis on the motivated and purposeful activities of the learners that result in tangible making and doing.

Art History Now

Objects, Concepts, Approaches

Edited by Geraldine A. Johnson

This volume presents definitive essays by internationally-renowned experts and innovative younger scholars on the wide range of approaches used by art historians past and present to analyze images, objects, buildings, and performances. It provides critical considerations of key methodologies, from formalism and iconography to social history and psychoanalytic approaches. It explores fundamental concepts, from the artist, the beholder, and the frame to museums, canons, and periodization. At the same time, it broadens art itself as a category by considering visual culture more generally. This collection will be indispensable for students and scholars of Art History.

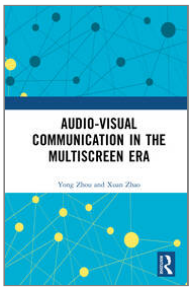
Audio-visual Communication in the Multiscreen Era



Zhou Yong , Zhao Xuan

The book presents a theoretical and methodological framework that addresses the limitations of traditional, small-sample TV viewership surveys in today's evolving media landscape. It proposes a comprehensive system that reflects the communication effects of audio-visual information in the multiscreen era. It introduces a novel vector autoregression (VAR) model to evaluate the effects of multiscreen audio-visual communication and provides a practical program implementation system that connects theoretical frameworks with actionable industry applications. This book will offer valuable insights for scholars of media research, audiovisual communication, and cultural studies.

Battle Lines Drawn

War Comics Since 1914

Edited by Stephen Connor , Harriet E.H. Earle

Series: Global Perspectives in Comics Studies

Battle Lines Drawn: War Comics since 1914 delves into the rich and diverse history of war comics, exploring how the medium represents and reflects upon global conflicts from World War I to the modern era. It critically analyses how war narratives in comics intersect with historiography, popular culture, and evolving societal perceptions of conflict. The book balances theoretical explorations with analyses of specific texts to examine how these works reflect and shape cultural understandings of war while grappling with themes such as patriotism, trauma, political ideologies, and marginalized perspectives.

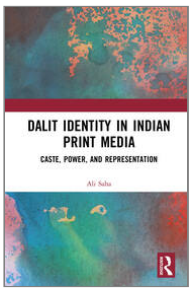
Dalit Identity in Indian Print Media

Caste, Power, and Representation



Ali Saha

Dalit Identity in Indian Print Media: Caste, Power, and Representation takes readers inside the world of Indian news media to reveal how caste operates today, not through open exclusion, but through subtle and powerful storytelling. This book introduces the idea of "New Casteist media," showing how modern journalism often gives Dalits visibility only in moments of violence or conflict, while quietly reinforcing the hierarchies it reports on. This book benefits scholars interested in media studies, social inequality, and identity formation, offering valuable insights into how media influences the evolving dynamics of caste in modern India.

Decolonising Approaches to Users and Audiences in the Global South

Context, Theory and Method

Edited by Tarik Sabry , Winston Mano University of Westminster, UK, Andrea Medrado University of Exeter, UK

Series: Internationalizing Media Studies

This edited collection offers an unprecedented focus on decolonizing audience and user studies in the Global South, challenging essentialist discourses of media imperialism and technological determinism. Including original essays and contemporary case studies spanning Africa, Middle East, Latin America, and Asia, the book provides a nuanced double critique of both local and West-centric approaches, pushing back against historically extractive audience research logics that have marginalized Global South perspectives. This resource serves as a rallying call for epistemic justice and a practical guide for decolonial approaches in media and communication studies.

Fuzzy Boundaries

Threshold Between Water and Land

Edited by Francesca Dal Cin , Joana de Mesquita Lima , Sérgio Barreiros Proença

Series: Project Thinking on Design

Fuzzy Boundaries: Threshold between water and land is a curated selection of reflections on the boundaries between water and land, and its meaning amidst climate change, social, economic and political challenges. By engaging with form and contemplating the frictions and quiet conflicts that inhabit transitional spaces, the authors suggest that fuzziness - viewed through varied geographical and cultural lenses - holds the potential to reveal deeper layers of meaning.

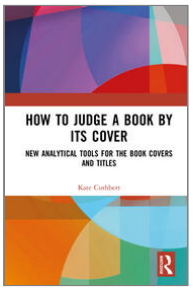
How to Judge a Book by its Cover

New Analytical Tools for the Book Covers and Titles



Kate Cuthbert

Combining both an industry and research focus, How to Judge a Book by its Cover not only judges books by their covers, but provides a methodology for others to do the same. Bringing together paratextual studies, publishing studies and media studies, visual design analysis and the world of advertising, this work marries academic rigour with industry experience to first define the role that book covers and book titles play, and then articulate a methodology for their analysis. This book can be used for students and researchers that are interested in media studies, paratextual studies, publishing, internet studies, post-colonial studies and popular fiction studies.

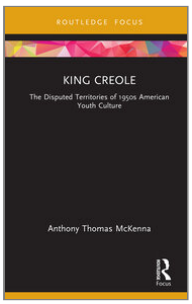
King Creole

The Disputed Territories of 1950s American Youth Culture



Anthony Thomas McKenna

Series: Cinema and Youth Cultures

This book positions King Creole in the disputed territories of 1950s youth culture. It is one of Elvis's best regarded films, but one of his least financially successful. It is a portrait of youthful alienation and juvenile delinquency made at a time when these topics were becoming less fashionable in teenpics. Rich on archival research and textual analysis King Creole: The Disputed Territories of 1950s American Youth Culture will interest both film studies scholars and students. Beyond film studies, this interdisciplinary text is valuable for scholars and students of popular music, American pop culture, celebrity studies, and social history.

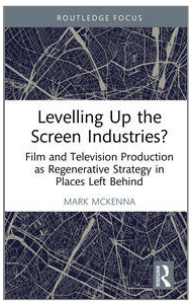
Levelling Up the Screen Industries?

Film and Television Production as Regenerative Strategy in Places Left Behind



Mark McKenna Bournemouth University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Media and Cultural Industries

This timely book examines how screen industry development has emerged as a vital strategy for economic and cultural regeneration in England's post-industrial regions. While Bristol, Manchester, and Liverpool have become established creative hubs, this study shifts focus to three underrepresented areas—The Solent and South Hampshire, Stoke-on-Trent and Staffordshire, and Sunderland—each grappling with decline and persistent underinvestment. Through comparative case studies, the book reveals how these regions are attempting to address these issues despite having only limited resources. It is essential reading for policymakers, creative professionals, researchers, and students.

Nation, Nationalism and Indian Hindi Cinema

Edited by Goutam Karmakar Durban University of Technology, South Africa, Pippa Catterall University of Westminster, UK

This book explores the complex relationship between Indian nationalism and Hindi cinema, examining how film serves as a crucial medium due to its visual narrative power and connections to traditional cultural forms including Parsi theatre, folk traditions, and mythological storytelling. While Hindi films have often been positioned as embodiments of nationalism, they simultaneously present alternative, more inclusive, and liberal conceptions of national belonging. The collection investigates the multifaceted construction, dissemination, and reception of Indian nationalism across four decades of Hindi cinema, from the 1980s through the 2020s.

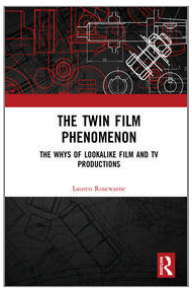
The Twin Film Phenomenon

The Whys of Lookalike Film and TV Productions



Lauren Rosewarne

This book examines the recurring phenomenon in film and television where two strikingly similar productions are released in close succession. Examples include Armageddon (1998) and Deep Impact (1998), A Bug's Life (1998) and Antz (1998), and more recently, the 2019 Fyre Festival documentaries and the 2024 Prince Andrew docudramas. As a valuable resource for students and scholars alike, it enriches discussions on screen media, industrial production, and the cultural forces shaping contemporary entertainment.

There's no good news

Journalism, crisis, and philosophy of praxis

Martin Hirst

There's no good news: Journalism, crisis and a philosophy of praxis is a searing critique of contemporary journalism and its complicity in sustaining capitalist hegemony. At its core, this book argues that journalism, far from being a neutral arbiter of truth, functions as a powerful ideological apparatus—manufacturing consent, distorting reality, and reinforcing dominant class interests.With philosophical rigor and political urgency, There's no good news offers a bold vision for journalism beyond the confines of propaganda, toward a future where truth serves liberation, not power.

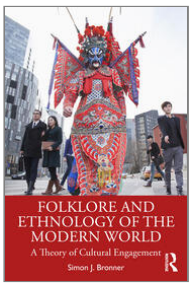
Folklore and Ethnology of the Modern World

A Theory of Cultural Engagement



Simon J. Bronner

In Folklore and Ethnology of the Modern World, Simon Bronner identifies "cultural engagements" that people use to reconcile tradition and modernity, and confront the anxieties of the present by bringing together the past, often represented by tradition, and the immediate digital, unreal future. These socially bounded, symbol-laden practices integrate ritual, play, narrative, and object with the instrumental purpose of confronting paradoxes and tensions of modern life. They provide the basis for a theory of how people cope culturally with change that appears to be outside of their control.

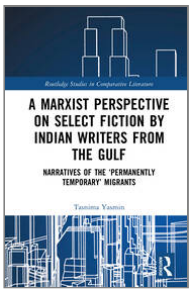
A Marxist Perspective on Select Fiction by Indian Writers from the Gulf

Narratives of the 'Permanently Temporary' Migrants



Tasnima Yasmin

Series: Routledge Studies in Comparative Literature

This book is a critical literary examination of Indian writing from the Gulf through a Marxist lens, exploring the socio-economic struggles of South Asian migrants. It highlights their exploitation under neoliberal capitalism and marginalization based on disillusionment with assumed and guaranteed prosperity. It reveals how systemic oppression and globalization reduces them to a voiceless laboring diaspora trapped in transnational inequality.

Afterlives of the New York School of Poets

An Anthology

Edited by Angela Ball

Afterlives of the New York School of Poets showcases what Angela Ball terms the "New York School diaspora," poems by writers who honor the virtues of the original four New York School poets: Frank O'Hara, John Ashbery, Kenneth Koch, and James Schuyler. These poems are driven by play, wit, the chaos of reality, and the belief that, to paraphrase Frank O'Hara, life is too important to strangle with seriousness.This rigorous but compelling anthology is an invaluable resource for readers, students, teachers and writers of poetry.

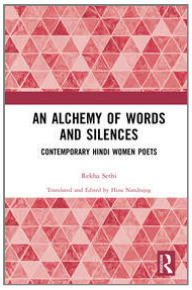
An Alchemy of Words and Silences

Contemporary Hindi Women Poets



Rekha Sethi Indraprastha College, University of Delhi, India

This book explores the works of seven prominent contemporary Hindi women poets from India, showcasing a vibrant landscape of distinct voices—Dalit, Adivasi, urban, rural and lower-middle class. It traces the historical trajectory of women's writing in India highlighting how the new generation of poets builds on the feminist legacy while redefining its idiom for the twenty-first century. Through a close textual reading of Gagan Gill, Katyayani, Anamika, Savita Singh, Neelesh Raghuwanshi, Sushila Takbhoure and Nirmala Putul, the volume analyses how through their language, imagery, and metaphors broaden the horizons of Hindi literature, offering fresh paths for exploration.

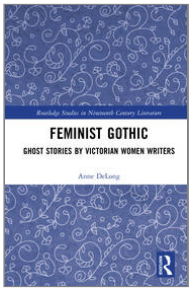
Feminist Gothic

Ghost Stories by Victorian Women Writers



Anne DeLong

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

This examination of thirty-two ghost stories by twenty-one Victorian women writers defines a new genre, feminist Gothic, that utilizes the Gothic structure and its uncanny atmosphere of ambiguity to deploy competing narratives that seek to undermine patriarchy by simultaneously upholding and subverting its dominant myths. Aimed at scholars of feminist literary criticism, Victorian literature, and the Gothic genre, this study combines close readings of primary sources with current scholarship, arranged thematically in chapters that examine women's issues including marriage, children, and property ownership.

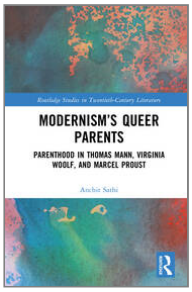
Modernism's Queer Parents

Parenthood in Thomas Mann, Virginia Woolf, and Marcel Proust



Anchit Sathi

Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Literature

This volume offers the first critical examination of how societal pressures compelling individuals towards parenthood are experienced, processed, and enacted by queer characters in selected works by Thomas Mann, Virginia Woolf, and Marcel Proust. The selected texts include Mann's Chaotic World and Childhood Sorrow and Death in Venice, Woolf's Mrs Dalloway and Orlando, and key sections from Proust's In Search of Lost Time. This book argues that Mann, Woolf, and Proust employ a shared repertoire of motifs and narrative strategies to depict queer characters' struggles with the institution of parenthood.

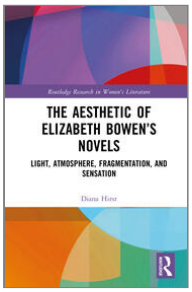
The Aesthetic of Elizabeth Bowen's Novels

Light, Atmosphere, Fragmentation, and Sensation



Diana Hirst

Series: Routledge Research in Women's Literature

This is the first monograph to evaluate Elizabeth Bowen's 'verbal painting' in a variety of genres, and the first to acknowledge the influence of the East Kent landscape in her novels. Using the neologism 'dyslocution' Hirst demonstrates how influences from French syntax and from poetic techniques have contributed to Bowen's fragmented syntax.

The Diary of Dr. John William Polidori, including Related Correspondence and Other Documents

Edited by L. Adam Mekler

This book offers the first modern, critical edition of the diary of John William Polidori (1795-1821). Polidori's diary was first published in 1911 by his nephew William Michael Rossetti, based on the expurgated version of the diary created by Polidori's sister Charlotte. This is an essential text for students and critics of the period, and especially of the Diodati Circle. This comprehensive edition affords modern readers a more objective look at important primary source materials to allow them to develop a more informed opinion about those figures and their writings from this period.

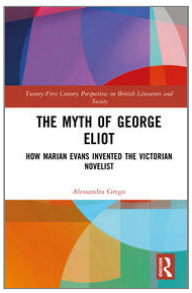
The Myth of George Eliot

How Marian Evans Invented the Victorian Novelist



Alessandra Grego

Series: Twenty-First Century Perspectives on British Literature and Society

"The Myth of George Eliot" shows how Marian Evans understood the power of collective stories to change society, and suggests that her turn to fiction, after ten years as a professional translator, editor and journalist, was motivated by the desire to participate in an ethical revolution to imagine a broader future for the nation.

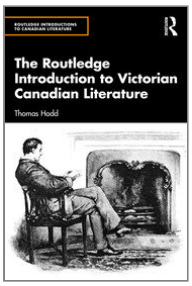
The Routledge Introduction to Victorian Canadian Literature



Thomas Hodd

Series: Routledge Introductions to Canadian Literature

This study is a comprehensive overview of the literature produced in Canada during the reign of Queen Victoria (1837-1901). Focusing on the four main genres – non-fiction, drama, poetry, and prose fiction – this book draws together a rich corpus of notable works in order to illustrate the hybrid nature of the period's literature. It also seeks to demonstrate the many ways in which Victorian-Canadian writers engaged in trans-Atlantic and transnational literary experimentation.

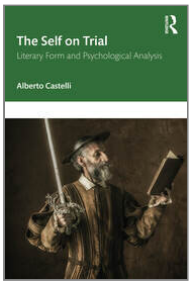
The Self on Trial

Literary Form and Psychological Analysis



Alberto Castelli

The Self on Trial is an inquiry into the self and its pathological behaviors. The author observes 20th-century fiction and studies it through a psychological reading. It is evident that the century has produced self-destructive characters whose behaviors and choices are an ultimate form of consummation — primitive, elementary, and inexplicable.

Theodore Dreiser and the Cultures of Travel

Gary Totten

Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Literature

Theodore Dreiser and the Cultures of Travel examines Dreiser's three published travel narratives, along with his 1916-26 travel diaries for trips to Georgia, New Jersey, California, and Florida, and his impressions of his early days as a journalist in New York, captured in early essays collected in The Color of a Great City (1923). The book not only enhances scholars' understanding of Dreiser's narrative style but also provides new insights into how his perspective on American culture at the turn of the twentieth century was informed by his travel experiences and mobility.

Vernacular Encounters

Politics and Possibilities

Edited by Nishat Zaidi Jamia Millia Islamia, India, Kashish Dua University of Delhi, India

This book offers new insights into the debates of vernacularity, language ideologies, and the decolonial turn. It identifies 'vernacular encounters' as nuanced interactions of languages that are often termed as 'local' with culture and power. Drawing from rich literary and cultural productions across various geopolitical contexts, the book reveals how vernacular expressions serve as powerful vehicles for political negotiation and cultural transformation. It will be useful to researchers of language, literature, linguistics, literary and cultural studies, Indian literature, translation studies, and to those with an interest in South Asian history, culture, politics and society.

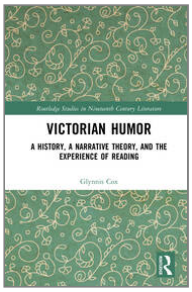
Victorian Humor

A History, A Narrative Theory, and the Experience of Reading



Glynnis Cox

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

Humor and the novel both belong, in important ways, to the nineteenth century. It is in the nineteenth-century that we saw an unprecedented outpouring of novels and short-stories, and it was also in the nineteenth century when 'humor' emerged as the dominant term through which the comic was described. This theory offers the field of literature and Victorian literature a needful update both to how we understand humor and interpret its presence in narrative.

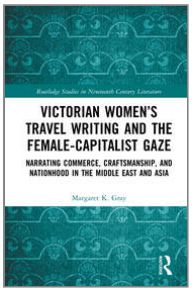
Victorian Women's Travel Writing and the Female-Capitalist Gaze

Narrating Commerce, Craftsmanship, and Nationhood in the Middle East and Asia



Margaret K. Gray

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

Victorian Women's Travel Narratives and the Female-Capitalist Gaze argues that female travellers both informed and expanded upon Victorian debates surrounding the role of art, and art production, as a nexus of political-economic progress and cultural identity. This book is primarily for scholars or postgraduate students of British literature and the histories of art, economics, and empire in the nineteenth century. It would also be of interest for curators and researchers working in the museum and heritage sectors.

Women Staging and Restaging the Nineteenth Century

Great Britain and Beyond

Edited by Laura Monrós-Gaspar , Victoria Puchal-Terol

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

Women Staging and Restaging the Nineteenth Century is the first book to explore overlooked histories of women who filled the theatrical stages of the nineteenth century, dialoguing with contemporary adaptations, reworkings and retellings of these histories in Great Britain and beyond. The women that populate this book—Joanna Baillie, Florence Wilson, Ritsuko Mori, Madame Vestris, Minnie Maddern Fiske, Lolita Chakrabarti, Kip Williams, and others—reveal essential histories of nineteenth-century spectacle that hold significant implications for the roles of gender and chronology in theatre and English studies.

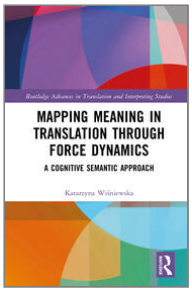
Mapping Meaning in Translation through Force Dynamics



Katarzyna Wiśniewska

Series: Routledge Advances in Translation and Interpreting Studies

Drawing on examples from literary and audiovisual media, this book explores the meaning transfer in translation with the theory of force dynamics as a case in point. The volume investigates how meaning patterns related to force dynamics are retained or transformed in translation. Rooted in Leonard Talmy's cognitive semantics, force dynamics constitutes the faculty of construing the world in terms of entities interacting through force, reflecting his pioneering work within cognitive linguistics on how language encodes conceptual meaning.

The Routledge Handbook of Translanguaging in the Global South

Edited by Kleber Aparecido da Silva , Leketi Makalela

Series: Routledge Handbooks in Applied Linguistics

The Routledge Handbook of Translanguaging in the Global South is a groundbreaking exploration of translanguaging as a decolonial, contextually rooted, and transformative language practice. Unlike conventional volumes that center Western frameworks, this handbook foregrounds indigenous knowledge systems, Southern theories, and the socio-cultural realities of the Global South. It challenges colonial language policies and rigid multilingual paradigms by showcasing how translanguaging can be a driver of educational equity, social justice, and linguistic inclusion.

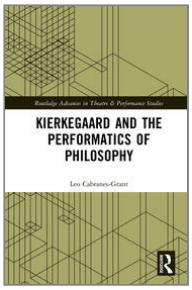
Kierkegaard and the Performatics of Philosophy



Leo Cabranes-Grant

Series: Routledge Advances in Theatre & Performance Studies

The book examines Kierkegaard's use of pseudonyms and dialectical discourse to create a performative philosophy where thinking and doing intertwine. Chapters analyze his insights on actors' conflicted identities, the relationship between behavior and consciousness, and everyday life as scripted performance. The author draws compelling connections between Kierkegaard's 19th-century ideas and modern performance theory concepts developed by Richard Schechner, Diana Taylor, Peggy Phelan, and Rebecca Schneider.

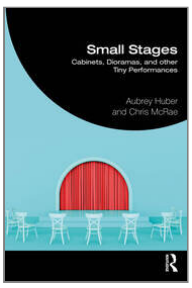
Small Stages

Cabinets, Dioramas, and other Tiny Performances



Aubrey Huber , Chris McRae

Small Stages: Cabinets, Dioramas, and other Tiny Performances is a consideration of small stages as unique and generative sites for creating and presenting performance. The book examines the ways in which small stages are diminutive sites of performance that derive meaningfulness from the size of the performance area. Each chapter considers the embodied functions, performative and affective qualities, and pedagogical implications of these small stages. Ideal for students and scholars of performance studies and theatre, as well as researchers in wider associated fields, such as media studies, communication studies and visual arts.

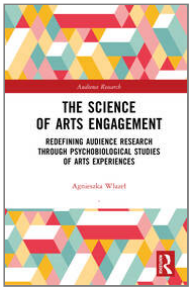
The Science of Arts Engagement

Redefining Audience Research Through Psychobiological Studies of Arts Experiences



Agnieszka Wlazeł

Series: Audience Research

Integrating humanities, natural sciences, and applied research approaches, the book proposes new methods of arts engagement research. It focuses on audience experiences of engagement, branching out engagement from the facilitation of arts involvement and audience development. The book presents a mixed-methods study of the signs of engagement in audience physiology (heart rate and skin conductance), audience reflections and contextual influence of the artworks. The exploration of the dynamics of audience experiences during two virtual reality art projects demonstrates engagement processes as adaptable.

Handel's Grand Concertos Opus 6

Shifts in Compositional Perspectives

Vadym Rakochi

Series: Routledge Research in Music

This book offers an analysis of Handel's Twelve Grand Concertos, Op. 6, an element of Handel's repertoire which has remained relatively understudied. Bringing together an analytical approach to the concertos with their historical context, the author shows how studying these concertos offers new insights into Handel's innovative and deeply individual compositional techniques, reframing modern understanding of Handel as a composer. Shedding new light on Handel's Grand Concertos, on Handel as a composer, and the history of the concerto, this book is relevant to Handel scholars, musicologists, music theorists and all those with a serious interest in Handel and eighteenth-century music.

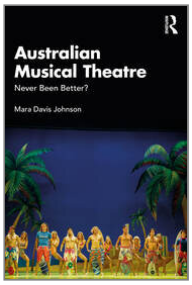
Australian Musical Theatre

Never Been Better?



Mara Davis Johnson University of Wollongong, Australia

Australian Musical Theatre: Never Been Better? is the first sustained scholarly analysis of the Australian musical in the twenty-first century. In the past, the Australian musical has been much maligned: plagued by the sceptre of 'The Great Australian Musical,' and dogged by recurring concerns about the content and quality of the genre. In this book, Johnson assesses these concerns and argues that they are unfounded. This makes for an accessible, wide-ranging discussion that will appeal to scholars in diverse fields. The book will be an essential resource for scholars and students of musical theatre, theatre and performance studies, and Australian cultural studies and history.

Indeterminacy, the I Ching, and John Cage

A New Design Method for Landscape Architecture

Barry R. Morse

The creative use of indeterminacy, i.e., "chance," is an often overlooked design opportunity despite the universality of change in art, nature, science, and life. How can "chance," a seemingly capricious phenomenon, be made to work for someone? One controlled use of chance is through the Chinese I Ching "chance operations" method of composer and artist John Cage (1912–1992). This book addresses the questions of how one might approach using this method in landscape architectural design, what the outcome of such an indeterminate design would be, and whether or not it could lead to a viable constructed landscape.

Michael Jackson's Radical Aesthetic

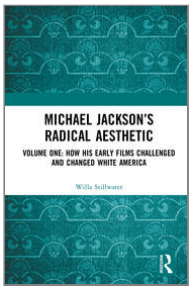
Volume One: How His Early Films Challenged and Changed White America



Willa Stillwater

This two-volume work encourages students, fans, and scholars to take an expansive view of Michael Jackson's art. Focusing on his films it demonstrates the depth and scope of his art and its far-reaching cultural significance. Specifically, it demonstrates how Jackson engaged in a sophisticated process of telling, untelling, and retelling entrenched cultural narratives that perpetuate prejudice, and how he modified affective responses to racial signifiers and other marks of difference. In this way, Jackson confronted prejudice more profoundly than any other American artist in recent memory.

Nordic Noise

Hip Hop, Culture, and Community in Northern Europe

Edited by Susan Lindholm , Kristine Ringsager

Series: Ashgate Popular and Folk Music Series

Based on empirical research on hip-hop cultures, scenes, and artists in the Nordic countries, this book provides new perspectives on how hip-hop has been intertwined with wider societal and political contexts and discussions. This book sets out to make visible and discuss the ways in which hip-hop culture has developed into a platform used by artists to address inequalities based on gender, class and ethnicity/race, negotiate experiences of exclusion and otherness and challenge dominant cultural norms. The empirical material analysed by the authors consists of lyrics, videos, (social) media, interviews and ethnographic fieldwork.

Pub Rock in the UK and Australia

From the 1970s to the Twenty-First Century

Edited by Andy Bennett Griffith University, Queensland, Australia, Jon Stratton

Series: Ashgate Popular and Folk Music Series

This book critically examines two versions of the genre identified as pub rock as they evolved in the UK and Australia. Both evolved in the communal spaces of pubs and both had their heyday in the mid-to-late 1970s. In the UK pub rock is often misleadingly viewed as the insipid music which was violently replaced by the uproarious and rebellious punk sounds of Sex Pistols, the Clash, the Slits and the other do-it-yourself groups of 1977 and later. In Australia, pub rock, played by groups including Billy Thorpe and the Aztecs, the Angels and Rose Tattoo, formed the basis for the mainstream guitar rock sound that dominated Australian popular music through the 1980s and into the 1990s.

Becoming a Responsive Mathematics Teacher

Centering Student Thinking in K–8 Classrooms

Caroline Ebby University of Pennsylvania, USA., Brittany Hess , Lindsay Goldsmith-Markey , Lizzy Pecora , Jennifer Valerio , Joy Anderson Davis

This resource presents a responsive mathematics teaching model for elementary and middle grades, developed through the RMT project. It equips educators with tools to enhance instruction and increase equity for underrepresented students. Chapters combine research-based practices with real examples to show how this model can be implemented in actual schools. Topics include the components of a responsive mathematics lesson, lesson planning guidance, and classroom community building. Whether you are a teacher, educator, or leader, this book helps reframe responsibilities, challenge math norms, empower student problem-solving, and cultivate joy in mathematics teaching and learning.

Teacher Autonomy

Where Has It Gone and Why We Need It Back

Sophie Smith-Tong

Teacher Autonomy is a compelling exploration of the erosion of teacher independence in an era dominated by high-stakes accountability, rigid educational frameworks, and a growing distrust of educators. Through the voices of educators, including teachers, teaching assistants, senior leaders, and early years practitioners, this book paints a vivid picture of the challenges faced by those on the frontlines of education. This book is a must-read for teachers, school leaders, and policymakers at any stage of their career, offering valuable insights into how to rekindle meaningful connections at the core of teaching, as well as navigate change in the current educational landscape.

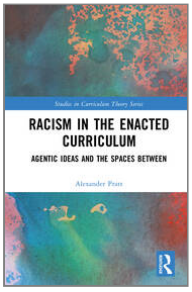
Racism in the Enacted Curriculum

Agentic Ideas and the Spaces Between



Alexander Pratt University of Memphis, USA

Series: Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

Racism in the Enacted Curriculum chronicles the work of experienced and skilled antiracist educators to explore why even the best-intentioned curricula for resisting racism often fall short. The book highlights the challenges faced by teachers working to implement antiracist curriculum nationwide. To meet these challenges, the author develops a theory rooted in posthumanist and new materialist thought, which understands the role of ideas as agential forces in and of themselves. This forward-thinking and timely volume will appeal to researchers and educators interested in modern curriculum theory, posthumanism, teacher education, antiracism, and qualitative research methodology.

Closeness in Student-Teacher Relationships

Centering Children's Perspectives on Connection in the Classroom

Clio Stearns

This book centers children's perspectives on closeness in the classroom while giving teachers questions they can consider toward cultivating more mutually affirming social and emotional dynamics. Despite many educators' best efforts, today's norms around relationship development can be excessively adult-first and inattentive to the wishes and needs of school-age children. Using firsthand observations and interviews in schools, relevant autobiographical perspectives, and a thorough yet accessible evidence base, Clio Stearns prepares in-service teachers to explore their own vulnerabilities and challenge the prevailing notions of adulthood as a fixed state of knowledge and authority.

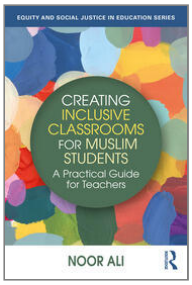
Creating Inclusive Classrooms for Muslim Students

A Practical Guide for Teachers



Noor Ali

Series: Equity and Social Justice in Education Series

Creating Inclusive Classrooms for Muslim Students is the first comprehensive resource specifically designed to help K-12 educators understand and address the unique educational experiences of Muslim students. Drawing on Muslim Critical Theory, this book translates theoretical concepts into immediately actionable classroom strategies. Each chapter provides reflective practice exercises, concrete implementation strategies, and comprehensive resource lists. Readers will gain specific tools to recognize anti-Muslim bias in curriculum materials, create culturally responsive classroom practices, support students with visible religious identities, and advocate for systemic change.

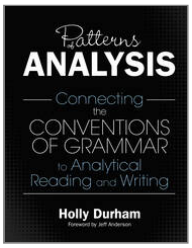
Patterns of Analysis

Connecting the Conventions of Grammar to Analytical Reading and Writing



Holly Durham

In today's rapidly changing world, the ability to think critically and analyze complex texts is more essential than ever. Yet, too often, students struggle to bridge the gap between creative expression and analytical rigor. Patterns of Analysis provides a revolutionary approach to teaching analytical reading and writing—one that seamlessly integrates grammar and literary analysis to empower students to engage deeply with texts across genres. Perfect for English educators, curriculum designers, and anyone invested in fostering analytical thinkers, this book is more than a teaching framework—it's an invitation for students to see the world through a critical, thoughtful lens.

Patterns of Wonder en español

Inviting Emergent Bilingual Writers to Play with the Conventions of Spanish, PreK-1

Caroline Sweet , Whitney La Rocca , Jeff Anderson

It's no secret that our youngest bilingual writers thrive in classrooms filled with conversation, inquiry, play and wonder, but how can we invite then into the conventions of the Spanish language, engage them in authentic writing experiences, and lean into their natural curiosity around what writers do? Grounded in discovery, play, conversation, and most of all, wonder, Patterns of Wonder en español brings the authors' excitement for inquiry and writing instruction to the ways we support our youngest bilingual writers.

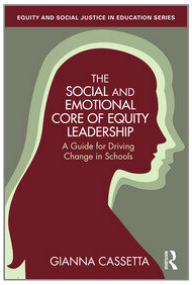
The Social and Emotional Core of Equity Leadership

A Guide for Driving Change in Schools



Gianna Cassetta

Series: Equity and Social Justice in Education Series

The Social and Emotional Core of Equity Leadership is a practical guide for educational leaders committed to creating inclusive schools where all students feel a sense of belonging. Challenging traditional approaches to social and emotional learning (SEL), this book argues that adult SEL must be rooted in equity and justice, not compliance or neutrality. Through vivid case studies, research-informed frameworks, and a structured reflection tool, readers explore how inner work must fuel outer work. Written for principals, district leaders, and school leadership teams, this book is ideal for those navigating real-world pressures while striving to lead with clarity and conscience.

Universities and the Purpose of Higher Education

Expansion and Development in Post-War Britain

Josh Patel

Series: Research into Higher Education

This thought-provoking book addresses the persistent anxieties surrounding the purpose and direction of higher education, offering a nuanced historical perspective on its transformation. Using Cold War Britain as a lens, the book challenges the prevailing narrative that marketisation was an external imposition, revealing instead how the dynamic priorities of social democratic higher education inadvertently paved the way for their own supersession. This is essential reading for students, academics, policymakers, and anyone seeking to understand the moral principles underpinning higher education and their influence on its future.

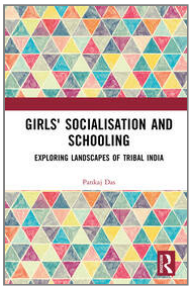
Girls' Socialisation and Schooling

Exploring Landscapes of Tribal India



Pankaj Das University of Allahabad, India

This book delves into the socialisation process in the distinctive spheres of the family, community, and school, which has an unfavourable impact on girls' schooling and their 'school life expectancy' in India. Through extensive fieldwork in selected tribal, rural areas in the Indian State of Odisha, it carefully explores various dimensions of the disempowering process of socialisation on schooling and dropping out among tribal, other backward classes, and scheduled caste girls. This book will be useful to scholars of education, gender studies, sociology, anthropology, development studies, policymakers, and others interested in promoting gender equality in education.

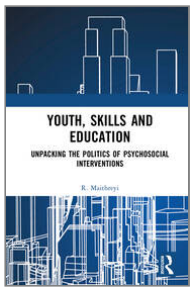
Youth, Skills and Education

Unpacking the Politics of Psychosocial Interventions



R. Maithreyi Karnataka Health Promotion Trust, India

This book examines psycho-educational interventions for marginalized youth, tracing their spread from Global North to South. Using India's Life Skills Education as a case study, it reveals how these programs position youth as entrepreneurial citizens within education's neoliberalization, promoting self-responsibility despite structural disadvantages. Implementation shows socio-cultural disconnects and youth resistance to neoliberal agendas. The book offers alternative approaches for empowering Global South youth, providing insights for educators, policymakers, and researchers seeking to understand these programs' impact on young lives.

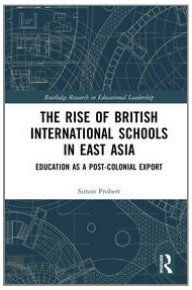
The Rise of British International Schools in East Asia

Education as a Post-Colonial Export



Simon Probert

Series: Routledge Research in Educational Leadership

This book examines reasons for the ongoing growth of British Schools in Asia, and what the appeal of British Education tells us about the past, present and future directions of the sector. Areas such as how to frame the school culture between a British and Asian context, what British values look like in an Asian cultural context, the importance of being explicit about identity and belonging, and the challenges around staffing and leadership more generally are explored. This book will appeal to researchers and academics focused on International Schools, particularly British International Schools in East Asia, as well as those examining K12 education in the post-colonial space.

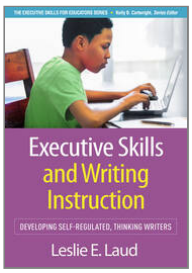
Executive Skills and Writing Instruction

Developing Self-Regulated, Thinking Writers



Leslie E. Laud

Students learn to write well by developing fundamental literacy skills--and also by knowing how to get started, stay on track, and persist toward goals. From leading science-of-writing expert Leslie E. Laud, this is the first book that helps educators harness the power of executive skills in evidence-based writing instruction. Laud shows how self-regulation supports learning and growth in every step of the writing process, from planning to drafting, editing, and revising. The book provides a clear roadmap and practical strategies for teaching and scaffolding both writing skills and executive skills. It includes sample lessons, extended examples, and reproducible/downloadable tools.

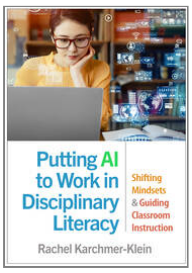
Putting AI to Work in Disciplinary Literacy

Shifting Mindsets and Guiding Classroom Instruction



Rachel Karchmer-Klein University of Delaware, United States

Can generative AI support--not supplant--students' reading, writing, critical thinking, and problem-solving skills? This practical, literacy-centered guide shows how tools like ChatGPT and Copilot can be integrated into secondary instruction without compromising academic rigor or student voice. Grounded in the principles of disciplinary literacy, the book helps teachers shift their mindsets, explore ethical dilemmas, and design content-rich lessons that keep student thinking at the center. With ready-to-use lesson plans, classroom vignettes, Try It Out activities, discussion prompts, and reproducible planning forms, this resource empowers educators to reimagine learning in the age of AI.

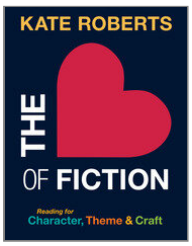
The Heart of Fiction

Reading for Character, Theme and Craft



Kate Roberts

Reading fiction is at the heart of our classrooms. It's what we love. It's what we want our students to love—whether whole class novels, book club texts, or independent choices. But to love fiction, kids need to be able to and hopefully want to read without our constant guidance and instruction. How can we coach students towards more proficient, independent practice when they read? The Heart of Fiction is about more than skill building. It's also about the conditions we can set up in our teaching to make this work stick, and for our students to truly grow into themselves as readers. It's about the lifeblood of our classrooms.

Contesting Autocratisation

Actors and Institutions of Democratic Resistance in a Global Perspective

Edited by Bilge Yabanci , Karabekir Akkoyunlu , Kerem Öktem

Series: ThirdWorlds

While authoritarianism continues to gain ground globally, this book offers a global and nuanced perspective into how, when and where autocratization may be contested and sometimes reversed. Drawing on rich case studies from across Africa, Asia, Latin America, and Southeastern Europe, the chapters map the actors and institutions of resistance, ranging from political parties and bureaucrats to social movements and transnational alliances. The book adopts a dynamic, process-driven approach, considering the conditions under which resistance emerges, adapts, and persists even in shrinking civic and political spaces.

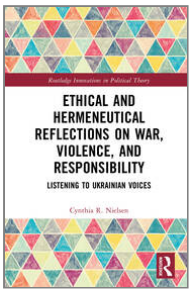
Ethical and Hermeneutical Reflections on War, Violence, and Responsibility

Listening to Ukrainian Voices



Cynthia R. Nielsen

Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

Ethical and Hermeneutical Reflections on War, Violence, and Responsibility: Listening to Ukrainian Voices demonstrates that Russia is not only carrying out an unjust war of aggression against Ukraine but also exposes how its use of (pseudo)History, gender narratives, information warfare, religious discourses, and other forms of propaganda have laid the groundwork for the present war and function to maintain it. Utilizing hermeneutical, moral, and political philosophy and discourse analysis to explain Russia's imperial identity, this book provides a clearer picture of how war in the 21st century impacts communities, culture, language, the information sphere, and the environment.

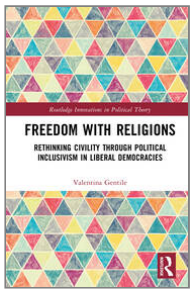
Freedom With Religions

Rethinking Civility through Political Inclusivism in Liberal Democracies



Valentina Gentile

Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

Freedom with Religions offers a new interpretation of Rawls's political liberalism, aiming to reconcile this framework with the profound forms of religious pluralism that characterize contemporary democracies. At the heart of this approach lies political inclusivism, and by building on this foundation the book introduces the notion of a culture of civility, reinterpreting Rawls' theory and articulating a broader, more inclusive vision of the liberal democratic ethos. This book will be of particular interest to postgraduate students and scholars in political theory, philosophy, and sociology of religion.

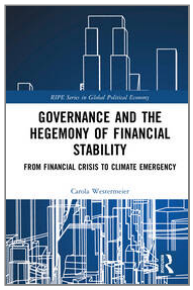
Governance and the Hegemony of Financial Stability

From Financial Crisis to Climate Emergency



Carola Westermeier

Series: RIPE Series in Global Political Economy

Governance and the Hegemony of Financial Stability: From Financial Crisis to Climate Emergency explains how the handling of the Global Financial Crisis has redefined the relations of politics and financial markets and how the then established hegemony of financial stability still dominates today's responses to today's challenges, particularly climate change.The book argues that within the years of crisis management a hegemony of financial governance evolved that accepts the financial system as being intrinsically crisis-laden and potentially disastrous for broader notions of welfare and social security.

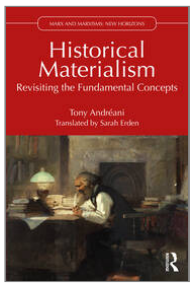
Historical Materialism

Revisiting the Fundamental Concepts



Tony Andréani University of Paris 8, France

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

First published in French, this book summarises decades of research on Karl Marx's theory of historical materialism. Written to further debate among scholars and beyond, Andréani develops the fundamental concepts of the Marxist theory of history as they apply to any society, particularly the so-called "economic" concepts, in their opposition to neo-classical theory and to reductive readings common among Marxist authors. The publication of Matérialisme Historique: Les concepts fondamentaux revisités (Paris: l'Harmattan, 2022) in English will be crucial to Anglophone audiences wanting to experience Andréani's original vision on the basic concepts of historical materialism.

Monetary Policy and Inequality

The Pasinetti Index

Edited by Sylvio Kappes , Louis-Philippe Rochon Laurentian University, Canada

This book explores the relationship between monetary policy and income (and wealth) distribution, a growing area of research in post-Keynesian and heterodox economics today. The interest actually goes back at least to Keynes, who in his Tract on Monetary Reform, discusses the effects of interest rates on income distribution — what has been called a 'rentier-first' monetary policy. This led Keynes, in the General Theory, to advocate for what he calls 'the euthanasia of the rentier.'

New Gramscian Paths

Guido Liguori

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

Guido Liguori's book Nuovi sentieri gramsciani is at the cutting edge of Gramscian scholarship. Now available in English, this book offers biographical, philological, and interpretative advancements in Antonio Gramsci's political thought to provide new perspectives on key moments in his life and thought. Focusing on his pre-prison years, Liguori historically reconstructs and contextualises Gramsci's ideas within the broader political, social, ideological, and philosophical landscape of his time. Guido Liguori's writing style is both accessible and rigorous making New Gramscian Paths suitable not only for specialists but also for a broader audience interested in Gramsci.

The Past as Presence

How the Everyday is Remaking International Relations in South Asia

Edited by Jayashree Vivekanandan

This book explores South Asia's postcolonial politics through the lens of circulatory networks—of objects, people, and ideas—as the region navigated pivotal historical junctures. The contributors reexamine epochal moments in South Asia's international relations, including the Second World War, the 1947 Partition, and the 1971 Liberation War, drawing insights from social history, memory studies, and popular discourses. The volume demonstrates how practices of remembering, forgetting and commemorating are intrinsic to the region's ongoing identity formation.

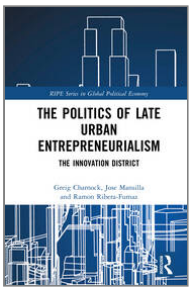
The Politics of Late Urban Entrepreneurialism

The Innovation District



Greig Charnock , Jose Mansilla University of Barcelona, Spain, Ramon Ribera-Fumaz Open University of Catalonia, Spain

Series: RIPE Series in Global Political Economy

The Politics of Late Urban Entrepreneurialism provides a critical examination of how innovation district transformation in Barcelona has led to periodic crisis and an overproduction of commercial real estate alongside a chronic housing shortage, gentrification, touristification, and a growth in low quality employment. With its focus on the historical development of global capitalism and the retention of a narrow repertoire of entrepreneurial approaches toward urban governance, this book will be of great interest to scholars and students researching globalisation and urbanisation.

The Return of the Common Good

The Postliberal Project Left and Right

Stefan Borg

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

In this book, Stefan Borg argues that postliberalism advances a distinct critique of liberalism, as well as an emphasis on the common good as a corrective to the perceived shortcomings of liberalism. A work of contemporary intellectual history, Borg re-creates the birth of postliberalism, compares both British and American strands of postliberal thinking and reconstructs postliberalism across disciplines. Engaging and thought-provoking, The Return of the Common Good: The Postliberal Project Left and Right is suitable for a broad set of readers and an invaluable guide to further debates on liberalism and populism.

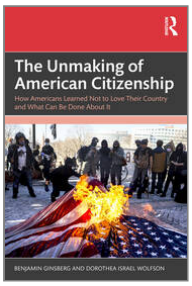
The Unmaking of American Citizenship

How Americans Learned Not to Love Their Country and What Can Be Done About It



Benjamin Ginsberg , Dorothea Israel Wolfson

This book explores the ideologies and educational and cultural trends that have alienated Americans from their own country and offers a guide to the restoration of American citizenship. The authors examine the genealogy of ideologies that are leading to a decline in American citizenship, illuminate historical trends in both K-12 learning and higher education and critique the role that various thinkers on both the Left and the Right have played in unravelling civic and political bonds. Applying the lens of American political theory and development, this book will be of interest to students, educators, policy makers and activists interested in citizenship and civic education.

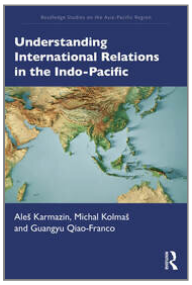
Understanding International Relations in the Indo-Pacific



Aleš Karmazin , Michal Kolmaš , Guangyu Qiao-Franco

Series: Routledge Studies on the Asia-Pacific Region

Karmazin, Kolmaš, and Qiao-Franco deconstruct the concept of the Indo-Pacific and offer a timely, comparative, and multidimensional exploration of the region's international relations. Addressing fundamental academic questions regarding the viability of the Indo-Pacific as a regional conception, this book examines whether the Indo-Pacific is a true regional community or a strategic invention driven by global rivalries and geopolitical interests. An essential read for students, scholars, and practitioners of international affairs who seek to make sense of one of the world's most dynamic and contested regions.

Vernacular Security Studies

Concepts, Cases and Critiques

Edited by Lee Jarvis , Michael Lister Oxford Brookes University, UK, Akinyemi Oyawale

Series: Interventions

This book covers new conceptual, methodological, and empirical issues that will progress the debates on Vernacular Security Studies (VSS) and the value of studying ordinary articulations of (in)security. Bringing together established and emerging scholars, it offers a timely and much needed engagement with this explicitly critical – and increasingly prominent – framework in security research. Demonstrating its value in different geographical, thematic, and historical contexts these experts consider the impact of VSS on a range of topical issues including multi-species relations, decolonial/postcolonial approaches to security, migration, borders, and cities.

Crafting India's Skill Ecology

Reproductions, Recalibrations, and Reimaginations

Edited by Saikat Maitra , Sebastian Schwecke

Series: Politics and Society in India and the Global South

This volume traces how the discourse of skill evolved in colonial and postcolonial India, from the mid-nineteenth century to the present neoliberal era. It introduces the concept of skill ecology to capture the broader political, economic, and social environment within which skills emerge, transform, and acquire meaning. Skill is examined here not merely as a technical attribute but as a historically contingent category, shaped by state policy, capitalist ideologies, and hierarchies of power.

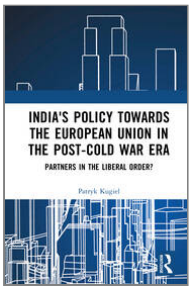
India's Policy Towards the European Union in the Post-Cold War Era

Partners in the Liberal Order?



Patryk Kugiel

This book traces New Delhi's engagement with the EU from economic pragmatism to strategic partnership. Analyzing political dialogues, trade and security cooperation since 1991, it shows how India recognized the EU's collective global governance weight beyond bilateral European ties. The study reveals convergence points between Brussels' institutional influence and Delhi's ambitions while explaining cooperation limitations in the liberal order. Valuable for scholars of international institutions, comparative regionalism, India's strategy, and policymakers working on EU-India coordination.

Market Economists Beyond the West

The Agents of Peripheral Liberalism, 1970-2020

Edited by Tobias Rupprecht

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Economics

This book offers a survey of ideas and practices of economic liberalism beyond Western Europe and North America. It traces the intellectual development and political agency of pro-market economists in Eastern Europe, East Asia, Latin America, the Middle East, and West Africa, from the 1970s onwards. Offering a new approach to the study of liberal ideas outside the West, the book will be of interest to academics cutting across disciplinary boundaries, including historians of (the marketisation of) state socialism, but also area specialists on Asia, Eastern Europe and the Global South.

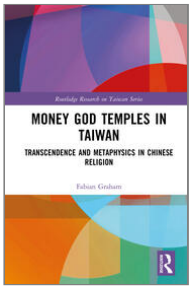
Money God Temples in Taiwan

Transcendence and Metaphysics in Chinese Religion



Fabian Graham

Series: Routledge Research on Taiwan Series

This book traces the history and development of Taiwan's new money god tradition, where, by borrowing a small sum of blessed 'fortune money' and returning it with interest within a year, a temple's deity may intervene in the recipient's life, bringing them unearned good luck and good fortune. This will be a valuable resource for students and scholars of Chinese religion and Taiwanese culture, as well as those with an interest in East Asian philosophy and religion.

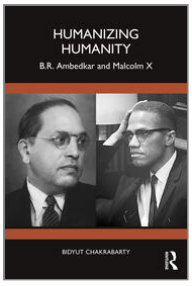
Opposition and Challenges

B.R. Ambedkar and Malcolm X



Bidyut Chakrabarty University of Delhi, India

This book traces the political lives and ideas of B.R. Ambedkar and Malcolm X, and their struggles against caste and racial discrimination to present a unique East meets West subaltern history of the twentieth century. Although the two came from very different backgrounds, their worldviews have many overlaps, shaped by their experiences of oppression, institutional violence, marginalisation and racism. This book explores their parallel ideologies and the lasting impact of their legacy on civil rights discourse across the world. It will be of interest to researchers and scholars of race, caste and discrimination studies, history, African-American studies and South Asian studies.

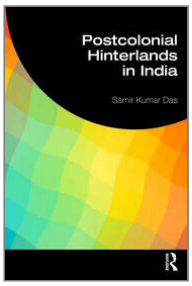
India's Postcolonial Hinterlands



Samir Kumar Das

This volume explores governance, identity, and power dynamics in India's northeast, challenging conventional post-colonial narratives by showing how colonial departures created complex continuities rather than clean breaks. It introduces the concept of 'postcolonial hinterlands' as a framework for understanding spaces and identities outside dominant national constructs. The volume examines how interactions between marginalized identities and the nation-state model create unique emplaced spaces, forming the basis for broader inquiries.

Reimagining Institutions

Collaborative Pathways to Social Development in India

Edited by Pushpinder Puniha , Aarushi Jain Policy Director, Bharti Institute of Public Policy, ISB, India

Series: Innovations, Practice and the Future of Public Policy in India

This book unpacks the complexities of social development in India, focusing on the institutional bottlenecks that hinder effective policy implementation. While governments and organizations design ambitious policies for economic growth, human capital development, education, agriculture and social welfare, their impact is often diluted due to governance inefficiencies, bureaucratic inertia, and weak last-mile service delivery.

Remembrance, Forgetting and Utterance

Rethinking the Politics of Memory in South Asia

Edited by Isha Dubey

This volume explores memory studies beyond Western frameworks, examining how religion, caste, class, and colonialism shape collective remembrance in South Asia. The essays challenge existing conceptual frameworks by questioning how these factors influence national histories, what silences exist, and how "difficult pasts" are remembered outside state memorials. The work steers discussions beyond the 1947 Partition as the primary analytical lens, offering fresh perspectives on remembrance and forgetting in the region.

Rice Policies of the Kingdom of Thailand, 1932 - 1960

Edited by Pak Nung Wong , Suchitra Chongstitvatana , Paul Khiatani

This historical study examines Thailand's rice policies from 1932-1960 during the Great Depression and WWII. It analyzes government production, trading, and pricing strategies that initially benefited the economy but ultimately faltered. The book shows how expanding planting areas rather than developing agricultural technology led to declining production and farmers' economic hardships. Rice Policies of the Kingdom of Thailand, 1932-1960 offers valuable insights for historians, researchers, students, and policymakers in Southeast Asian studies, international history, political economy, security studies, and public policy.

Shared Spaces

Jews and Interethnic Encounters in Central Asia and the Caucasus, 19th–20th Centuries

Edited by Zeev Levin

Series: Central Asian Studies

This book explores a little-known but richly layered history of Jewish communities in one of the world's most diverse and dynamic regions. Spanning over a millennium, the Jewish presence in Central Asia and the Caucasus has often been overshadowed by broader imperial, colonial, and Soviet narratives. This groundbreaking collection sheds new light on how Jews—Bukharan, Mountain, Georgian, and Ashkenazi—lived, worked, and interacted with their Muslim and Christian neighbours across shifting political regimes.

Bidyut Chakrabarty Delhi University, India

This book examines Swami Vivekananda's multifaceted ideational visions, showing how they merged Indian and Western intellectual traditions. It explores his relationship with colleagues of Ramakrishna Paramhamsa who held different perspectives. Though spiritually mentored by Ramakrishna, Vivekananda uniquely reshaped spiritualism along humanist rather than strictly religious lines, distinguishing him from other followers who embraced conservative Hindu ideologies. The book demonstrates how historical processes differently influence individuals' politico-ideological priorities. This volume will interest scholars in South Asian studies, politics, and modern Indian history.

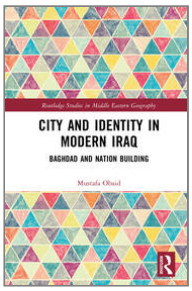
City and Identity in Modern Iraq

Baghdad and Nation Building



Mustafa Obaid

Series: Routledge Studies in Middle Eastern Geography

City and Identity in Modern Iraq examines the role of Baghdad in the process of shaping collective identity and analyzing how different visions of citizenship have changed the face of the city. Since the establishment of the modern state in 1921, the capital city, was central to questions of belonging and the country's social stability.The book traces Baghdad's evolution from being a "melting pot" for all Iraqis to becoming epicenter of division after 2003. The focus is on the era following the American occupation and how the city regained its role in constructing inclusive visions of nationality in recent years.

Palestine and the Western Academe

Fighting the Exception, Defending Epistemic Justice

Edited by Walaa Alqaisiya , Nicola Perugini

Palestine and the Western Academe emerges from a collective sense of political and intellectual urgency in response to mounting repression against scholars and students working on and studying Palestine. While attacks on academic freedom and freedom of speech in Western academia have intensified, they have been met with new forms of resistance and disobedience, bolstered by coalitional anti-racist and anti-capitalist solidarities extending from Palestine globally. This edited volume brings together significant contributions from scholars and students offering fresh approaches to the epistemic and political struggles surrounding Palestine.

The Imperialist Question in Middle East and North Africa

Edited by Matteo Capasso , Ali Kadri

This book reveals how today's devastating conflicts across Gaza, Syria, and the broader Middle East represent imperialism in its most destructive form. Leading Area Studies scholars move beyond fragmented analyses to examine how US-led imperial power functions as a comprehensive system—from Tunisia's financial dependency to the weaponization of feminist discourse in justifying violence. Through diverse case studies spanning North Africa to the Arabian Peninsula, the authors illuminate how military interventions, financial domination, and ideological warfare work in concert to preserve Western hegemony.

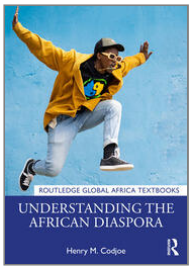
Understanding the African Diaspora



Henry M. Codjoe

Series: Routledge Global Africa Textbooks

Understanding the African Diaspora offers a clear and engaging introduction to the global movements, histories, and cultural experiences of African and African-descended peoples, from ancient times to the present. The book traces the wide-reaching impact of the African diaspora, shaped by both forced and voluntary migrations, including the transatlantic slave trade, colonialism, and more recent waves of movement. It explores how African-descended communities have contributed to and reshaped societies across the Americas, Europe, the Middle East, and Asia, while maintaining enduring ties to the African continent.

African Middle Classes and Social Protest

Edited by Antje Daniel , Henning Melber , Florian Stoll

This book explores class formation and political consciousness in contemporary Africa. It challenges prevailing narratives by examining the nuanced emergence of middle-class identities across Africa since the early 2000s. Through meticulously researched case studies spanning multiple countries, contributors from sociology, anthropology, and political science reveal the fragile and contradictory nature of middle-class formation in Africa. The volume interrogates how factors beyond economic criteria—including education, consumption patterns, cultural capital, and political engagement—shape class identity and social movements.

African Non-Military Conflict Intervention Practices

Edited by Antonia Witt , Christof Hartmann , Ulf Engel
University of Leipzig, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in Peace, Conflict and Security in Africa

Ever since the African Peace and Security Architecture was initiated in the early 2000s, political and research interest has tended to focus on its military components, rather than the more quantitatively important non-military interventions. The book considers the variation and dynamics of civil society and the role of African special envoys in non-military interventions across time and space, and their intended or unintended effects. This timely new assessment of African non-military conflict interventions will be an important read for peacebuilding practitioners and think tanks, as well as researchers working across African international relations, peace, and conflict studies.

African Understandings of Chinese Involvement

Power, Practices, and Prospects

Edited by Sabella O. Abidde , Dramane G. Thiombiano

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

This book brings together leading African scholars to consider China's impact on Africa's political, economic, cultural, environmental, and social spaces. China's power and influence on the African continent has increased exponentially in recent decades, providing a range of political and economic goods and services. African governments have opened their markets to Chinese goods and services, and in turn allowed China easy access to their raw materials. Providing an important critical evaluation of China's programs and projects in Africa, this book will be an important resource for researchers of Africa-China relations, and of global international relations more broadly.

Cheikh Anta Diop's Transdisciplinary Legacy

Impacts on Contemporary Africology

Edited by Victor Oguejiofor Okafor

Series: Routledge Studies in African Philosophy

This book highlights the transdisciplinary legacy of Cheikh Anta Diop's epistemology, demonstrating its continuing impact on contemporary Africology, which is also known as Black Studies. In the book, the contributors consider how Diopian transdisciplinary epistemic approaches continue to combat racial bias and restore the global historical and cultural significance of Africa. Highlighting the significance of Africa's usable past as outlined by Diop, this book is an important read for researchers across African Studies, Africology, Black Studies, History, World Civilizations, Intercultural Studies, Africa-focused Think Tanks, and policy makers across the African world.

Chinese Development Aid and Africa

What, How, and Why

Edited by Elling Tjønneland

Series: Routledge Studies in African Development

This book investigates China's evolving development aid within Africa, considering how it compares with and interacts with trends and shifts in the global aid system and aid from traditional Western donor countries. It examines the role of Chinese aid within China's broader political, economic and development engagement on the continent. The book also draws on several case studies, to consider how Chinese development assistance is being used in practice. Bringing together authors from the West, China, and Africa, this book will be an important read for development practitioners and researchers working on global development, China-Africa relations, and African studies.

Critiquing Generative AI in Africa's Media Ecosystems

Edited by Lungile A. Tshuma , Trust Matsilele

Series: Routledge African Media, Culture and Communication Studies

This book takes a critical approach to the rise of Artificial Intelligence (AI) within the media and communication landscape. The birth of AI has ignited debates about its benefits to lower income countries, with some highlighting its potential to advance businesses and grow economies. However, this book argues that AI tools have been produced to serve Western needs, and that instead there is a need for countries in Africa to have home grown solutions defined by local values. At a time when generative AI is threatening to shape the future of media and communication around the world, this book is a vital contribution to debates within critical data studies and African media studies.

Customary Nationalism in Crisis

Protest, Identity and Politics in eSwatini

Edited by Vito Laterza , Casey Golomski

This book examines the aftermath of eSwatini's fiftieth anniversary of independence and the COVID-19 pandemic, when many citizens of this last absolute monarchy in Africa took to their communities in unprecedented protests for democratic reform. For raising their voices, they were met with brutal police violence. Customary Nationalism in Crisis offers snapshots of life in the Kingdom leading up to and in the aftermath of this epic moment, providing lessons to the world on the power of the government to shape our lives through the guise of custom and tradition and the power of ordinary people to resist this.

Ethiopia's Insecurity Complex

Protest, Transition, and War

Edited by Yonas Tariku , Fana Gebresenbet

Series: Routledge Studies in Peace, Conflict and Security in Africa

Ethiopia has been going through the most tumultuous period in its recent history, with conflict and civil war killing tens of thousands and leaving millions displaced. This book investigates the escalation and making of the current crises in Ethiopia, starting with the root causes of the protests (2015-2018), the bumpy transition (2018-2021), the civil war in the North (Nov 2020-Nov 2022), and ongoing violence in Amhara and Oromia. Providing fresh conceptual and analytical perspectives on the unfolding situation, the book will be an important read for researchers, policy makers, and practitioners of governance, development and security issues in Ethiopia and the Horn of Africa.

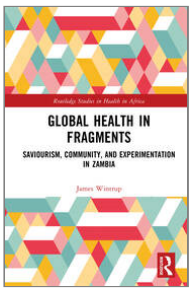
Global Health in Fragments

Saviourism, Community, and Experimentation in Zambia



James Wintrup

Series: Routledge Studies in Health in Africa

Over the past thirty years, an ever-expanding community of global health actors have been intervening in the poorest parts of the world with the aim of combatting disease and improving health outcomes. Whilst many global health programmes in the Global South have been successful in saving lives, their successes have often been compromised by poor coordination, inefficiency, and a lack of alignment with national priorities. Providing an innovative and nuanced analysis of global health that challenges ideas of fragmentation as simply a technical problem, this book will be an important read for researchers of global health and African studies.

Hegemony in International Relations

Shibashis Chatterjee

This book examines how hegemony is validated, disputed, and embedded within modern international relations. It argues that the 21st century has broken from traditional patterns of hegemonic stability, showing instead asymmetrical interdependence, fragmented power, and competing claims to power and authority. By offering both Western and non-Western viewpoints, the book challenges the underlying principles and global consequences of dominance, particularly given the current instability of the liberal international order.

Moral Economies of Distribution and Redistribution in Africa

The Right and Wrong of Who Gets (and Gives) What and Why

Edited by Tijo Salverda , Cristiano Lanzano , Jörg Wiegratz University of Leeds, UK

This book examines how distribution and redistribution intertwine in everyday African economic life, challenging conventional understandings of capitalism on the continent. Through rich ethnographic studies spanning eight countries—Ghana, Nigeria, Burkina Faso, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Uganda, Kenya, and Zimbabwe—the volume reveals how perceptions of economic fairness connect macro political economies with micro-level social norms and expectations. The chapters in this book were originally published in Journal of Contemporary African Studies.

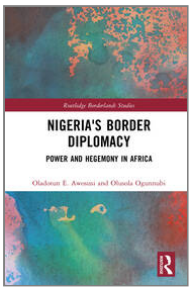
Nigeria's Border Diplomacy

Power and Hegemony in Africa



Oladotun E. Awosusi , Olusola Ogunnubi

Series: Routledge Borderlands Studies

This book examines the ways in which Nigeria's borders are used as instruments of soft and hard power in the country's relations with other African states. Across land, air, sea, cyber-space, and even outer space, Nigeria uses its borders to insert the country into the heart of African geopolitics. Drawing on the African realist conception of African internationalism, this book analyses how the country exerts the geographic advantage of its territoriality as a diplomatic instrument to assert its regional aspirations. This book will be of interest to researchers across the fields of Political Science, International Relations, Border Studies and African Studies.

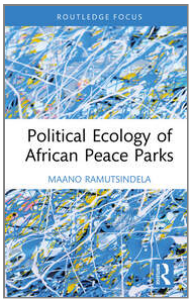
Political Ecology of African Peace Parks



Maano Ramutsindela University of Cape Town, South Africa

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

Peace parks are imagined landscapes and seascapes created through narratives and science. This book uses a political ecology framework to explore the colonial and uneven geography of peace parks in post-independence Africa. It illuminates the regional milieus impacting these parks and the consequent socioecological and political dynamics. Situated in the ongoing debates on protecting the planet in an unequal world and the pathways for a just society, this book will be of interest to researchers of African studies, political ecology, human geography, sociology, environmental studies, and political science.

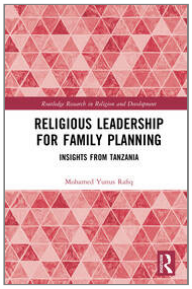
Religious Leadership for Family Planning

Insights from Tanzania



Mohamed Yunus Rafiq

Series: Routledge Research in Religion and Development

Over the last thirty years, religious leaders in Tanzania have increasingly been recruited to participate in sensitive health programs like family planning. This book considers what happens when religious leaders, often envisaged as central to a project's success, are unavailable. Based on ethnographic research, the book argues that in those situations, public health NGOs often create and co-opt religious leaders from religiously adjacent figures such as healers, marriage counsellors, and Quran teachers. An innovative and nuanced theorization of development, religion, and health, this book will be an important read for researchers of African Studies, and of faith-based development.

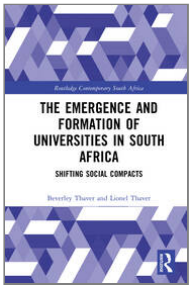
The Emergence and Formation of Universities in South Africa

Shifting Social Compacts



Beverley Thaver , Lionel Thaver

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Africa

This book considers the formation of South Africa's universities, more specifically those that evolved as colleges, taking a panoramic view over two centuries, from colonialism to democracy. The book traces their development from incipient hubs of learning to fully fledged universities, and currently into a reconfigured landscape, as the social compacts between community, church, state, capital, and university have shifted. Contextualising the South African case in relation to other countries with a British colonial footprint, the book will interest scholars across the fields of higher education, political studies, sociology, anthropology, history, decolonisation, and African Studies.

Transnational Contact Zones

Rethinking Gender and Sexuality in Africa and India

Edited by Ahonaa Roy Indian Institute of Technology, Bombay, India, Vasu Reddy

This book explores gender, sexualities, labour, migration and coloniality in Africa and India in an attempt towards transnational understanding and ways of rethinking gender. It scrutinises the nuances, textures, taxonomies and architectures of gender and sexuality in the mediated encounters between the two regions. Amidst the current climate of great global fragmentation and geopolitical conflict, this volume brings new readings from Africa and India to surface points of contact and departure.

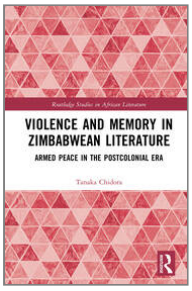
Violence and Memory in Zimbabwean Literature

Armed Peace in the Postcolonial Era



Tanaka Chidora

This book investigates how Zimbabwean literary texts subvert state-sponsored amnesia when it comes to the many forms of past and ongoing political violence in Zimbabwe. Drawing on key works by Shimmer Chinodya, Alexander Kanengoni, Yvonne Vera, Novuyo Rosa Tshuma, Brian Chikwava, Chenjerai Hove, Panashe Chigumadzi, and NoViolet Bulawayo, this book investigates how fictional works challenge this state-sponsored amnesia, both in relation to Gukurahundi and other past and ongoing forms of violence. Situated at the interface of memory studies and literary criticism, this book will be of interest to researchers across the fields of African literature, politics, development, and history.

Contract Law and International Trade Regulation

Contemporary Issues and Challenges

Pierre de Gioia Carabellese Heriot-Watt University, Scotland, Camilla Della Giustina

Contract law and international trade are two significant and distinct areas of legal practice that often intersect. While rooted in the standard contract law syllabus, this comprehensive advanced textbook seeks to examine the interaction between contract law rules and international trade regulation. It blends in-depth discussion of the most important traditional legal concepts in both these areas of the law with a careful analysis of emerging issues and more contemporary topics, such as digital contracting, trade in services, and the Europeanisation of contract law at the level of the European Union. It will be a valuable text for advanced undergraduate and postgraduate law students.

The Only Flag Worth Flying

Direct Action and the Enforcement of International Marine Conservation Law

Sarah Levy University of Oxford, Paul Watson Founder Cap. Paul Watson Foundation

The subject of international law is fraught with debate over its legitimacy and efficacy. If laws without enforcement are merely good advice, how can the environment be meaningfully protected by international legal institutions? This book examines that question through the lens of marine conservation, focusing on the Sea Shepherd Conservation Society (SSCS) and the Captain Paul Watson Foundation (CPWF) as non-state actors intervening directly to enforce international marine conservation laws. Drawing on legal analysis, political critique and detailed case studies, this book reframes direct action as being essential to the law's integrity.

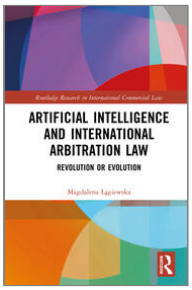
Artificial Intelligence and International Arbitration Law

Revolution or Evolution



Magdalena Łągiewska

Series: Routledge Research in International Commercial Law

The book asks whether the use of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Generative AI (GenAI) in international arbitration represents a revolution or an evolution of the international dispute resolution landscape. It explores how arbitral tribunals and stakeholders are cautiously yet progressively adopting recent innovations in AI in a manner that respects and preserves the foundational principles of arbitration. It analyses how AI is perceived and applied by parties, arbitral institutions, and arbitrators, as well as assessing the legal frameworks in place to govern it. This book will be of interest to researchers in the field of international arbitration and commercial law.

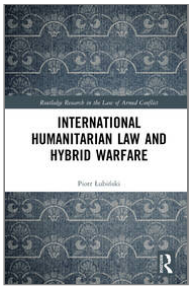
International Humanitarian Law and Hybrid Warfare



Piotr Łubiński

Series: Routledge Research in the Law of Armed Conflict

This groundbreaking monograph offers a comprehensive legal and conceptual analysis of hybrid warfare and hybrid threats—two evolving challenges that blur the boundaries between war and peace. Drawing from international law, political science, and security studies, the book explores how states and non-state actors exploit legal, informational, and cyber tools to undermine adversaries without crossing the threshold of conventional warfare. With a unique focus on legal thresholds and norms, the volume is essential reading for scholars, policymakers, and practitioners navigating today's increasingly multipolar and legally ambiguous security environment.

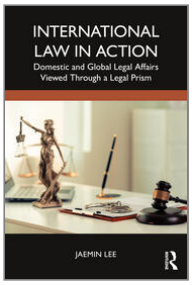
International Law in Action

Domestic and Global Legal Affairs Viewed through a Legal Prism



Jaemin Lee

Each section of the book begins with an original essay by the author discussing core issues covered by the news commentaries. Articles then follow after, providing at-the-time analysis of the interactions between international law and international relations, as well as the interaction between domestic and international law. Many of the issues, such as China-US relations and refugee policy, are of global relevance, and the thematic clusters will give the readers and students a picture of how international law actually operates in the field.

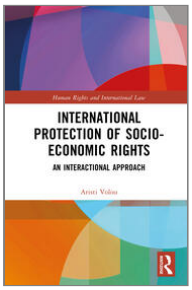
International Protection of Socio-Economic Rights

An Interactional Approach



Aristi Volou

Series: Human Rights and International Law

This book argues that there are weaknesses in the international systems of socio-economic rights protection and that these weaknesses can be mitigated or overcome through the practice of interaction between these systems. The work examines international protection of socio-economic rights and shows that it is vulnerable in terms of its personal and material scope, its content and the extent of permissible limitations. The book will be a valuable resource for academics, researchers, judges and policy-makers working in the areas of International Human Rights Law, Social Justice, Political Science and International Relations.

Is Mandatory Retirement Morally Defensible?

Ethics, Economics, and Law in Ageing Societies

Edited by Hon-Lam Li

The topic of banning mandatory retirement has sparked debate as ageing populations transform societies. Comparing ageism to sexism and racism, this book addresses the philosophical concerns of age discrimination, as well as the ethical and social considerations of personal dignity, economic efficiency, and employment insecurity. This edited volume fosters theoretical discourse by drawing on interdisciplinary conceptual frameworks from philosophy, ethics, economics, social work, and law. It is essential reading for scholars and students of practical ethics, bioethics, public policy, labour and public economics, social work, and employment law.

Just Price Theory

Historical Perspectives and Contemporary Insights

Edited by Matías Petersen , Joaquín Reyes

Series: Critical Studies in Jurisprudence

This book considers the contemporary relevance and normative implications of just price theory. For decades the idea of justice in prices has been the almost exclusive domain of historians of ideas. But current economic practices – and particularly the experience of situations in which the price of a certain good seems intuitively wrong (whether 'too much' or 'too little') – have produced a renewed concern with just prices..

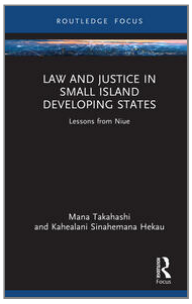
Law and Justice in Small Island Developing States

Lessons from Niue



Mana Takahashi , Kahealani Sinahemana Hekau

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Law

The book surveys the literature to discuss the features and vulnerabilities of SIDS and the challenges of law and development in these contexts. It then analyses the case of Niue and covers the current situation regarding rule of law and access to justice on the island. It further analyses the impact of COVID-19 on the fragility of the Niuean justice system. The book considers the case study of Niue and discusses how rule of law assistance is rendered in the Pacific region. It discusses previous law and justice projects implemented by international organizations and bilateral donors, and recommends ways forward to improve human rights and access to justice in these vulnerable states.

Legal Imaginaries of Crisis and Fear

Dark Constitutionalism

Edited by Martin Belov

Series: Nomos Studies in Law, Culture and Power

Focusing on this 'dark constitutionalism', the book draws together an international and interdisciplinary range of scholars to consider the place of emotive semiotics in collective meaning making, the constitutional politics of emotions, and emotional approaches to global challenges in a time of crisis, emergency, and transition. The book thereby develops a compelling analysis of the use of negative emotions in the shaping of contemporary constitutional imaginaries, and with it a novel account of the rise of dark constitutionalism.

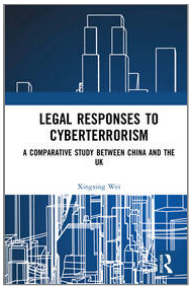
Legal Responses to Cyberterrorism

A Comparative Study between China and the UK



Xingxing Wei

This book provides an in-depth comparative study of legal responses to cyberterrorism in China and the UK to establish whether the relationship between legal systems and legal responses is necessary or contingent in the case of counter-cyberterrorism. The work maps out and compares the basic distinctive characteristics of the legal systems in the two countries, which are characterised in terms of a contrast between 'rule by law' and `rule of law', and basic criminal principles. It will be a valuable resource for academics, researchers and policy-makers working in these areas.

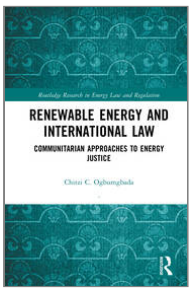
Renewable Energy and International Law

Communitarian Approaches to Energy Justice



Chitzi C. Ogbumgbada

Series: Routledge Research in Energy Law and Regulation

This book addresses the injustices associated with renewable energy development and use within the context of the energy transition. Primarily informed by a communitarian approach to energy justice, the book draws on the philosophical concept of African communitarianism as a guiding principle. It argues that international law can facilitate this approach to energy justice by adapting existing norms, standards, practices, and institutions. The book will be of interest to researchers, policymakers, international governmental organisations, and civil society.

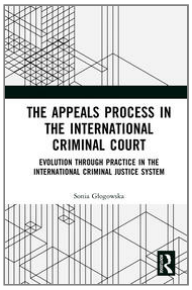
The Appeals Process in the International Criminal Court

Evolution through Practice in the International Criminal Justice System



Sonia Głogowska

This book presents an analysis of the model of appellate procedure before the International Criminal Court, based on the Court's legal texts and case-law. It proves that while the legal texts are unclear about the general shape of appellate procedure before the ICC, the model has been developed through the Appeals Chamber's practice, sometimes contrary to the literal interpretation of the Rome Statute's provisions and not in line with the expectations of the international community. The book will be of interest to academics, researchers and policy-makers working in the areas of International Criminal Justice, International Human Rights Law and Criminal Law and Procedure.

The Law and Politics of Constitution Making

Lessons from Chile

Edited by Eduardo Alemán , Sebastián Soto Velasco

Series: Comparative Constitutional Change

This collection examines Chile's two recent efforts to replace its constitution, both of which ultimately failed despite broad initial support. The book features contributions from constitutional lawyers, political scientists, and other experts, including seven constitution writers, providing both academic analysis and firsthand accounts. This volume is a key resource for scholars and policymakers interested in constitutional design, institutional reform, and Latin American politics. Readers in political science, constitutional law, and Latin American studies will find its analysis of Chile's process both informative and timely.

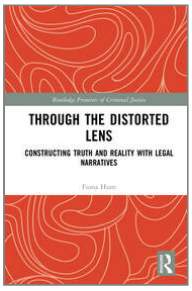
Through the Distorted Lens

Constructing Truth and Reality with Legal Narratives



Fiona Hum Monash University

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Criminal Justice

The book discusses contemporary evidential challenges surrounding the societal and legal framing of 'truth' within the Anglo-American trial process. It applies a post-structural feminist approach to examine how facts and rules are interpreted through the construction of legal stories. These include the cases of George Cardinal Pell, Johnny Depp and Amber Heard, Lawyer X, Brittany Higgins and Kathleen Folbigg. It departs from previous publications, such as those with a traditional feminist perspective, in that it presents both sides of the distorted lens where a defendant is written into a story as both guilty and innocent.

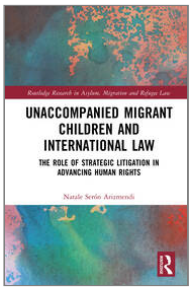
Unaccompanied Migrant Children and International Law

The Role of Strategic Litigation in Advancing Human Rights



Natale Serón Arizmendi

Series: Routledge Research in Asylum, Migration and Refugee Law

In light of the failure of traditional legal methods to provide justice for unaccompanied migrant children, this book argues the need for alternative forms of legal advocacy. Taking the case of the R.Y.S. v. Spain, the work identifies the factors that strategists must keep in close consideration throughout litigation in order to amend the law and improve public policies. Combining theoretical analysis with empirical insights, the book will equip academics, advocates and policy-makers with the necessary tools to maximise the effectiveness of strategic litigation in advancing migrant children's rights.

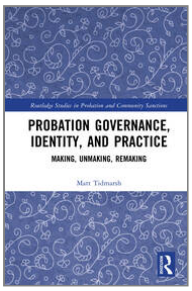
Probation Governance, Identity, and Practice

Making, Unmaking, Remaking



Matt Tidmarsh

Series: Routledge Studies in Probation and Community Sanctions

This book explores the making, unmaking, and remaking of the Probation Service in England and Wales – an organisation that has, in recent decades, seemingly been in a constant state of flux. It draws on original, empirical data derived from 38 semi-structured interviews with staff from across the probation estate to scrutinise ongoing changes to probation governance, identity, and practice. The Embodied State

Emotions, State Power and Social Marginalisation

Edited by Ana Aliverti , Henrique Carvalho , Anastasia Chamberlen , Simon Tawfic

Series: Routledge Advances in Criminology

This edited collection advances a reconceptualization of state power through emotions. Methodologically, it rethinks the study of the state from the bottom up, by seeking contributions that engage with performances of state power at the ground level, by frontline staff in direct contact with marginalised populations, and those that reflect on encounters with symbols and practices of state power. Conceptually, it advances a new theory of state power which places values and affects at the heart of its analysis.It will appeal to scholars of critical criminology, anthropology, border studies, and penology. It will also be of interest to professionals involved in these fields.

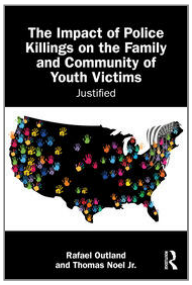
The Impact of Police Killings on the Family and Community of Youth Victims

Justified



Rafael Outland , Thomas Noel Jr.

This work highlights survivors' voices in the exploration of police violence and homicide in the United States. Making vital connections between US colonialism, structured and deputized violence, history of policing, and armed resistance by grassroots movements, the authors expand readers' understanding of the purpose of U.S. policing. Synthesizing these stories with an overview of the state of policing in the United States, this scholarship extends recommendations and strategies for organizers, activists, students, and scholars to redefine public safety, as well as police power and accountability, in Black, Brown, Indigenous, and poor communities.

Unexplained Wealth and Financial Crime

A Global Perspective

Edited by Folashade Adeyemo , Nicholas Ryder Cardiff University, UK

Series: The Law of Financial Crime

This book considers the growing and emerging issue of unexplained wealth and how this issue fits within the larger challenge of financial and economic crime. The volume further considers how unexplained wealth can be recognised as an important category, similar in this respect to fraud, bribery, corruption, and tax evasion amongst others. Establishing the issue of unexplained wealth as an independent area of research, the book will be essential reading for researchers, academics and policy-makers working in the areas of financial and economic crime, banking law and international corporate governance.

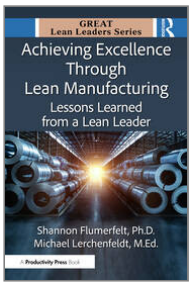
Achieving Excellence Through Lean Manufacturing

A Lean Leader's Journey



Shannon Flumerfelt, PhD , Michael Lerchenfeldt, M.Ed.

Series: Great Lean Leaders

The lean principle sees waste is anything that doesn't add value that the customers are willing to pay for. Lean manufacturing maximizes productivity, minimizes waste, improves quality, and enhances customer satisfaction, ultimately leading to cost savings and competitive advantage. Through interviews with the president of a manufacturing company, this book relates the journey of learning and growth as shared through storytelling, reflecting, and releasing tested wisdom. By fostering a culture of continuous improvement, this Great Lean Leader unfolds the truths for how his organization got to sustainable success—and continues the relentless pursuit of value creation.

AI in Financial Decision Making

Arif Ahmed , Veena Hingarh , Arnaaz Ahmed

The increasing use of AI has posed challenges and brought benefits at organizational and individual levels. However, financial decision makers are often not equipped with the necessary skills and may even feel threatened by the speed at which AI is automating the decision-making process. Taking a balanced view encompassing applications from operations, finance, and risk management, this book does not aim to turn finance experts into coders, but to clearly connect AI and ML tools to specific business issues. This will help financial decision makers actively engage with projects involving implementation of ML tools in their organizations.

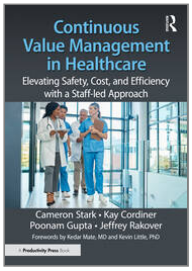
Continuous Value Management in Healthcare

Elevating Safety, Cost and Efficiency with a Staff-led Approach



Cameron Stark , Kay Cordiner , Poonam Gupta , Jeffrey Rakover

There are international pressures on healthcare delivery because of increasing demand and rising costs. Maintaining quality while containing costs is a challenge in both privately and state funded services. If service quality decreases patients suffer and staff are often unhappy. Recruitment and retention become a challenge in services with perceived reduced quality. Continuous Value Management offers a method of managing the tensions between cost, quality, and staff engagement. This book describes a method of managing quality while containing costs.

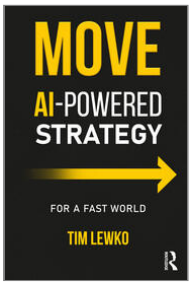
MOVE

AI-Powered Strategy for a Fast World



Tim Lewko

Developed by Tim Lewko, a 25-year strategy veteran, MOVE shows leaders how to embed artificial intelligence directly into the strategy process and validate strategic bets, pressure-test assumptions, and adapt faster than the competition – all while maintaining control over final decisions. This book reveals how AI can power real-time data analysis, surface critical indicators that signal when a strategic bet is veering off-course, and show when emerging threats require immediate attention. In a rapidly changing world, MOVE is a key tool for senior executives, business leaders, board members, CEOs, Presidents, and P&L owners to regain control across the entire execution cycle.

Redefining Networking

How to Lead with Your Unique Value

Monique Kelley

Networking has come to imply a transaction, and the available literature on networking focuses on transactional events, cocktail meetups, and going in with the intention of getting out. But what if instead of suiting up and passing out business cards, the focus was on contributing to others, starting with close circles of coworkers, customers, friends, and family? This longer-term versus transactional approach to networking is what makes this book unique, paired with the experience of author Monique Kelley, who's built a career as a communications consultant for Fortune 50 and other global corporations with no advertising—solely through the network she's cultivated for over 20 years.

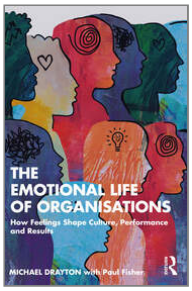
The Emotional Life of Organisations

How Feelings Shape Culture, Performance, and Results



Michael Drayton

Organisations grow, compete, and change based on the emotions that drive people's choices, politics, and goals. Emotions can either energise or paralyse people. Most business books ignore this fundamental driver of organisational behaviour and almost exclusively focus on the logical and 'cognitive' aspects of work. Using an easy-to-read and engaging style, The Emotional Life of Organisations will help people and businesses understand the important role emotions play in the workplace by using research, stories, useful tips, and writing assignments.

The Invisible Project Manager

Why Artificial Intelligence Will Run Tomorrow's Projects — Without You

Peter Taylor

What if the best project manager didn't exist? In this provocative and future-facing manifesto, Peter Taylor, the original Lazy Project Manager, asks the uncomfortable questions about the impact on his profession from the inexorable rise of artificial intelligence. It defines the 'Invisible Project Manager' future where AI systems manage workflows, timelines, and resources, while the 'human-in-the-loop' will be a vastly different skillset moving from the managers of activities to guardians of outcome. This book is an essential and thought-provoking guide to evolution for forward-looking leaders, digital transformation strategists, and change agents who are planning for the long game.

A seat at the table

A place for disabled entrepreneurs and innovators

Edited by Helen Lawton Smith , Connie L. McNeely , Jacqueline Winstanley , Ayşe Seyyide Kaptaner Demirhan

Series: Regional Studies Policy Impact Books

In today's innovation-driven global economy, there is much to be learned from the lived experience of disabled entrepreneurs in respect of support, be it by governments, charitable organisations, professional bodies or universities. Addressing the ongoing problem of inequality in access and opportunities unites all these entities. The issue this book addresses is how the innovation and entrepreneurship created by disabled people are variously supported in different national contexts. What influences the availability of resources in support of entrepreneurship and innovation by disabled people – and what works?

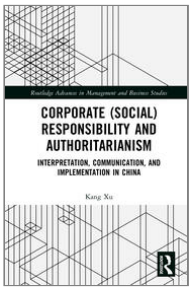
Corporate (Social) Responsibility and Authoritarianism

Interpretation, Communication, and Implementation in China



Xu Kang

Series: Routledge Advances in Management and Business Studies

This book provides an in-depth exploration of corporate social responsibility (CSR) in the authoritarian context. It challenges prevailing CSR frameworks, which largely derive from liberal democratic contexts and overlook how political institutions shape the conceptualisation and practice of corporate responsibility. By situating CSR within China's political-economic system, the book sheds light on how CSR is dynamically interpreted, strategically communicated, and selectively implemented by corporate and state actors.

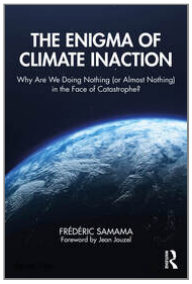
The Enigma of Climate Inaction

Why Are We Doing Nothing (or Almost Nothing) in the Face of Catastrophe?



Frédéric Samama

The Enigma of Climate Inaction explores the puzzling passivity of humanity in the face of the looming climate crisis, despite decades of clear warnings about the risk of mass extinction. It offers readers a profound insight into the cognitive, economic and societal factors underlying our inaction on climate change, equipping us with a unique toolkit to confront our collective inertia and the barriers to necessary global responses. Frédéric Samama, a world authority on sustainable finance, suggests that our perception becomes fixed and resistant to change, creating a mental rigidity that has fueled patterns of overconfidence throughout history.

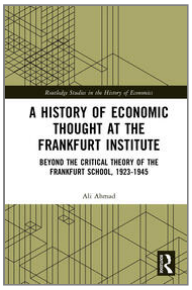
A History of Economic Thought at the Frankfurt Institute

Beyond the Critical Theory of the Frankfurt School, 1923-1945



Ali Ahmad

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Economics

The Frankfurt Institute's history overlooks crucial economic theories from its lesser-known members. This book presents the first comprehensive study of these contributions, repositioning the Institute as a site of original economic thought. It highlights figures like Neumann, Kirchheimer, Pollock, and Grünberg whose material and empirical approaches were central to the Institute's work. By contextualizing these theories within the Weimar Republic and Nazi Germany, the book reveals how these underappreciated economists shaped discourse on capitalist economies, offering new perspectives on the interplay between economics, politics, history, and epistemology.

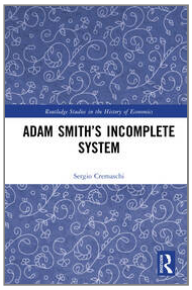
Adam Smith's Incomplete System



Sergio Cremaschi

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Economics

On his deathbed, Adam Smith ordered the burning of two unfinished works on epistemology and politics, fearing that his image as a philosopher would be tarnished and his ideas misinterpreted.This book argues that the inability to complete these two works is symptomatic of tensions for which Smith found no resolution. The book reconstructs the lost works from fragments, lecture notes, correspondence, and chapters from published works. The book is essential reading for Adam Smith specialists, historians of economic thought and philosophers of science.

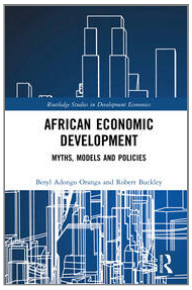
Myths, Models and Policies



Beryl Adongo Oranga , Robert Buckley

Series: Routledge Studies in Development Economics

This book reviews the performance of low-income African countries and highlights the challenges posed by measurement and methodological problems.Structured in three parts, the book first critiques historical and narrative-driven myths, then investigates model-based myths around convergence and growth; and the final section synthesizes eight dominant myths that continue to shape policy. This book will appeal to academics, researchers, and advanced students, as well as policymakers and development practitioners, concerned with poverty and development issues, especially in Africa.

Challenging Capitalism

Paths Taken, Roads Ahead

Edited by Peter A. Coclanis , Arne L. Kalleberg

Commentators today generally agree that we are at an inflection point in the history of capitalism. In Challenging Capitalism, an interdisciplinary group of distinguished scholars address some of the likely challenges of a new political-economic order that minimizes capitalism's deficiencies without impeding unduly its ability to facilitate and support wealth creation and human flourishing. The book is essential reading for anyone interested in capitalism from across the social sciences and humanities including in political economy, sociology, history, political science, public policy, and economics.

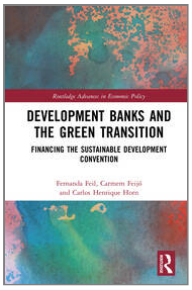
Development Banks and the Green Transition

Financing the Sustainable Development Convention



Fernanda Feil , Carmem Feijó , Carlos Henrique Horn

Series: Routledge Advances in Economic Policy

This book introduces the idea of a 'Sustainable Development Convention'. A convention is a form of social production and shared knowledge that establishes collective reality. Development banks have been essential institutions in promoting public policies worldwide - their credit and other forms of finance and cooperation have been central tools in catching-up processes for developing and emerging economies. This book marks a significant addition to the literature on development banks, the green transition, the political economy of climate change, and economic and monetary policy.

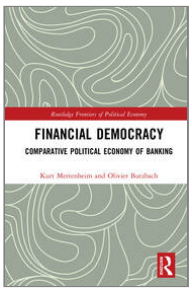
Financial Democracy

Comparative Political Economy of Banking



Kurt Mettenheim , Olivier Butzbach

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

Elaborating a new approach to the comparative political economy of banking, Financial Democracy presents evidence of both the recent return to traditional bank management and the resurgence of alternative banks with social and public policy missions. The book begins with a critique of contemporary approaches to banking, finance, and money in political economy, financial economics and, indeed, the major approaches to macroeconomics since 1945. This book will be of interest to readers in political economy, banking, finance and democratization.

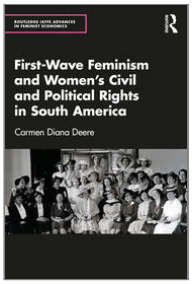
First-Wave Feminism and Women's Civil and Political Rights in South America



Carmen Diana Deere

Series: Routledge IAFFE Advances in Feminist Economics

This book analyzes the context, process and content of the reform of married women's property rights in seven Spanish-speaking South American countries--Argentina, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela—between 1900 and the early 1950s. It contributes to a long-standing discussion on the relationship between socioeconomic and legal change and brings the findings of recent scholarship and a vast array of primary materials only available in Spanish to an English-speaking audience, interpreting legal concepts and debates in a manner accessible to social scientists. This interdisciplinary book supports the construction of a feminist legal history of marital regimes.

Gen Z at Work in Central and Eastern Europe

Socioeconomic, Technological and Cultural Contexts

Edited by Elżbieta Wąsowicz-Zaborek , Adam Oleksiuk

Series: Routledge Studies in Central and Eastern European Business and Economics

In an era of rapid transformation in the world of work, Generation Z emerges as a transformative force, reshaping traditional employment models with their distinct preferences and values. As the first fully digital-native generation, they seek flexibility, remote work opportunities, and a healthy work-life balance. This book examines these transformative trends in the context of Central and Eastern Europe, focusing on three diverse and representative countries – Poland, Czechia, and Estonia. Together, these nations illustrate the region's economic diversity and innovation, offering insights into how local labour markets are responding to the expectations of this new workforce.

Global Cooperative Economics and Movements

A Research Companion

Edited by Jerome Nikolai Warren , Kemi Ogunyemi , Asia Guerreschi , Maciej Szulc

Series: Routledge Research Companions in Business and Economics

Cooperatives are traditionally recognized as marginal players in the economic sector, but their role in policymaking and in social arenas has garnered even less attention. This book examines the practical and policy dimensions and implications of cooperative economics and movement(s). It delves into the more politicized aspects of cooperatives, exploring how they intersect with global movements, social justice, policymaking, and grassroots activism and provides insights into real struggles tackled by this enterprise form. The book will serve as an invaluable tool for anyone seeking to understand the broader implications of cooperative models in today's globalized world.

International Economic and Monetary Architecture at the Crossroads

Bretton Woods at 80

Edited by Atish Ghosh , Fabio Masini

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

Founded at the 1944 Bretton Woods conference, the IMF and World Bank embodied international cooperation for global prosperity. This volume explores "roads not taken" in their histories and the consequential decisions that shaped today's financial architecture. As geoeconomic fragmentation threatens open trade and post-war gains, the authors examine both successful paths and unexplored alternatives, seeking historical lessons for future reforms. The book offers insights for readers interested in international monetary systems and economic governance—showing how past intellectual efforts can guide tomorrow's financial architecture.

Just Transition and the European Green Deal

Regional Perspectives

Edited by Everardus Wilhelmus (Michiel) Stapper , Marcin Baron , Ralph Horne , Nevelina Pachova , Monika Wieczorek-Kosmala

Series: Routledge Open Business and Economics

This book examines how the concept of the just transition - the idea that environmental and social concerns must be reconciled - has been implemented in European Union policies. With the introduction of the Just Transition Mechanism, the European Commission launched the world's most ambitious attempt to mitigate the adverse social and economic effects of the European Green Deal. This book provides a timely and detailed examination of how the just transition unfolds in practice, concluding that a just transition cannot be achieved unless community-level concerns are more aligned with regional, national, and European policy goals.

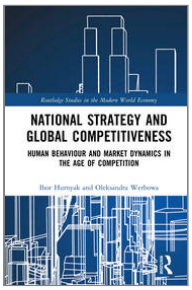
National Strategy and Global Competitiveness

Human Behaviour and Market Dynamics in the Age of Competition



Ihor Hurnyak , Oleksandra Werbowa

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern World Economy

In a world shaped by geopolitical rivalries, technological disruptions, and economic volatility, strategic thinking has become essential for sustaining national competitiveness. This book demonstrates how diverse analytical tools – including game theory, econophysics, financial econometrics, multidimensional clustering, and machine learning – illuminate the complex interconnections between markets, institutional dynamics, and state behaviour. Central to this approach is econothinking, a mindset that recognizes economic decisions as deeply intertwined with politics, geopolitical strategies, and societal outcomes.

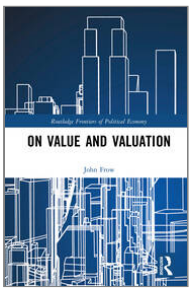
On Value and Valuation



John Frow

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

On Value and Valuation asks whether the category of economic value remains theoretically viable, how it is formed and how it should be understood. It explores the interlinkages between economic value and social and cultural values. It draws on anthropological and sociological accounts of the evaluative frameworks within which things take on their social meanings; on the other, it explores and critiques the Marxist account of the formation of value in capitalist production. It Its aim is to reconciles these two conceptions, and it does so by arguing that economic value is not a property of goods and services but is formed in specific institutions of valuation.

The Central and Eastern European Business Environment

Economic, Environmental and Political Dimensions

Edited by Magdalena Suska

Series: Routledge Studies in Central and Eastern European Business and Economics

This multidisciplinary book analyses the background and the impact of the business environment, its factors and features, and how their changes influence business operations and decisions. It identifies and assesses different features, opportunities and challenges of business environments, from the experience of Central and Eastern European countries, including the Polish perspective, which is an interesting and needed dimension. Poland is presented here as an example of a country that has substantially and successfully transformed its economy. This example may be both interesting and inspiring for other countries, especially the economies in transition.

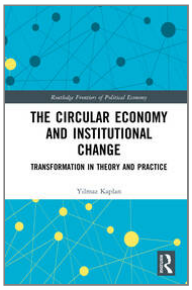
The Circular Economy and Institutional Change

Transformation in Theory and Practice



Yilmaz Kaplan

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

The climate crisis has emerged as a consequence of the linear economic system that developed in the aftermath of the industrial revolution. In recent years, global actors have recognised the need for institutional change from the linear economy to a more sustainable alternative: the circular economy. This book analyses the potential for transformative institutional change to a circular economy, both in theory and practice. This book is invaluable for readers interested in the circular economy, new institutionalism, the impacts of climate change and alternative economic policy.

Geospatial Information to Support the UN's Sustainable Development Goals

Edited by Etta D. Jackson ICGU, Amor Laaribi United Nations Retiree

Series: GIS in Action

This unique book investigates the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development through geospatial information lenses, making the case that geospatial information is central to the SDGs and is imperative to understand the place, location, communities, and the people to identify where the root of the problem lies. Combined with other layers of information, it supports advanced analysis and visualizations and explains how SDG indicators can be interpreted and measured either through direct use of geospatial data itself or through integration with other statistical data. International case studies and coverage of all SDGs help users evaluate impacts and monitor progress to achieve the SDGs.

The Panacea for Immigrant People in the Arctic

Opportunity or Vulnerability?

Edited by Nafisa Yeasmin , Juhar Yasin Abamosa , Syed Musa Kajim Nuri

Series: Routledge Research in Polar Regions

This book explores whether the Arctic serves as a true panacea for immigrants, offering opportunity and renewal, or if it reveals deep vulnerabilities, including isolation, harsh conditions, and exploitation. By examining the intersection of migration, socio-economic development, and climate change, the book uncovers the forces shaping immigrant lives and their role in the Arctic's evolving future. This book will be of interest to researchers and policymakers working in fields such as migration studies, political science, environmental studies, sociology, economics, and human geography.

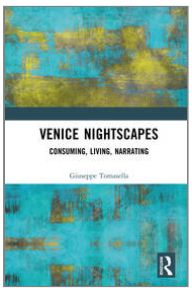
Venice Nightscapes

Consuming, Living, Narrating



Giuseppe Tomasella

Series: Routledge Research in Culture, Space and Identity

This book rethinks the urban night through an interdisciplinary exploration of Venice's nighttime economies, social practices and cultural narratives. Interpreting nightscapes as lived, contested and imaginative spaces, the book introduces the 'genius noctis' – a critical lens for engaging with the identity of the nocturnal city. This book resonates with researchers and students across cultural geography, urban studies, mobility studies, anthropology and environmental humanities – particularly those investigating nightscapes, Mediterranean urban cultures or interdisciplinary place-based inquiry.

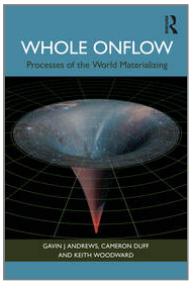
Whole Onflow

Processes of the World Materializing



Gavin J. Andrews , Cameron Duff , Keith Woodward

This book describes 'whole onflow' which is, at once, the emergence and becoming of the entirety of the world/universe and any actual, unique position whatsoever in it 'now'. A physical plane and self-organizing process that owes its energy to the big bang; in our region it now unfolding the infinitely complex and varied world we engage, contribute to and experience It is very much a speculative and provocative piece, but a necessary one, and will be of particular interest to those studying the world through poststructuralist, posthumanist, new materialist and non-representational theoretical lenses.

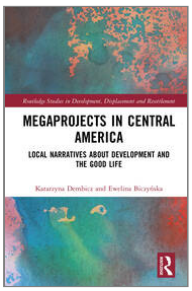
Megaprojects in Central America

Local Narratives About Development and the Good Life



Katarzyna Dembicz , Ewelina Biczyńska

Series: Routledge Studies in Development, Displacement and Resettlement

Embedded in Southern voices and epistemologies, this book explores how local communities in Central America understand development and the good life in the context of large-scale infrastructure projects. The book draws on extensive in-depth interviews, participatory workshops and surveys to demonstrate how different social groups interpret the impacts of megaprojects. It critically examines the tensions between externally-driven investment initiatives and locally-rooted worldviews, wellbeing and ways of life. Epidemiological Obfuscation

Historical and Contemporary Case Studies

Edited by Freya L. Jephcott , Hillary A. Ash , Coreen McGuire

Series: Routledge Studies in Health and Medical Anthropology

Epidemiology ostensibly exists to reveal and ascribe features to burdens of disease at a population level. However, as the designated arbiter of visibility in public health, it is well-positioned to also obscure burdens of disease with significant implications for both social justice and disease control. As such, the book not only serves as a catalogue of independently interesting and robustly developed accounts of important episodes in the history and contemporary practice of epidemiology, but also as a foundational body of scholarship on this central but oft overlooked aspect of epidemiology, namely, its ability to obscure as well as elucidate.

Museum Temporalities

Time, History and the Future of the Ethnographic Museum

Edited by Wayne Modest National Museum of World Cultures, Netherlands, Peter Pels

Series: Routledge Studies in Anthropology and Museums

Museum Temporalities analyzes how museums relate to time. It explores the hidden temporal assumptions and practices that define museums. How might these assumptions help us to better understand and address museums' often problematic and painful relationship to a colonial past? This path-breaking collection centralizes and develops current concerns in critical museology and is valuable reading for scholars and students of museum studies, anthropology, heritage studies, and material culture.

Naming and Being

Knowledges, Identities and Cultural Politics

Edited by Gwyneira Isaac , Stanisław Kordasiewicz , Sylvia Ngo , Tomasz Wicherkiewicz , Kyunney Takasaeva

Series: Anthropological Studies in Creativity and Perception

This experimental volume explores how intersections between different knowledge systems affect identity formation through names and naming, bringing together anthropologists, community scholars, artists, linguists, scientists, poets, specialists in science and technology, as well as legal and Indigenous studies. While recognizing these mechanisms of oppression are important, by bringing openness towards other positionalities regarding the complex problematics of naming and being in the world, this volume invites a wide range of scholars and practitioners to also engage with and consider the empowering and liberatory potential of names and naming in their own work.

Fighting Oligarchy

How Positive Populism Can Reclaim America

Charles Derber

Series: Universalizing Resistance

This book offers a new analysis of why Trump's Far Right populism helped him win the Presidency twice, and how it enshrined a corporate establishment that he claimed to run against. Derber presents a counter history of positive left populism and argues that populist parties gain power in eras of hard times for working people while mainstream parties lose voter support as they defend the existing system. Fighting Oligarchy: How Positive Populism Can Reclaim America makes the case that only a left-leaning positive populist movement can defeat Trump and his corporate regime. Derber highlights the core principles of resistance to build a new and sustainable US democracy.

Revealing Britain's Systemic Racism

The Case of Meghan, The Duchess of Sussex

Kimberley Ducey , Joe Feagin

Revealing Britain's Systemic Racism identifies and documents the plethora of ways systemic racism continues to shape ecological spaces in the UK. Kimberley Ducey and Joe R. Feagin challenge notions of racial inclusivity by applying theoretical work to make a unique and significant contribution to literature in sociology. The second edition of this book continues and updates the saga of Meghan's experiences, underscoring the myriad ways systemic racism continues to shape spaces in the UK, detailing how most white Britons continue to cling to colorblind myths about their democratic country as the mainstream British media denies the extensive racism that people face.

Silence and Society

Charles Lemert Wesleyan University

Silence and Society addresses the reality that social sciences have ignored the importance of silence in human communication. Without communication, there is no community and thus no society. Yet, as classic communication theory explains, communication must always deal with noise. Increasingly, as cyber-technologies and media have gained the upper hand in social life, so have they become purveyors of empty noise--from mindless sitcom television to uninformed talk radio to cable news blather and more.

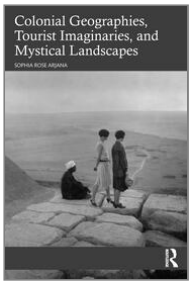
Colonial Geographies, Tourist Imaginaries, and Mystical Landscapes



Sophia Rose Arjana

The many forms of colonialism have enabled governments, colonial agents, settlers, writers, and artists to reorder the world as a new space that mystifies invasion, occupation, and reterritorialization as it reestablishes a new binary of what is natural and what is unnatural. Colonial Geographies, Tourist Imaginaries, and Mystical Landscapes provides an account of this colonial practice and its influence on the creation of mystical landscapes in modern tourism.

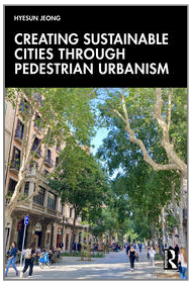
Creating Sustainable Cities Through Pedestrian Urbanism



Hyesun Jeong

This book explores how communities worldwide are rethinking the relationship between mobility, place, and belonging. Drawing from cities across North America, Europe, and Asia, this book examines the shift from car-dominated planning toward human-centered design. It traces how walkable environments support environmental goals while fostering social connection and cultural vitality, demonstrating that sustainable cities are also more equitable and livable cities. Written for urban practitioners, community advocates, and engaged citizens, this work offers insights rather than prescriptions, recognizing that each place requires its own approach to pedestrian urbanism.

For a New Political Sociology

The Relational Approach of Pierre Bourdieu

Edited by Will Atkinson University of Bristol, UK

This volume seeks to make the case for Pierre Bourdieu's relational sociology as a powerful, comprehensive and integrated paradigm for studying everything political. It demonstrates how Bourdieu's relational sociology advances on other perspectives and offers a 'joined-up' approach to the political, seamlessly capable of illuminating subjects as diverse as Brexit, voter choice, post-socialist transition, civil war, revolution, international relations and the structure of political science discourse itself. This collection will be essential reading for students and scholars of politics, whether they be sociologists, political scientists or international relations specialists.

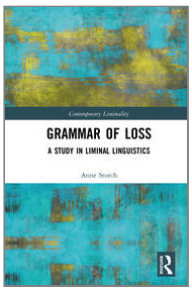
Grammar of Loss

A Study in Liminal Linguistics



Anne Storch

Series: Contemporary Liminality

This book explores how language and linguistic knowledge are encountered through walks, shared meals, conversations, and daily life rather than being written about in the style and genre of western academic grammar. Through an exploration of the multivocal forms of knowledge transmission in a disappearing language within a small, diverse community in Nigeria, the book reveals a new perspective on linguistic research and uncovers hidden dimensions through stories of the living and dead. Of strong interest to those studying endangered languages and linguistic anthropology, and academics working in liminality studies and alternative approaches to language documentation.

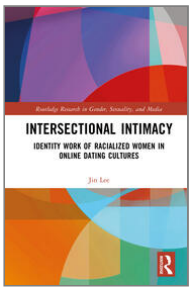
Intersectional Intimacy

Identity Work of Racialized Women in Online Dating Cultures



Jin Lee Curtin University, Australia.

Series: Routledge Research in Gender, Sexuality, and Media

This is the first book to examine both shared and divergent stories from those who identify as women with race-related experiences navigating online dating cultures, and to explore how their experience of intimate relationships is mediated by the apps. While many women turn to dating apps in search of intimacies, their navigations are continuously mediated and challenged by hierarchies of race, gender, class, and sexuality embedded in online dating cultures. This book traces the ongoing and layered processes through which racialized women develop their stories of online intimacies by making use of their identities and further cultivate their subjectivities.

Modelling Social Housing

Exploring the Interplay of Social Life and Built Environments on European Social Housing Estates

Edited by Mikkel Høghøj Aarhus University, Denmark, Mette My Madsen , Anne Corlin , Morten Nielsen Aarhus University, Denmark

Series: Explorations in Housing Studies

This book delves into the intricate relationship between everyday social life and the architectural landscapes of social housing across European cities. Focusing on social housing across multiple temporal and socio-cultural European urban settings, the book traces how the confluence of distributed knowledges, technological resources, and architectural histories may have considerable effects across different scales, ranging from everyday interactions to welfare planning and economic policies. To capture these intricate socio-spatial relations, the book introduces the concept of 'social urban modelling' as a novel analytical approach to social housing research.

Modernity's Critical Conscience

A Social Science that Matters

Olof Hallonsten

This book offers a thought-provoking defence of social science – and particularly the discipline of sociology – and its relevance for 21st century challenges to democratic societies. The author shows how social science holds a unique and critical role: namely, to act as modernity's critical conscience by scrutinizing power relations and unmasking attempts to trivialize social reality. A beautifully written, wide-ranging, and appealing explanation of what the social sciences, and sociology in particular, could, and should be, it will be of equal interest to professors and graduate students as to undergraduate students studying introductory modules to sociology.

Political Modernity and Beyond

Crisis, Struggles and Reconfigurations

Edited by Sofia Aboim , José Maurício Domingues , Filipe Carreira Da Silva

Series: Entangled Inequalities: Exploring Global Asymmetries

Amidst rising tensions affecting democracy, capitalism and planetary life, this book discusses the multiple crises, processes and conflicts reconfiguring modernity. Tracking the political, social and ecological dynamics at play, it offers a critical perspective on the forces that may redefine the futures of political modernity. It asks whether a transition is unfolding and whether a new phase of modernity is emerging, or whether it is only an inflexion that we are witnessing. An innovative, empirically based, and path-breaking analytical contribution, it will appeal to specialists, researchers and postgraduate students of sociology, social theory, and political theory.

Resisting the Label

How Young People Challenge Negative Everyday Representations

Edited by Jo Deakin , Hilary Pilkington University of Manchester, UK, Zyab Ibáñez , Aet Annist

This book draws on ethnographic research across multiple European contexts to explore how young people navigate their complex positioning in society today. Through rich ethnographic data, the book examines the shared experiences of European youth as they confront negative everyday representations while negotiating the complex power relations that perpetuate cycles of misrepresentation, stigmatization, and misrecognition. The research reveals how these processes ultimately compound young people's exclusion from equal participation in social life, offering critical insights into youth perspectives on their paradoxical social positioning.

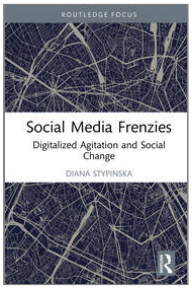
Social Media Frenzies

Digitalized Agitation and Social Change



Diana Stypinska Liverpool Hope University, UK

Series: Media, Culture and Critique: Future Imperfect

This book examines the relation between agitation and social change in the digital context. Focusing on the phenomenon of 'social media storms', it conceptualizes digitalized agitation, reflecting upon its transformative potential and socio-political effects. It argues that social media frenzies emerge out of the false need to agitate and to be agitated, contending that digital agitation is a source of compensatory intoxication, functioning as today's opium of the people.It is of relevance to anyone concerned with social change, and of particular use to academics, postgraduates and advanced undergraduate students working in the areas of Sociology, Media, Cultural Studies and Politics.

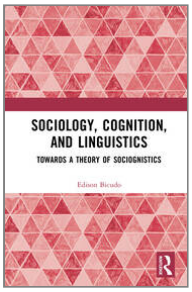
Sociology, Cognition, and Linguistics

Towards a Theory of Sociognistics



Edison Bicudo

This book explores how social and political life are shaped by unconscious linguistic operations and practical bodily experiences, rather than by just rationality and consciously crafted arguments. It presents conceptually and theoretically rigorous accounts of how and why we must grasp the cognitive basis of societies, revealing foundations in bodily experiences and linguistic operations such as metaphors, metonymies, semantic frames, and myths. It will appeal to scholars and researchers interested in sociolinguistics, cognitive sociology, semiotics, biomedical technologies, political economy, social theory, applied linguistics, bioethics, and the sociology of science and technology.

Solidarity Economics

Building Sustainable Social Relations

Series: Bridges to Another World

Solidarity Economics: Building Sustainable Social Relations lays out the landscape of these projects aimed at building a better world, and explores the institutional frameworks needed for them to expand. It asks broader questions about what is needed to help them build toward just and sustainable societies based on relations of solidarity. Drawing on indigenous economics and anti-capitalist theory, this book critiques the idea of an economy as something autonomous from the rest of society and helps us see practical pathways to building systems which ensure that everyone's needs are met.

The Forgotten Man and White Populist Resentment

Power, Politics, and Narrative Dominance in the Trump Era

Arthur H. Garrison

The Forgotten Man and White Populist Resentment: Power, Politics, and Narrative Dominance in the Trump Era traces how the Republican Party adopted White populist resentment and transitioned the White non-college educated flyover voter into the Republican Party under George Wallace, Barry Goldwater, and Richard Nixon. This book examines how this White populism rose to dominate the Republican Party primary base, how the populist campaigns of Pat Buchanan and Newt Gingrich paved the way for the rise of Donald Trump, and how he maintains narrative dominance over both parties and American political discourse.

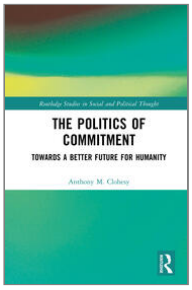
The Politics of Commitment

Towards a Better Future for Humanity



Anthony M. Clohesy

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

This book examines the nature of our commitment to the long-term survival of humanity. It addresses the lack of a sustainable and ethical commitment to a shared and binding future for the well-being of those who will come after us. While other texts focus on the threats to our survival such as climate catastrophe, or nuclear annihilation, this study argues that a greater threat to our survival is our disposition of ambivalence about the value of future lives. Clearly argued and jargon free, the book will be useful for scholars with an academic interest in philosophy, psychology, sociology, history, culture studies and population ethics.

The Social Quality of Public Space

Integration, Strategy, Subjectivation

Edited by Letteria G. Fassari , Martina Löw

Series: The Refiguration of Space

This book examines the concept of quality from a social perspective. Using the example of public spaces, it demonstrates the analytical and practical benefits that can be gained from an experience-based approach to defining quality.It examines public space quality through a cultural-spatial lens, accounting for the complexity of polycontexturalization, as well as the materiality of spatial arrangements.The book targets both researchers and students in sociology, anthropology, political science, architecture, and urban planning. It also serves as a practical toolbox for professionals in architecture and planning focused on creating more socially acceptable public spaces.

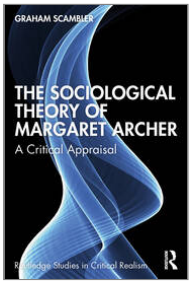
The Sociological Theory of Margaret Archer

A Critical Appraisal



Graham Scambler

Series: Routledge Studies in Critical Realism

Margaret Archer's contribution to the development of sociological theory has been significant and lasting. This volume offers an account of her work over time and an appraisal of its salience for contemporary sociological theory and practice. It shows how Archer's work drew on Roy Bhaskar's critical realist philosophy whilst displaying independence and originality, making the case for why her work warrants wider consideration within the sociological community. Accessibly written and clearly elucidating Archer's work and the debates it has given rise to, it will appeal to scholars and students of critical realism, sociological theory, and the philosophy of social science.

The World We Have Created

Climate, Democracy and Knowledge

Nico Stehr Zeppelin University, Germany

Series: A New Order of Social Things

The World We Have Created: Climate, Democracy, and Knowledge details how the de-democratization of ecological decision-making favors models of authoritarian governance, as democratic values such as transparency, participation, and accountability are continually undermined. Offering a robust account of the responses to the climate crisis and the necessary social and political changes posed by the scientific consensus, this book analyses the growing discrepancy between scientific knowledge about the causes and consequences of climate change and the lack of political and social willingness to implement necessary measures.

Transformations of Labour through the Lens of Sex Work

Navigating Digitalisation, Precarity and Resistance

Edited by Iztok Šori Peace Institute, Slovenia, Majda Hrženjak Peace Institute, Slovenia

This volume engages with the question of how labour is transforming under late capitalism, and what insights the study of sex work offers into these transformations. It demonstrates that sex work offers a powerful lens through which to understand the contradictions of contemporary labour regimes: autonomy bound up with precarity, visibility with surveillance, and agency with algorithmic control. This book will be of interest to scholars and advanced readers engaged in critical labour studies, feminist theory, sociology, and socio-legal research, as well as to policymakers and activists concerned with labour rights and social justice.

Climate Change Impacts in Texas

Integrated Analysis and Adaptation

Edited by Mona Wells Ronin Institute, USA, Ryan A. McManamay Baylor University, Texas

Series: Environmental Assessment and Management

This book focuses on climate change impacts and adaptation in Texas, a vital economic and ecologically important region in the US. Texas spans twelve distinct ecoregions and a GDP greater than that of many countries, however, it is the only large state in the US that does not have an active climate action or adaptation plan. This book analyzes the ways in which every aspect of life in Texas will be affected by climate change and the severe risks posed to the future well-being of Texans. It discusses the effects of climate change on the natural environment, human-environmental systems, and a diversity of approaches used for climate adaptation and mitigation, whether intentional or not.

Climate Change and Disadvantaged Communities

Challenges and Opportunities

Edited by Sk Ajim Ali The University of Manchester, Quoc Bao Pham Uni. of Silesia, Yunqing Xuan Swansea University

This book explores the uneven impacts of climate change and how it affects the lives and livelihoods of climate-disadvantaged communities by highlighting the specific challenges they face, such as heatwaves, droughts, flooding, health issues, and economic losses. It explains why vulnerable populations are more at risk due to factors such as lack of infrastructure, poverty, and limited access to resources. The book offers insights on conceptual frameworks to help vulnerable communities adapt and become more resilient to climate impacts. Real-life examples with challenges and actionable suggestions aim to inform policymakers and the public about the urgent need for targeted initiatives.

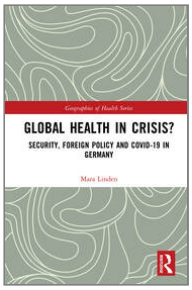
Global Health in Crisis?

Security, Foreign Policy and Covid-19 in Germany



Mara Linden

Series: Geographies of Health Series

This book examines global health as a foreign policy issue in Germany and global health's entanglement with security and economic concerns. Based on an ethnography at the German Federal Foreign Office during Covid-19, it explores the emergence of this policy field, its variations in the pandemic moment, and the coordination of vaccine donations as a case study. For anyone interested in global health, both in academia and 'in the field', this book provides insights to governmental cooperation in the area of global health and foreign policy prior to and during a crisis, and allows for conclusions for further developments and/or future crisis moments.

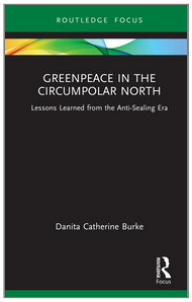
Greenpeace in the Circumpolar North

Lessons Learned from the Anti-Sealing Era



Danita Catherine Burke

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

Exploring Greenpeace's effort to expand its engagement in the Circumpolar North in the 21st century, this book examines how this work is affected and informed by the organisation's controversial legacy of anti-sealing campaigning in the 1970s and 1980s. Presenting the fallout for peoples and cultures targeted by Greenpeace's anti-sealing campaigning as a pivotal dimension to the organisation's history, the book argues that this must first be acknowledged in order to understand how Greenpeace has developed more positive working relationships with northern Indigenous peoples in recent years.

Event Medical Provision

Ashley Garlick

Event medical provision is an indispensable and increasingly complex facet of modern event management. It extends far beyond the traditional notion of simple first aid, encompassing a comprehensive planning system, resource allocation, risk mitigation, and emergency response designed to safeguard the health and well-being of all individuals involved in an event. The lessons from major incidents, such as the Manchester Arena bombing, and the evolving legislative landscape, including Martyn's Law, continually reinforce the need for robust, coordinated, and regularly tested emergency preparedness at all static venues.

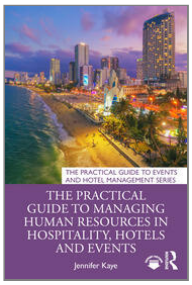
The Practical Guide to Managing Human Resources in Hospitality, Hotels and Events



Jennifer Kaye

Series: The Practical Guide to Events and Hotel Management Series

The hospitality industry is one of the fastest growing industries globally, incorporating hotels and other lodgings, restaurants, cafés, pubs/bars, and nightclubs. Hospitality is interrelated with events and travel industries, with food and drink offerings, transport, and accommodation often needed, alongside events. The key factors for Human Resources to consider when implementing a change regarding roles within an organisation, is clear, consistent, and open communication towards current team members. This is essential as it ensures our current team feel reassured throughout the process of receiving a new manager and member of the executive team.

Engineered Nanomaterials in Food and Drugs

From Laboratory to Market

Edited by Santosh K. Misra , Nishima Wangoo , Sangeeta Khare

This book pans through three major sections of materials and methods used in the engineering of nanomaterials—their applications, ethical issues, and present market share in the field of food and drugs. It presents information on the kind of materials and processes that are used to synthesize nanomaterials, which are eventually used in the food and drug industries. It chalks out the minor details of components and parameters that could influence the outcome in terms of dimension, surface property, toxicity, stability, bioavailability, degradation, physiological responsiveness, etc.

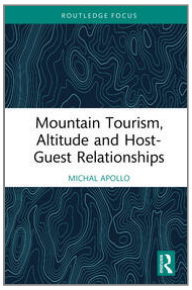
Mountain Tourism, Altitude and Host-Guest Relationships



Michal Apollo

Series: Routledge Focus on Tourism and Hospitality

Mountains comprise approximately 25% of the Earth's land surface and are home to around 26% of the global population. A significant proportion of this population – approximately 18.2% – resides in rural areas characterised by environmentally challenging conditions and limited socioeconomic opportunities (Huddleston et al., 2003; Meybeck et al., 2001). This approach allows for more precise spatial management and better adaptation of interventions to the level of land use intensity, in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Sustainable Tourism, Hospitality and Events

Emerging Trends and New Opportunities

Edited by Pantea Foroudi Middlesex University London, UK, Maria Palazzo University of Salerno, Italty, Satyendra Upadhyay

In an era marked by accelerating climate change, digital disruption, and global socio-economic shifts, the tourism, hospitality, and events sectors face a critical turning point. These industries, traditionally celebrated for promoting cultural exchange, economic development, and human connectivity, are now being called upon to reassess their practices and redefine their roles in building a more equitable and environmentally conscious world. By continuing to support and develop this industry, the UK can maintain its status as a leading destination for seafood lovers, fishing enthusiasts, and eco-conscious travelers.

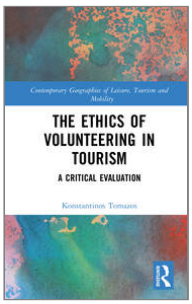
The Ethics of Volunteering in Tourism

A Critical Evaluation



Konstantinos Tomazos

Series: Contemporary Geographies of Leisure, Tourism and Mobility

To set the scene for our book and explain how volunteering and, by extension, good intentions have become marketable, commoditised experiences, we must first understand the process of commoditisation. To build a sustainable future, volunteer tourism should prioritise responsibility over rescue, creating connections instead of fostering consumption. Let us warmly accept this invitation to listen more, learn continuously, and engage not as heroes, but as fellow humans, ready to stand alongside, rather than above one another.

It is most certainly the case that 'tourism is far more dependent on peace than peace is on tourism' (Hall, Timothy & Duval, 2004: 3). In the case studies discussed in this book, it is only at those sites of difficult history where some degree of community engagement is demonstrated that visitors may experience a shared sense of loss and more positive feelings of hope and reconciliation. In contrast, where a heritage is distorted or dissonant, such an outcome is less likely.

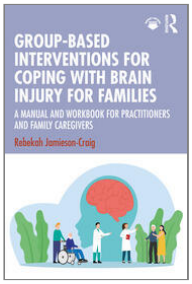
Group-Based Interventions for Coping with Brain Injury for Families

A Manual and Workbook for Practitioners and Family Caregivers



Rebekah Jamieson-Craig

This combined manual and workbook allows clinicians to develop and run an 'Understanding Brain Injury' group-based intervention for the families of patients who have suffered moderate to severe brain injury. This is a specific group-based course useful for family groups with patients who are in hospital or early discharge. Taking a psycho-educational and CBT solution focused approach, the manual guides the facilitator through each session, outlining what should be focused on, giving suggestions for talking points, and enabling the group to become a lively, interactive unit in which the members share their own experiences and gain insight and caregiving coping strategies.

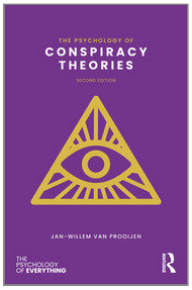
The Psychology of Conspiracy Theories



Jan-Willem van Prooijen

Series: The Psychology of Everything

Who believes in conspiracy theories, and why are some people more susceptible to them than others? What are the consequences of such beliefs? Has a conspiracy theory ever turned out to be true? The Psychology of Conspiracy Theories debunks the myth that conspiracy theories are a modern phenomenon, exploring their broad social contexts, from politics to the workplace. Updated throughout and now featuring examples from the Covid-19 pandemic and the 2021 Capitol Hill riots, this new edition of The Psychology of Conspiracy Theories shows us that while such beliefs are not always irrational and are not a pathological trait, they can be harmful to individuals and society.

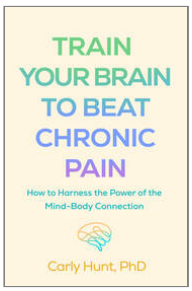
Train Your Brain to Beat Chronic Pain

How to Harness the Power of the Mind-Body Connection



Carly Hunt

Psychologist Carly Hunt has devoted her career to understanding chronic pain--what causes it, how it keeps going long after the body has healed from injury or illness, and, most crucially, how sufferers can reclaim their lives. Drawing on state-of-the-art neuroscientific research, Dr. Hunt shows how a range of proven interventions can help sufferers not only cope with pain, but actively reduce it. This concise guide is packed with information about brain training techniques, lifestyle changes that target inflammation and other pain triggers, self-care and support resources, and conventional and complementary medicine approaches that readers can weave into their own integrative care plan.

Global Impacts on Childhood Social Development

Building Resilience Amid Conflict, Environmental Degradation, and Climate Change

Charles N. Oberg , Hopewell R. Hodges

Series: International Texts in Developmental Psychology

The book explores both the direct harms of these crises as well as those caused indirectly including family separation, straining caregiving relationships, loss of cultural resources, and the harming of children's self-efficacy and emotion regulation abilities. Including case studies from the last few decades, the authors demonstrate the interconnectedness of seemingly disparate systems such as soil health, family cohesion, individual coping skills, nutrition availability, and economic policy, all with an eye to the urgent developmental processes unfolding within and around the child.

Comparative Learning and Cognition

Mauricio R. Papini Texas Christian Uni, Kenneth J. Leising Texas Christian Uni

Comparative Learning and Cognition provides a comparative analysis of the vast landscape of experimental and field research on learning, cognition, and behavior, with an emphasis on nonhuman animals. This field has advanced significantly in the last 20 years and while research is still firmly grounded in the study of behavior, the principles of learning and cognition are now highly interconnected with research from neuroscience and human cognition. This book offers a comprehensive coverage strongly based in the study of behavioral plasticity that integrates principles and data from evolutionary, neuroscience, and comparative approaches in its analysis of topics.

The Psychological Quest for Meaning

Edited by Kentaro Fujita The Ohio State University, United States, Ayelet Fishbach University of Chicago, United States, Nira Liberman Tel Aviv University, Israel

How do we transform scattered experiences into a coherent narrative? What drives us--consciously or unconsciously--to seek patterns, purpose, and understanding? This is the first volume explicitly devoted to the creation of psychological meaning, which has not been systematically defined and studied until recently. Leading authorities from multiple subdisciplines of psychology explore the mechanisms by which humans figure out the world around them, find direction in personal striving, and make sense of the self and one's life. Cutting-edge theories, methods, and findings are clearly explained, as is the key role of meaning making in the functioning of both individuals and societies.

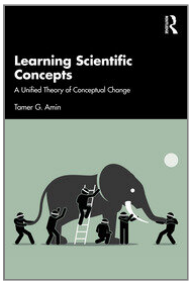
Learning Scientific Concepts

A Unified Theory of Conceptual Change



Tamer G. Amin American University of Beirut, Lebanon

Understanding important scientific concepts like matter, energy, force, and species is central to scientific literacy. But how do we learn scientific concepts? This book explains what research across distinct theoretical perspectives has taught us, then cuts through the diversity to offer a novel integrated account and a unified theory of conceptual change. This book serves as a comprehensive guide for researchers, advanced students, and practitioners, and suggests a way forward for researchers and offers practitioners a coherent and comprehensive story of what kind of instruction and curricular design is effective and why.

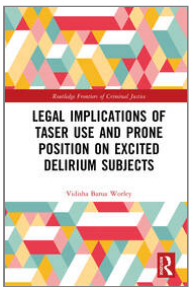
Legal Implications of Taser Use and Prone Position on Excited Delirium Subjects



Vidisha Barua Worley

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Criminal Justice

Using case law, this book explores the controversial issues associated with excited or hyperactive delirium with severe agitation, including the appropriate use of tasers, and the inhumane practice of applying bodyweight pressure on subjects by placing them face down in the prone position, depriving them of the ability to breathe. Legal Implications of Taser Use and Prone Position on Excited Delirium Subjects will be of interest to legislators, attorneys, judges, police agencies, correctional facilities, and graduate level students in criminal justice, law, and the social sciences.

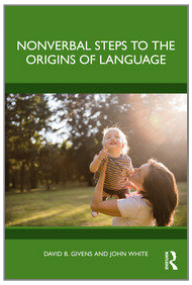
Nonverbal Steps to the Origins of Language



David B. Givens , John White

This book examines the origin and development of human language through the seemingly paradoxical lens of nonverbal communication. Taking an evolutionary stance, it identifies and explores 15 sequential nonverbal steps that cumulatively enabled modern linguistic communication in Homo sapiens. Exploring diverse topics including chemical messaging, audio-visual messaging, emotional signaling, binocular vision, facial expressions, pointing behaviors, object manipulation, ancient tool-making, and food sharing, this fascinating intellectual journey is a must-read for students of nonverbal communication from psychology, linguistics and anthropology backgrounds.

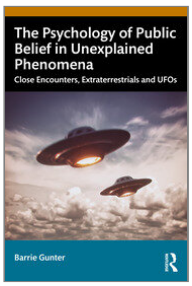
The Psychology of Public Belief in Unexplained Phenomena

Close Encounters, Extraterrestrials and UFOs



Barrie Gunter University of Leicester, UK

This groundbreaking book explores the fascinating psychology behind public beliefs in extraterrestrial visitors and UFOs (unidentified flying objects, now often termed Unidentified Aerial Phenomena). Drawing on extensive opinion poll and academic research data from around the world, Barrie Gunter delves into the complex psychological processes that shape our interpretations of ambiguous experiences. The analysis reveals how psychological factors profoundly influence our beliefs about extraterrestrial life.

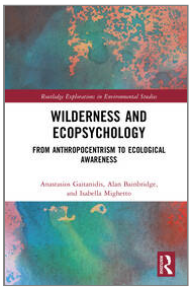
Wilderness and Ecopsychology

From Anthropocentrism to Ecological Awareness



Anastasios Gaitanidis , Alan Bainbridge , Isabella Mighetto

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

Offering a radical interdisciplinary exploration of human-wilderness relationships during our current climate crisis, and drawing on psychoanalytic insight, political critique, and ecological wisdom, this volume diagnoses the profound alienation endemic to late capitalist modernity while delineating pathways toward regenerative forms of being. The book is a valuable resource for scholars, students, and practitioners in environmental humanities, critical psychology, ecotherapy, and posthumanist therapeutic approaches seeking to understand psychological distress as inherently ecological and political.

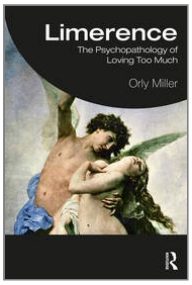
Limerence

The Psychopathology of Loving Too Much



Orly Miller

What happens when longing takes hold and won't let go? When the need for connection becomes obsession, and fantasy begins to blur with reality? This book explores limerence, a complex and often misunderstood psychological state marked by intrusive thoughts, emotional dependency, and an intense longing for reciprocation. What begins as attraction can quickly spiral into fixation, projection, and the gradual unravelling of the self. For therapists, clinicians, and curious readers alike, this is a nuanced exploration of obsessive love and the psychological complexities that shape it.

Applying the Person-Centred Approach to Global, Social and Personal Crises

Contemporary Challenges

Edited by Mairi McMenamin , Kate Munro

Series: Explorations in Mental Health

Against the backdrop of current debates in society about mental health and responses to crises, this edited volume examines the person-centered approach (PCA) as a vital framework for addressing contemporary mental health challenges and promoting psychosocial resilience across diverse cultural contexts. Focusing on the wider application of the PCA beyond the therapy room and the response it offers to current societal challenges, this book will be essential reading for person centred practitioners, counselling researchers and policy makers interested in crises, conflict and social change.

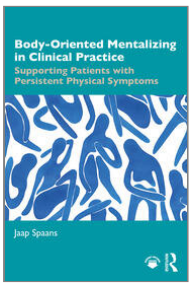
Body-Oriented Mentalizing in Clinical Practice

Supporting Patients with Persistent Physical Symptoms



Jaap Spaans Independent Scholar, the Netherlands

Body-oriented mentalization-based therapy (B-MBT) helps patients link physical signals to their inner experiences, such as thoughts, emotions, and memories, allowing them to become aware of previously unrecognized bodily sensations and internal responses. This book explores how B-MBT may be used to provide therapeutic support to patients with severe Persistent Physical Symptoms (PPS). Body-Oriented Mentalizing in Clinical Practice is an essential read for any practitioner who wants to learn more about treatment options for patients experiencing severe PPS. It will be of particular interest to (para)medical professionals, mental health specialists and non-verbal therapists.

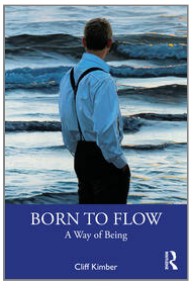
Born to Flow

A Way of Being



Cliff Kimber

Born to Flow® (BTF) is an invitation to rediscover flow, not as a fixed theory, but as a lived, evolving experience. Blending personal insight, practical wisdom, and inspiration from thinkers like Alan Watts, Bruce Lee, Rick Rubin, George Kelly and Joseph Campbell, BTF explores flow as something you curate, not control. Like water shaping rock, flow emerges through sustained engagement. Insight, tools, and reflective practices offer a fresh hypothesis, guiding leaders, coaches, and creatives toward meaningful, grounded action. Applications include flow-aligned habits, navigating resistance, and creating environments for deep work.

In Coaching the Unconscious: A Jungian Approach to Working with Symbol, Laurence Barrett explores how coaches can begin to work with symbol as part of their practice, blending the key principles of Jungian psychology with case studies and practical applications. This valuable new resource will be of particular interest for experienced coaches seeking to deepen and extend their practice, as well as coaches who have begun to explore Jungian psychology and are looking for practical ways in which its concepts can be applied. It would also be appropriate for students of coaching and Jungian psychology.

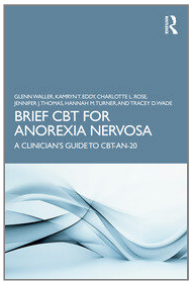
Cognitive-Behavioural Therapy for Anorexia Nervosa

A Clinician's Guide to CBT-AN-20



Glenn Waller , Kamryn T. Eddy , Charlotte L. Rose , Jennifer J. Thomas , Hannah M. Turner , Tracey D. Wade

This book presents CBT-AN-20, a newly-developed briefer form of Cognitive-Behavioural Therapy (CBT) for anorexia nervosa, designed to treat individuals in 20 sessions, helping clinicians to offer effective therapy to more patients and enabling patients to move more quickly towards recovery. CBT-20-AN's pragmatic structure supports its delivery by both experienced therapists and those newer to the field who are practicing under expert supervision. This book is a 'must read' for all levels of practitioners from all disciplines who work with eating disorders.

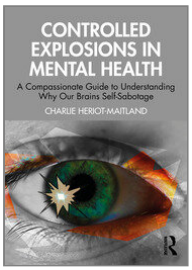
Controlled Explosions in Mental Health

A Compassionate Guide to Understanding Why Our Brains Self-Sabotage, Self-Criticise, and Self-Harm



Charlie Heriot-Maitland

Have you ever wondered why your brain self-sabotages? Or why your actions seem self-defeating or destructive? This book explores how our brains have evolved to favour survival over mental well-being – creating 'controlled explosions' – and provides practical ways to understand, acknowledge and diffuse them. This book supports the path to self-awareness, helping the reader take control of their own struggles with insight, care and compassion. It's a must-read for any reader looking to better understand their mental health and wellbeing.

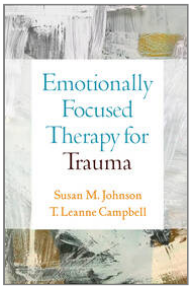
Emotionally Focused Therapy for Trauma



Susan M. Johnson University of Ottawa (Emeritus); Alliant International University, Canada, T. Leanne Campbell International Center for Excellence in Emotionally Focused Therapy (ICEEFT), Canada

This innovative clinician's guide shows how emotionally focused therapy (EFT) is ideally suited to target core elements of recovery from common impacts of chronic, cumulative, or acute trauma. EFT pioneer Susan M. Johnson and leading EFT trainer T. Leanne Campbell provide an intervention framework and vivid clinical examples illustrating their attachment-informed, experiential approach. Using dance--in particular, the Tango--as a metaphor for what happens in session, the book takes therapists move by move through the three stages of EFT with individuals or couples affected by the echoes of trauma. End-of-chapter reflection questions and learning exercises enhance the book's utility.

Gender, Sex and Relationship Diversity Therapy

Edited by Dominic Davies , Silva Neves , Antonio Prunas

This seminal book is the original and definitive text presenting Gender, Sex & Relationship Diversity Therapy (GSRD Therapy) as its own therapeutic rather than simply a set of techniques or "add on" to other modalities in working with LGBTQ+ clients and other marginalised populations. The book will be a critical resource for clinicians worldwide, particularly those working with, or interested in working with populations who do not fit the dominant "norm" of heteronormativity, mono-normativity and those who are gender-expansive.

IFS-Informed EMDR

Creative and Collaborative Approaches

Edited by David Polidi Private practice, Massachusetts, USA

IFS-Informed EMDR makes the case that the integration of these two influential therapy models creates something greater than the sum of its parts. It's a book that can be used as a resource for therapeutic educational and training programs and as a supplement for people already familiar with at least one of these models. Each chapter offers wisdom and practical guidance that will benefit anyone interested in learning the theoretical framework and practical applications of uniting EMDR and IFS for trauma healing.

Psychodynamic Diagnostic Manual, Third Edition

PDM-3

Edited by Vittorio Lingiardi Sapienza University of Rome , Italy, Nancy McWilliams "Rutgers University, United States"

Fully updated with 70% new material, PDM-3 presents important advances in multiaxial mental health diagnosis from a psychodynamic perspective, in dialogue with neuroscientific and cognitive-behavioral perspectives. Used worldwide, this authoritative manual offers an empirically based, clinically useful alternative or supplement to DSM and ICD descriptive and symptom-oriented diagnoses. It guides the practitioner to develop a multilayered dimensional understanding of each patient, leading to a rich case formulation and flexible treatment plan. Including jargon-free descriptions and clinical examples, PDM-3 is restructured to follow development chronologically, from infancy to old age.

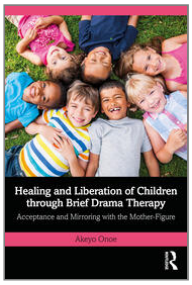
Healing and Liberation of Children through Brief Drama Therapy

Acceptance and Mirroring with the Mother-Figure



Akeyo Onoe

Onoe introduces a new approach in brief drama therapy for children called Improvisational Drama of Acceptance and Mirroring (IDAM). Developed in Japan, it can be used with children in large groups, making it a time and cost effective therapy tool for therapists to add to their toolkit. This book is the first to present a brief drama therapy approach developed in Asia and though it focuses on mother-child relations in Japan, it is connected to all cultures in principle, and will help increase readers' cultural competency and humility. The content includes practical applications of IDAM and is a great tool for training therapists.

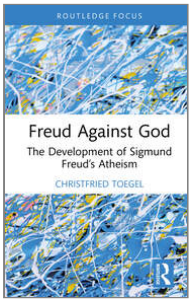
Freud Against God

The Development of Sigmund Freud's Atheism



Christfried Toegel

Series: History of Psychoanalysis

Freud Against God traces the development of Freud's atheism, from his youth through to The Man Moses and the Monotheistic Religion, published in 1939. Christfried Toegel takes a largely chronological approach, tracing how biographical developments in Freud's life and political events gradually led to his conviction that it is "a greater risk if we maintain our present attitude to religion than if we give it up." Written by a leading Freud scholar, this book provides a compact overview of Freud's atheism. Freud Against God will be of great interest to academics and scholars of Freud and religion.

Decolonizing C. G. Jung

An Amazonian Myth as a Decolonial Option to Jungian Studies

Hannah Armbrust

Series: Advances in Mental Health Research

This book puts forth a 'decolonial option' to C. G. Jung's work as part of a new overview on his thoughts and writings, offering a novel interpretation of his theories through indigenous mythology. Using myths, and specifically an archetypal story from the Huni Kuin (also known as Kaxinawa) people, it examines these narratives conceived from an emotionally charged experience, and conceptalizes them as an important psychic archive to help people make sense of raw emotions.

Child-Led Therapy for Children with Complex Trauma

Just Playing?

Gita Ingram , Susie Reade , Annie Green

Taking an occupational therapy perspective, this book provides a resource for practitioners from many disciplines working with children who have experienced complex trauma. Readers are reminded of the damage which has happened to these children and the challenges faced by professionals when communicating with them. An essential text for any therapist working in the field of children's mental health, this book provides readers with an effective approach in their clinical work with children and their families, bringing together an understanding of trauma, psychodynamic theory and play.

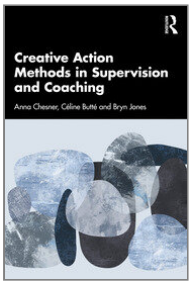
Creative Action Methods in Supervision and Coaching



Anna Chesner London Centre for Psychodrama, UK, Céline Butté Independent Scholar, UK, Bryn Jones Royal Central School of Speech and Drama, University of London, UK

Creative Action Methods in Supervision and Coaching provides an accessible yet informative introduction to the key philosophy, theories and techniques for effective creative supervision practice. Co-authored by three experienced creative supervisors, the book investigates and answers key questions such as "What are action methods?" and "Why use creativity in supervision?" to highlight how creative supervision works and why it matters. It is a core reference for trained supervisors who are wishing to inject a more creative approach into their work and for those undertaking a training in clinical and process supervision who have an interest in embodied and creative interventions.

The Routledge International Handbook of Art Therapy Practice

Edited by Margaret Hills de Zárate Queen Margaret University, UK, Diane Waller Goldsmiths University of London, UK, Claire Louise Vaculik IATE/UEL, UK

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

This book offers a snapshot of the international state of the art in art therapy. The range of work included does not come from one school, theoretical approach, or one type of creative practice, but instead shows the inherent ability of the art therapist to see what is present and to adapt, flexibly and creatively, to meet the unique needs of people and contexts. This book is essential for students and professionals of art therapy, drama, dance movement, and music therapy.

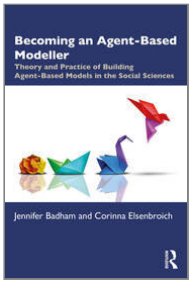
Becoming an Agent-Based Modeller

Theory and Practice of Building Agent-Based Models in the Social Sciences



Jennifer Badham , Corinna Elsenbroich

Becoming an Agent-Based Modeller covers the theory and practice of agent-based modelling (ABM) from a novice to intermediate level. Structured to mirror a course, the book takes readers through the full development of an agent-based model, from research question, conceptualisation and design of the model, through to what to do when your model is finished. With pedagogical tools including key discussion points, illustrations, and highlighted concepts, this is an ideal resource for courses on ABM, and for postgraduate students, and researchers in the social sciences and beyond, who wish to develop their skills in relation to agent-based modelling.

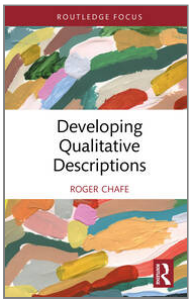
Developing Qualitative Descriptions



Roger Chafe

Developing Qualitative Descriptions presents a straightforward approach for producing academically rigorous descriptions using qualitative data. This book, the first focused solely on qualitative description, is accessible to readers with no prior background in qualitative research. It provides sufficient guidance for you to complete an entire research project. What do nurses see as the barriers to improving care? What process do customers go through to buy a product? What are parents' views of a new educational policy? These are the types of important research questions this book will help you answer.

Performing Stragismo and Counterspectacularisation

Italian Right-Wing Terrorism and its Legacies

Irene Ros

Performing Stragismo and Counterspectacularisation interrogates the role of spectacularity in shaping public discourse, tracing how power and media mobilise violence into a visual and rhetorical regime that leaves deep imprints on collective memory. In response, the book proposes counterspectacularisation: a repertoire of critical strategies developed by the public and by performance-makers to resist or reframe the spectacle of terror. Through a mix of theoretical reflection, close analysis of performance case studies, and four original artworks created by the author, the text explores how performance can respond ethically to silences and fractures in memory.

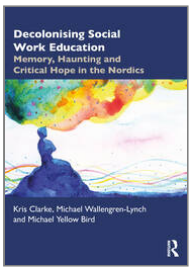
Decolonising Social Work Education

Memory, Haunting and Critical Hope in the Nordics



Kris Clarke University of Helsinki, Finland, Michael Wallengren-Lynch , Michael Yellow Bird University of Manitoba, Canada

In a world gripped by intersecting crises and deepening inequalities, can social work break free from its colonial entanglements to imagine a more just and compassionate future? Drawing on examples from the Nordic context, it offers a bold vision for social work rooted in justice, equity, and ecological interconnectedness. With humility, reflection, and collective imagination, it charts a path toward a liberatory future where social work becomes a force for healing and transformation.

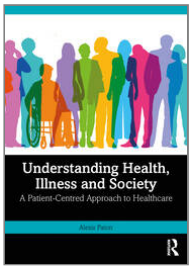
Understanding Health, Illness and Society

A Patient-Centred Approach to Healthcare



Alexis Paton

This accessible book shows how social structures and social norms shape both individual and collective health. It provides readers with an insightful understanding of the relationship between society, health and illness, and highlights issues to inform a progressive, patient-centred approach to contemporary healthcare. Guided by the fundamental principle that everything in a society has some effect or impact upon its health, and assuming no prior knowledge of the social sciences, this is the ideal book for healthcare students across nursing, medicine, midwifery and pharmacy, as well as anyone interested in the relationship between health and society.

Health Benefits of Asparagus racemosus (Shatavari)

A Comprehensive Guide to the Medicinal and Nutritional Potential of Shatavari

Edited by Debasis Bagchi , Kiran Bhupathiraju , Samudra Prosad Banik

This vast edited collection details the ethnobotany, phytochemistry, pharmacognosy, and therapeutic benefits of Asparagus racemosus (Shatavari) used in India as a phytomedicine for the alleviation of symptoms found in various conditions and diseases in humans. It comprehensively details various therapeutic potential applications including antioxidant, antidiabetic, and anti-aging properties, women's health, gastrointestinal health, immune competency enhancement, neurological conditions, and depression. Designed for scientists in natural product research, complementary and alternative medicine, dietitians and nutritionists, food scientists, and other health professionals.

Individualized Treatment Strategies in the Radiotherapy Era

No-RT and Beyond RT

Edited by Shrikant Khare , Rahul Jain , Rahul Sapate , Vishal Gulecha

Radiation therapy has over the years had both remarkable successes in saving lives and a number of silent struggles for the patient. This text is not about turning away from radiation therapy; it's about using it thoughtfully and recognizing that not every patient needs the same path. In an era where oncology is moving rapidly toward personalization, radiation therapy should have evidence-driven use

Nutraceuticals in Management and Prevention of Diabetes

Edited by Raj K. Keservani , Prashant Kumar , Dheeraj Chitara

Series: AAP Advances in Nutraceuticals

Provides a groundbreaking exploration into the fascinating intersection of nutrition and pharmaceuticals in diabetes care. In the face of an escalating global diabetes epidemic, this book provides a comprehensive and up-to-date resource that transcends traditional approaches to managing and preventing this prevalent health condition. It examines the current landscape of diabetes, emphasizing the urgent need for innovative and accessible solutions. It also looks at the latest research findings, offering readers a deep dive into the scientific mechanisms by which nutraceuticals impact glucose metabolism, insulin sensitivity, and other pivotal factors in diabetes management.

Making a Good Doctor

Sources of Strength and Wisdom

Edited by Edvin Schei University of Bergen, IGS, Norway, Iona Heath , Peter Dorward , Caroline Engen University of Bergen, Norway

We can all find ourselves lost from time to time— whether we are near the beginning, the middle, or the ends of our professional lives. Doctors are no exception. 'Making a Good Doctor' addresses core questions which lie at the heart of what is to be a doctor. What is our work for? How do we learn to be good at it? How do we respond to suffering? How do we sustain that— survive, even flourish? How do we resist those innumerable forces that undermine our fundamental purpose? What is it, the 'right stuff', of medicine?

Mastering the Hidden Curriculum

Unlocking Success in Medical Training

Vance T. Lehman

Medical students and residents are immersed in a busy world with unspoken expectations, invisible challenges, and other influences that comprise a hidden curriculum. This book provides a deeper understanding of this complex system, unique "insider" perspectives, and practical advice. To do this, it provides a platform built on applied sociology, history, organizational psychology, and science that reimagines how to manage medical training. This book seeks to level the playing field by demystifying the hidden curriculum, enabling medical trainees to achieve their full potential using well-defined effective strategies.

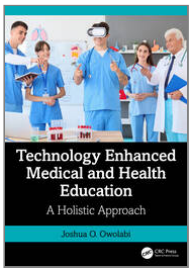
Technology Enhanced Medical and Health Education

A Holistic Approach



Joshua Owolabi

Technology has immense potential to advance medical and health education, medical practice, and to improve greatly the experiences of learners and service receivers. However, many medical and health educators currently do not have the requisite skills, exposure and capacity to use the advanced and relatively sophisticated technologies currently available to add value to student and trainee experiences. This new book provides a much-needed standard text on the effective use of technology for all educators involved in teaching medical students and other health professions globally.

Practical Computed Tomography (CT) Guide for the Small Animal Orthopaedic and Neurosurgeon

Edited by Ingrid Gielen Ghent University, Merelbeke, Belgium, Henri van Bree Ghent University, Merelbeke, Belgium

More clinics and large practices are investing in Computed Tomography (CT) equipment, meaning veterinary surgeons are often confronted with unfamiliar technical challenges like positioning and handling of the equipment. Even after obtaining the CT images, the interpretation can often be confusing. Split into two parts, looking first at the principles of CT and then drilling down to specific procedures by body region, this book is packed with over 200 high quality images, practical protocols and easy-to-locate information. It provides much needed support in choosing the right equipment, providing the exact protocol and coming to a final diagnosis.

Principles of Animal Behavior

Mechanisms, Ecology, and Applications in Veterinary Science

Edited by Tanmoy Rana

This textbook on animal behavior is designed for advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students in veterinary science, animal science, and zoology and offers an integrated view of behavioral biology, bridging classical ethology, cognitive neuroscience, and ecological adaptation with practical veterinary applications. The initial chapters provide foundational aspects such as orientation, motivation, and communication before moving into core themes of learned behavior, cognition, social dynamics, reproduction, and courtship.

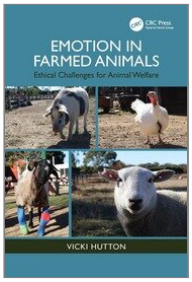
Emotion in Farmed Animals

Ethical Challenges for Animal Welfare



Vicki Hutton Australian College of Applied Psychology

This book seeks to bring change through stories of individual animals now living on farmed animal sanctuaries. Each chapter looks at a particular species' entwined history with humanity as well as the biological and neurological structures that unequivocally confirm their ability to experience positive and negative emotions. This aspect is brought to life through the stories of individual animals living the good life after rescue and rehabilitation. This book will be of interest to those studying or working in animal ethics, welfare and law; veterinary science; running a sanctuary; or simply seeking to understand more about the animals with whom we share this planet.

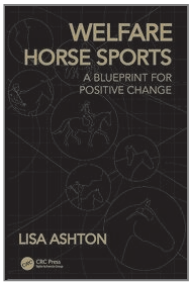
Welfare Horse Sports

A Blueprint for Positive Change



Lisa Ashton Equicoach.Life

In this timely and transformative book, equine educator and welfare advocate Lisa Ashton offers an evidence-based approach to the use of horses in sport. She presents a compelling blueprint for integrating welfare within the very heart of equestrian practice. Through a clear and actionable 'welfare map', Ashton guides riders, coaches and trainers who are ready to shift their mindsets and skillsets toward more ethical, sustainable approaches. Rather than treating welfare as an add-on, she introduces the concept of welfare horse sports: a model where equine well-being is foundational, not optional.

Biochemistry

An Organic Chemistry Approach

Michael B. Smith University of Connecticut, Storrs, USA

Reactions in biochemistry can be explained by an understanding of fundamental organic chemistry principles and reactions. This paradigm is extended to biochemical principles and to a myriad of biomolecules.The text provides a framework for understanding various topics of biochemistry including the chemical behavior of biomolecules, enzyme activity and more. Using several techniques to develop a relational understanding, including homework, this text helps students fully grasp and better correlate the essential organic chemistry concepts with those concepts at the root of biochemistry.The goal is to better understand the fundamental principles of biochemistry.

Experimental Evolution

The Making of a Modern Science

Tony Dean , Dan Dykhuizen

The book shows how well-designed experiments can be used to test evolutionary theory decisively. The focus is on microbes, their small size, rapid reproduction in chemically defined environments, ease of manipulation and stability in long-term storage make them ideal subjects for laboratory experiments. Its organization also facilitates outsiders entering the field as it closely follows the biological siloes, separating molecular phenomena from ecological phenomena, while clearly delineating how these levels interact to produce. This is a valuable resource for anyone interested in natural selection, evolutionary process and insights from approaches not familiar in their own fields.

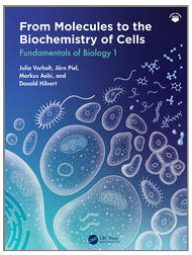
From Molecules to the Biochemistry of Cells

Fundamentals of Biology 1



Julia Vorholt , Jörn Piel , Markus Aebi , Donald Hilvert

This textbook introduces biology as an interdisciplinary science, linking physics and chemistry to biological processes. Based on an evolutionary narrative, the focus is on the molecular composition and biochemistry of cells. By grounding biology in its molecular foundations, this approach reveals unifying principles underlying life's diversity and provides a conceptual framework for biological complexity. Core concepts include macromolecular structure and function, information encoding and decoding, and universal principles of energy conversion. This book is designed for students seeking an integrated introduction to biology that connects molecular mechanisms to cellular structures.

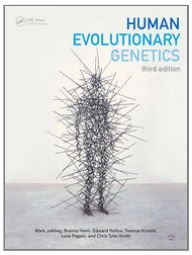
Human Evolutionary Genetics



Mark Jobling University of Leicester, UK, Edward Hollox University of Leicester, UK, Toomas Kivisild University of Cambridge, UK, Chris Tyler-Smith The Wellcome Trust Sanger Institute, UK, Luca Pagani , Brenna Henn

Human Evolutionary Genetics reaches its third edition at a time when sequencing and analyzing whole genomes has become rapid, affordable, and routine. This new and completely revised edition makes sense of this rich information, tying it into other sources of evidence from paleontology, archaeology, and linguistics. The book takes readers on a journey from the prehistoric origins of our ancestors through to the historical era. It embraces genomewide approaches throughout while explaining the contribution of studies of single genes and loci. Each chapter concludes with review questions, allowing students to test their understanding of chapter content.

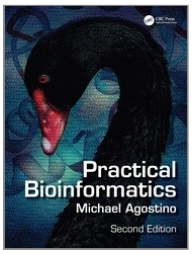
Practical Bioinformatics



Michael Agostino Merrimack College, USA and Pfizer Inc., USA

Practical Bioinformatics is designed as an introduction to bioinformatics sequence analysis. There is heavy emphasis on the steps required to perform bioinformatics analysis to answer biological questions. The book contains many exercises such as database searches, protein analysis, and data interpretation to complement the straightforward and practical topics. The chapters are focused on DNA, RNA, and protein sequence analysis—frequently performed subsets of the field of bioinformatics—taking the reader through the commonly asked question "what can I learn about this sequence?"

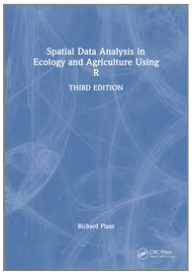
Spatial Data Analysis in Ecology and Agriculture Using R



Richard E. Plant University of California, Davis, USA

Since the publication of the second edition of Richard Plant's bestselling textbook 'Spatial Data Analysis in Ecology and Agriculture Using R', the methodology of spatial data analysis and the suite of R tools for carrying out this analysis have evolved dramatically. This third edition explores both the leading software tools for the analysis of vector and raster data; the first based on sf and associated libraries, the second based on the terra package as it has evolved out of the earlier raster package. The book's practical coverage of spatial statistics, real-world examples and user-friendly approach make this an essential textbook for ecology and agriculture graduate students.

Advances and Applications in Biotechnology

Volume 1 – Prospects of Farm Animals and Future Developments

Edited by Arti Gupta , Ali Asghar Rastegari Falavarjan Branch, Islamic azad University, Isfahan

Series: Prospect of Animal Biotechnology and Future Developments

Advances and Applications in Biotechnology: Volume 1 – Prospects of Farm Animals and Future Developments explores the dynamic and evolving role of livestock in global agriculture, emphasizing sustainable practices, molecular innovations, and emerging technologies. Against the backdrop of increasing environmental pressures and rising food security concerns, this volume highlights the transformative potential of biotechnology in farm animal research and management. The book aims to integrate traditional livestock knowledge with advanced scientific strategies, offering readers a multidimensional view of animal agriculture.

Anti-Coronavirus Marine Bioactive Compounds

Edited by Jen-Tsung Chen

Series: Innovations in Plant Science for Better Health: From Soil to Fork

Emerging approaches based on in silico, in vitro, in vivo, and clinical studies to uncover the potential and the underlying mechanisms of diverse marine bioactive compounds to inhibit SARS-CoV-2 and paves the way for drug discovery devoted to the management of COVID-19. It offers in-depth insights into molecular mechanisms that can inhibit viral/host protein targets of SARS-CoV-2. It highlights the action of marine bioactive compounds based on advanced bioinformatics tools. Chapters discuss the modes of action by selected marine polysaccharides. It proposes their potential role in COVID-19 management.

Antimicrobial Resistance in Wastewater

Edited by Arti Gupta , Ram Prasad

Series: Current Trends in Antimicrobial Research

This book provides a comprehensive evaluation of antimicrobial resistance in wastewater treatment, compiling insights from global experts in fields such as microbiology, environmental biotechnology, civil engineering, biochemistry, environmental science, and public health. It delves into topics including the role of the environment in the development and spread of antimicrobial resistance, chemical analysis of antibiotics in environmental samples, molecular methods to study antimicrobial resistance bacteria and genes, advanced wastewater treatment technologies, the effects of antimicrobial resistance, and the public health implications related to wastewater treatment.

Atlas of European Mammals

Edited by Anthony J. Mitchell-Jones The European Mammal Foundation, Giovanni Amori CNR-IRET, Italy, Boris Kryštufek Natural History Museum, Ferdia Marnell Nat. Parks and Wildlife Service, Svetlana Miteva The Habitat Foundation, Alexandra Sallay BOKU Univ., Laurent Schley Nature and Forest, Johan Thissen European Mammal Foundation, Vladimír Vohralík Chares Univ.

Since 1999, this atlas has proved a valuable resource for mammalogists across the globe. Now thoroughly updated, the new edition has extended the coverage of Europe to include Belarus, Moldova and Ukraine. Specialists have collected distribution data for each country using an agreed species list and a standard mapping system. This landmark volume presents maps of 247 species from 42 countries with more than 125,200 unique records, taking into account recent extinctions to give the most up-to-date picture possible. Accounts for each species include details of taxonomy and variation, habitat, population and international legal and conservation status.

Cancer Hypoxia

Implication in Therapeutics and Precision Oncology

Edited by Sukhes Mukherjee , Suman Kumar Ray

This book reviews the crucial role of hypoxia in initiation and progression of cancer. It explores hypoxia-driven signaling pathways, immune microenvironments, and strategies to combat hypoxia-induced immune suppression. It also explores the impact of hypoxia on cancer stem cells, identifying therapeutic opportunities. It presents techniques for the detection of hypoxic phenotypes, in vivo models for studying hypoxic cancer. The book also explores cutting-edge strategies for drug delivery in hypoxic tumor environments and enhancing drug efficacy within these challenging microenvironments. This book is useful resource for researchers in the field of cancer and for oncologists.

Catfishes, a Highly Diversified Group

Volume 2: Evolution and Phylogeny

Edited by Gloria Arratia , Roberto E. Reis Pontifical Catholic University of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil

Catfishes, a Highly Diversified Group is divided in two volumes. Volume 1 (Their Outstanding Biology; 14 chapters) aims to rectify the incomplete information on the enormous morphological diversity of the group, special habits and adaptations to specific environments, and morpho-functional characteristics of the catfishes. Volume 2 (Evolution and Phylogeny; 18 chapters) deals with evolutionary mechanisms and major evolutionary trends within Siluriformes, investigating new avenues concerning fossil and extant catfishes and relationships within and among families, using morphological and molecular evidence.

Deadly RNA Viruses:

Diagnosis, Detection, and Mitigation of Epidemics and Pandemics

Edited by V. Samuel Raj SRM University, Vishwa Mohan Katoch , Nirmal Kumar Ganguly

This book provides information about the deadly viruses causing the pandemics in the world, and provides clarity about the epidemiology of the diseases. The authors also present information about the available drugs, new drugs discovery/ development and the vaccines against the deadly viruses. It also discusses diagnosis through AI and Machine Learning for early detection, as well as prevention, and treatment of various viruses. This book will include exhaustive material regarding various aspects of virus which has caused pandemic and would be good reference and textbook for students, researchers in biotechnology and microbiology.

Designing Sorghum Genome for NextGen Agriculture

Edited by Dinesh Kumar Saini Dept. of Plant and Soil Science, Texas Tech Univ., Lubbock, TX, S.V. Krishna Jagadish Dept. of Plant and Soil Science, Texas Tech Univ., Lubbock, TX

Series: Depiction and Designing of Plant Genomes

With increasing global food demand and changing climatic conditions, sorghum is an important crop for sustainable agriculture. Its inherent resilience to drought, heat, and poor soils makes it a promising solution for enhancing food security and climate adaptation. To further harness its potential, Designing Sorghum Genome for NextGen Agriculture, explores the latest advancements aimed at improving sorghum's resilience and productivity. This comprehensive resource provides cutting-edge insights into how modern scientific tools and methods are being leveraged to design the sorghum genome for enhanced yield, stress tolerance, and nutritional value.

Ecological and Human Health Impacts of Contaminated Food and Environments

Edited by Ming Hung Wong Consortium on Health, Environment, Education, and Research (CHEER), The Education University of Hong Kong, China

Series: Urbanization, Industrialization, and the Environment

This book discusses linkages between the natural and disturbed chemical composition of the earth's surface and ecological and human health. It reviews the environmental geochemical cycles of natural elements and persistent toxic substances (PTS) in the environment, highlighting the degradation of soil and water resources due to human activities such as extraction and usage of minerals. There is an attempt to provide evidence concerning the health effects of consuming contaminated food, due to frequent consumption of mercury-laden fish. Lastly, sources, fates, and ecological effects of various PTS are presented, including microplastics and associated chemicals.

Eco-Resilience Biology

An Exploration of Climate-Forest Connection

Edited by Amit Kumar North Eastern Hill University, India, Rajesh Kaushal ICAR-Indian Inst. of Soil and Water Conservation, Uttarakhand

The book Eco-Resilience Biology: An Exploration of Climate-Forest Connection offers comprehensive information on the dynamic interactions between forest ecosystems and changing climate regimes. As climate change accelerates, understanding the resilience mechanisms within forest biomes becomes critical for ensuring biodiversity, ecosystem services, and sustainable human livelihoods. This book aims to bridge the knowledge gap by exploring eco-resilience from biological, ecological, and climate perspectives, providing an integrated framework for students, researchers, and policymakers.

Flies in Science and Forensics

Edited by Omkar University of Lucknow, India

Several flies, like Drosophila, are quite useful as model organisms and have been used in research for centuries. They have unraveled several mysteries in the areas of Genetics, Developmental and Evolutionary Biology, Cancer Biology, and more. Similarly, Chironomus species have also been used in cytogenetical studies. In addition, they are crop pests, disease vectors, possess stress tolerance, and are used for environmental monitoring. Sarcophagid flies are not only used in studies of polytene chromosomes but are also vectors of diseases. Besides these, several flies are helpful in solving death mysteries and are excellent tools for forensic investigations.

Generative AI in Neurodegenerative Disorders

Innovations, Views, and Obstacles

Edited by Anindya Nag , Md. Mehedi Hassan , Asif Karim , Kishor Kumar Reddy C

Series: River Publishers Series in Biomedical Engineering

This book delves into the transformative power of AI in the realm of neurodegenerative diseases, covering topics such as ALS, Huntington's, Parkinson's, and Alzheimer's. Generative AI provides new opportunities for early diagnosis, precise therapy, and individualized rehabilitation, which are crucial as these conditions remain major obstacles for healthcare providers and researchers. Researchers, physicians, AI developers, and healthcare professionals will find this book an invaluable resource for understanding how AI is influencing the development of treatments for neurodegenerative diseases.

Food microbiology is the science that comprises the details about various microorganisms associated with food in beneficial and harmful aspects. Spoilage of food by microorganisms has become a problem for many people around the world as foods act as a nutrient source for microorganisms. The past ten years have seen a shift in the field of epidemiology of microbial illness caused by food. This shift has been attributed to the emergence of newly identified food-borne pathogens as well as changes in lifestyle factors such as convenience foods, more adventurous eating, and less time spent preparing meals. It is critical to control food-borne illnesses at every stage of the supply chain.

Hormone and Biofilm Interplay

Mechanisms and Applications

Edited by Rina Rani Ray Department of Biotechnology, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad University of Technology, West Bengal

This book delves into the intricate relationship between hormones and biofilms, highlighting how hormonal signals significantly influence microbial community behaviors and biofilm formation. It presents a detailed analysis of the role of hormones in quorum sensing processes among bacteria. Covering a range of hormones, including peptides, stress, phytohormones, and sex hormones, it explores their specific impacts on biofilm dynamics. Furthermore, the book examines the potential of hormonal drugs to alter biofilm characteristics. It serves as a valuable resource for researchers in microbiology, endocrinology, biotechnology, and environmental sciences.

Microbial Solutions for Sustainable Agriculture

Edited by Ghada Abd-Elmonsef Mahmoud , Bikash Kumar

Series: Advances in Climate Change and Sustainable Engineering

This book explains microbial roles for agricultural sustainability especially under climatic changes including role of microorganisms in sustainable agriculture. Major coverage entails role of microbial enzymatic roles in agriculture, microbial phytohormones as promising plant sustainable bioagents, phosphate, potassium and calcium solubilizing microbes as alternative bio-fertilizers. It introduces microbial solutions to mitigate the biotic and abiotic stress, with high attention to temperature rising, and water limitation due to the climatic changes. This book is aimed at researchers and graduate students in microbiology, agriculture and sustainability.

Phytoadaptogenic Properties of Medicinal Plants

Edited by Meenakshi Garg Bhaskaracharya College of Applied Sciences, Univ. of Delhi, Arun Kumar Gupta , Neha Singh Bhaskaracharya College of Applied Sciences, University of Delhi

Featuring traditional knowledge, the book Phytoadaptogenic Properties of Medicinal Plants offers an insight into diverse medicinal plants with their inherent phytotherapeutic characteristics. Since, the prehistoric era, botanicals have been enlisted at the uppermost ladder in the survival of human existence. Though modern medicinal systems remain vital, at times of challenges or pandemics botanicals continue to serve as front liners, supporting people's health and well-being by regulating the body's inherent five defense systems such as angiogenesis, regeneration, DNA and epigenetics, microbiome, and immune system.

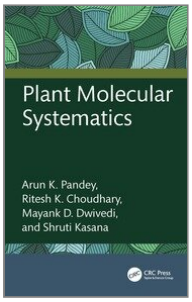
Plant Molecular Systematics



Arun K. Pandey , Ritesh K. Choudhary Scientist-E, Agharkar Research Institute, Maharashtra, Mayank D. Dwivedi Dept. of Botanical and Environ. Sci, Guru Nanak Dev Univ., Amritsar, Shruti Kasana Department of Botany, University of Delhi, New Delhi

Plant molecular systematics is a discipline that uses molecular data to unravel the evolutionary relationships among plant species. This book serves as an introduction to the core principles of plant molecular systematics, presenting the fundamentals in a concise and coherent way. It equips students with both foundational knowledge and insights from the latest research. The book details how molecular data can be leveraged to build phylogenetic trees, which depict evolutionary relationships among plant species. Structured into 18 chapters, the book explores various aspects of molecular systematics in an engaging and stimulating manner.

Plant Secondary Metabolites

Natural Defenses in Disease Management

Edited by Pratima Raypa , Susheel Kumar , Reshma Jadhav , Zuby Ansari , Praneet Chauhan , Vinod Chouhan , Sheetanshu Gupta

This volume presents themes of plant-derived compounds that play a vital role in natural defense mechanisms. Covering their biosynthesis, ecological functions, and practical applications in agriculture, medicine, and biotechnology, this book bridges fundamental plant biochemistry with applied disease management strategies. With a focus on sustainable approaches, it offers insights into how these natural compounds can replace or complement synthetic chemicals in pest and disease control. Plant-Nematode Interactions and Their Management Strategies

Edited by Mohd. Sayeed Akhtar , Khalid Rehman Hakeem

Covers plant-nematode interactions and delves into effective management techniques. First focusing on identification and characterization of plant parasitic nematodes using molecular techniques, the book covers their interactions with plants, focusing on agriculturally important crops as well as ornamental plants. It covers advances in disease control and management strategies of parasitic nematodes on plants and crops, focusing on biocontrol, such as PGPR bio-formulations and other bioformulations. Discussed also are microorganisms present in rhizopsheric soil that can provide frontline attack against the plant-parasitic nematodes.

Polyphenol Nutraceuticals and Healthcare

Edited by Richa Upadhyay Mihir Bhoj PG College, India, Chandrashekhar Singh Banaras Hindu University, India

In a world increasingly focused on natural, plant-based wellness, polyphenols—potent antioxidant compounds derived from Foods, Fruits, Herbs, and Medicinal Plants—are transforming the landscape of modern healthcare and nutrition. This comprehensive volume presents a rich, evidence-based exploration into the science and application of polyphenols in the nutraceutical industry. Whether you're advancing academic research or pioneering next-generation nutraceuticals, Polyphenol Nutraceuticals and Healthcare provides the knowledge, tools, and vision needed to innovate with scientific integrity and ecological responsibility.

Smart Farming, Smarter Solutions

Revolutionizing Agriculture with Artificial Intelligence

Edited by Manojit Chowdhury , Nand Lal Kushwaha , Gourav Dhar Bhowmick

This book presents a comprehensive exploration of how Artificial Intelligence (AI) technologies are transforming modern agriculture. With contributions from experts across the globe, the book covers a wide spectrum of smart farming innovations including AI-powered crop monitoring, precision irrigation, robotics, drones, big data, and supply chain optimization. This volume, designed for researchers, practitioners, students, and policy-makers, showcases cutting-edge developments that promote sustainable and climate-resilient agriculture. It is an essential reference for understanding the intersection of artificial intelligence and agriculture in building future-ready farming systems.

This book is a comprehensive study of the scientific literature on intelligent survival strategies of plants. The book discusses the theoretical and experimental aspects of mechanisms for understanding plant perception and signalling that further demonstrates purposeful behaviour and the active decisions taken by plants. The book will serve as a reference book for undergraduate students interested in an introduction to the subject of plant intelligence. It will also open up a reservoir of information for post graduate students, teachers and researchers by providing insight into this new emerging concept of plant intelligence.

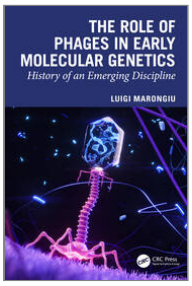
The Role of Phages in Early Molecular Genetics

History of an Emerging Discipline



Luigi Marongiu

As antimicrobial resistance threatens global health, phages have reemerged as critical subjects of scientific inquiry. Yet their pivotal role in the genetic discoveries of the 1940s-1960s remains largely overlooked—until now. The Role of Phages in Early Molecular Genetics: History of an Emerging Discipline bridges history, physics, and virology, offering both scientists and general readers a compelling narrative of how these microscopic entities revolutionized our understanding of life itself.

The Turmeric Genome

Edited by Prasath Duraisamy ICAR-Indian Institute of Spices Research, Kerala, Aarthi Sounderarajan ICAR-Indian Institute of Spices Research, Kerala, Chittaranjan Kole

Series: Depiction and Designing of Plant Genomes

The Turmeric Genome is the first comprehensive compilation of research deliberations focused on whole genome sequencing of turmeric (Curcuma longa L.). This book serves as a valuable starting point for researchers working on turmeric and covers recent advancements in whole genome sequencing, structural and functional genomics, as well as molecular markers and breeding. It also includes fundamental information about the crop itself. This book highlights recent developments in turmeric research, including chapters on bioinformatics tools for turmeric genome and the assembly of complex plant genomes.

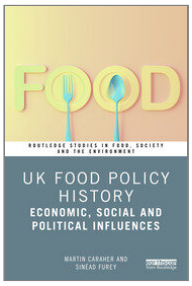
UK Food Policy History

Economic, Social and Political Influences



Martin Caraher , Sinéad Furey

Series: Routledge Studies in Food, Society and the Environment

This book provides an overview of the history of food policy in the United Kingdom, tracing economic, social and political influences from the 1840s to present day. It identifies the key influences across the different eras, both direct and indirect and formal and informal, as well as the key actors, and showcases how understanding the socio-political contexts supports our comprehension of food policy development and its adaptation to modern times. It provides an important introduction to the history of UK food and agricultural policy for students, scholars, policymakers and professionals, as well as those interested in food systems, public health and social policy more widely.

Bioactive Cucurbitacins

Therapeutic Benefits, Toxicity, and Analysis

Edited by Javed Ahamad , Leo M.L. Nollet University College Ghent

This book provides an important guideline for the extraction, isolation, identification, and characterization of bioactive cucurbitacins present in vegetables and fruits. It emphasizes recent preclinical and clinical studies on cucurbitacins role as a lead molecule for the prevention and treatment of various types of cancers, human infections, metabolic syndrome, and their role as antioxidants and anti-inflammatory agents. This book summarizes the current state of knowledge in the key research areas and provides ideas for future scientific research to identify lead molecules "cucurbitacins" from vegetables and fruits and to use them in drug discovery and development.

Pleurotus

From Farm to Pharmacy

Edited by Somanjana Khatua , Krishnendu Acharya

This book examines Pleurotus mushrooms, covering their biology, cultivation techniques, and nutritional benefits. It discusses their classification, anatomy, and life cycle, providing practical guidance for cultivation. Additionally, it explores their rich nutritional content and potential health benefits, including their role in combating chronic diseases and serving as natural antimicrobial agents. The chapters also review the anti-inflammatory, anticancer, hepatoprotective and antidiabetic effects of Pleurotus mushrooms. It also evaluates the global market for oyster mushrooms. This book is for researchers and students of mycology and nutrition.

Nanomedicine and Applications in Cancer

A Complete Guide to Nanomedicine and Cancer Applications

Edited by Imran Saleem , Ahmed AH Abdellatif

Series: Drugs and the Pharmaceutical Sciences

This book provides a detailed and systematic overview of nanomedicine formulations and their applications across the cancer treatment landscape. Beginning with fundamental principles of nanoparticle synthesis, characterization, and application in medicine, the text progresses to explore key nanoparticle platforms. The book further elucidates site-specific drug delivery, detailing passive and active targeting mechanisms through various ligands. Diagnostic applications of nanomedicine are also presented, with a focus on fluorescent nanoparticles, their characterization, biomedical uses, clinical trial status, and limitations in comparison to alternative diagnostic modalities.

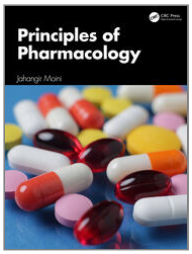
Principles of Pharmacology



Jahangir Moini Eastern Florida State College, USA

Principles of Pharmacology reviews the fundamentals of pharmacology with a focus on the various body systems. Drug classifications, names, sources, and development serve as essential foundations. Furthermore, this volume uniquely discusses that understanding pharmacokinetics, pharmacodynamics, pharmacogenomics, and drug toxicity is crucial before addressing medications, clinical indications, mechanisms of action, adverse effects, and contraindications. Readers will encounter clinical case studies at the end of each chapter, accompanied by questions that provide real-world scenarios. Helpful appendices address high-alert medications, dosage calculations, and answer keys.

Adapting to Change

Federal Policy Dynamics and the Pharmaceutical Industry

Molly Klote

The US pharmaceutical landscape is in the midst of impactful shifts. A series of ambitious, aggressive, and often interconnected federal policy changes—from direct drug price controls and sweeping Pharmacy Benefit Manager reforms to strategic initiatives to reshore manufacturing and rapidly evolving FDA approaches—is creating a new reality for industry leaders, innovators, and strategists. In this analysis, a federal policy expert unpacks the complex forces reshaping how life-saving therapies are researched, developed, manufactured, and delivered.

DNA- and m-RNA-Based Vaccines

An Immunotherapeutic Approach to Cancer

Sonali Sundram , Rishabha Malviya

Explores the therapeutic uses, biological processes and the difficulties related to this novel strategy for cancer immunotherapy. It explores the power of genetic material in the battle against cancer and investigates its many aspects. It presents an overview of cancer immunotherapy. It also looks at the future potential for less intrusive and more effective therapies. It presents a thorough investigation of cancer vaccines based on DNA and m-RNA. It also discusses gene therapy, tumor angiogenesis, and the function of non-coding RNA in treatment resistance.

Medicinal Compounds in Modern Healthcare

From Tradition to Innovation

Edited by Vibhav Gautam , Hemant K. Gautam , Rajiv Pathak , Lalit Kumar

This book reviews the evolution, development, and application of medicinal compounds, beginning with their historical context and advancing to modern innovations. It covers the therapeutic potential of bioactive compounds, the roles of antioxidants and anti-inflammatory agents in chronic disease management, and the use of small molecules in pain and mental health care. The book also covers the immunomodulatory compounds, epigenetic modifiers, and addresses the use of immunomodulatory agents in cancer treatment. It also presents the extraction, profiling, and ADMET evaluation of medicinal compounds. This book is intended for researchers of ethnopharmacology and pharmaceutical sciences.

Handbook of Statistics in Clinical Oncology

Edited by John Crowley Chief Executive Officer, Cancer Research and Biostatistics, Seattle, Washington, USA, Antje Hoering Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, Seattle, Washington, USA, Megan Othus Fred Hutchinson Cancer Center, USA

Since the third edition of this Handbook, significant advances have transformed the field of oncology. Most cancer types now offer multiple treatment options, with immunotherapies and targeted therapies becoming the standard of care. Master protocols, which allow the addition of new treatment arms without requiring new protocols, have gained popularity—not only to expedite the approval process for new therapies but also to ensure that patients receive the most beneficial treatments tailored to their individual needs. This revised edition features contributions from leading cancer trial statisticians, providing expert insights into modern oncology trial design and methodology.

Medicinal Plants of Himalayas

Nutrition, Active Ingredients, and Pharmacological Applications

Edited by Raees ul Haq Dept. of Food Science & Tech., Univ. of Kashmir, Srinagar, Sajad Ahmad Wani Islamic University of Science and Technology, Kashmir, Jasmeet Kour , Shiv Kumar

Medicinal Plants of Himalayas: Nutrition, Active Ingredients, and Pharmacological Applications presents glimpses of present status of metabolite diversity within different medicinal plants from the Himalayan regions. Apart from the metabolite diversity, the book provides glimpses of current isolation techniques and pharmacological activity of the bioactive components. The book tries to plug the gap by focusing on compiling different extraction and isolation procedures, pharmaceutical applications of different active ingredients along with providing the detailed introduction of the plants altogether in a single book.

Processed Excipients in Advanced Drug Delivery

Edited by Sudarshan Singh , Bhupendra Prajapati , Rishabha Malviya , Sonali Sundram

Provides a comprehensive overview of the current state-of-art research on processed excipients and their utilization in fabrication of advanced drug delivery. Beginning with an introduction and overview of processed and co-processed excipients, the volume covers a host of aspects, including novel solid dosage forms, pharmaceutical and biomedical applications, nasal drug delivery, ocular drug delivery, transdermal drug delivery, parenteral medication delivery, pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of processed excipients, and much more.

Recent Advancements in Tuberculosis Drug Discovery

Edited by Vivek P. Chavda , Mahesh T. Chhabria , Divya M. Teli

Overviews the latest progress in this field, covering a wide range of topics, from drug resistance to using AI to enhance treatment methods. Chapters explore TB diagnosis methods, drug resistance mechanisms in TB, and limitations in existing drugs and proposes strategies such as structural modifications, efflux pathway targeting, and host-directed therapies to overcome resistance. It also discusses structure-based drug design (SBDD) as a new technique in tuberculosis (TB) drug discovery and for tackling drug resistance. Recent advances in tuberculosis control, vaccine development, and biomarkers are also covered along with visions for the future of TB drug discovery.

Targeted Nanotechnology

Enhancing the Efficacy of Natural Anticancer drug Therapies

Edited by Anindita Behera College of Pharmaceutical Sciences, School of Health Sciences, Dayananda Sagar University, Kanakpura Road, Bengaluru, India, Santwana Padhi

This book explores the use of nanotechnology for enhancing cancer treatments, focusing on the therapeutic delivery of naturally derived phytochemicals. It presents the nano-delivery systems tailored for potent anticancer agents like camptothecin and paclitaxel, improving their bioavailability and efficacy. The chapters also investigate the co-delivery of natural and conventional anti-cancer drugs. Additionally, it examines nano-delivery systems for essential oils, carotenoids, and other compounds targeting drug-resistant cancer cells and discusses the preventive potential of phytochemicals in cancer.

Mechanisms of Brain Function and Adaptive Potential

Liana Spytska

This book explores the relationships between brain function, hypnotic states, and neural networks, illuminating how these fields deepen our understanding of human consciousness, cognition, and therapeutic possibilities. It integrates historical context with modern research methodologies, demonstrating how advanced neuroimaging techniques transformed the ability to visualize and understand brain activity. The book explores how alterations in brain activity correlate with changes in perception, attention, memory, and emotional regulation, providing insights into the malleable nature of consciousness.

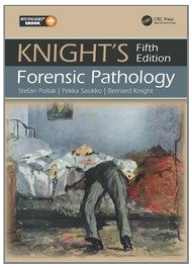
5TH EDITION

Knight's Forensic Pathology



Stefan Pollak , Professor Pekka Saukko , Bernard Knight University of Wales College of Medicine, Cardiff, UK

Knight's Forensic Pathology is a standard reference book worldwide.The 5th edition is comprehensively revised and includes an ebook code.The unambiguous style, practical orientation, and an approach based strictly on scientific evidence together with the experience of the authors all contribute to this success. A cautious and self-critical interpretation of autopsy findings is required for a correct diagnosis, and these findings are the cornerstone for investigating unexplained fatalities. Where possible, macroscopic evaluation should be complemented by visiting the scene of death, pre-autoptic imaging, biochemical and toxicological analyses as well as histological examinations.

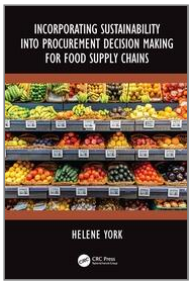
Incorporating Sustainability into Procurement Decision Making for Food Supply Chains



Helene York

Bridging the divide between traditional supply chain theory and the need to incorporate sustainability in supply chain decision-making, this book offers a novel approach to understand modern food systems and how to use procurement to improve them. Business students will gain a critical understanding of sustainability principles and their application in the food sector, while sustainability students will learn the strategic thinking of supply chain management. This guidebook empowers both groups to develop a shared understanding and vocabulary, fostering the interdisciplinary collaboration essential for achieving organizational sustainability and securing a more sustainable future.

Sustainable Biomaterials for Food Packaging

Edited by Sneh Punia Bangar , Kyle D. Dunno , Scott Whiteside

Considering the great market demand for environmentally friendly material-based packaging systems, researchers are developing a suitable solution that considers the sustainability and economic feasibility of the process. This book evaluates the role of emerging biomaterials in enhancing the efficacy of food packaging systems and discusses in detail the various engineering aspects associated with packaging. It is suited for academicians, scientists, students, and food industry professionals; it will also satisfy the needs of researchers, scholars, and students at both the postgraduate and undergraduate level.

Sustainable drying technologies of food

Edited by Pankaj B. Pathare , Hemantha Jayasuriya

Recent approaches in sustainable drying technologies of foods is an updated reference about the fundamentals, applications, and modeling of sustainable energy-based drying systems in the food industry. It includes the economic assessment, quality control and safety parameters of the drying techniques. Sustainable drying uses little or no fossil fuel input and low-cost technologies. This book reviews the alternative sources of energy for drying fresh produce. It includes relevant case studies from some developing countries. The book is meant for researchers and industry experts in food processing, food engineering and agriculture.

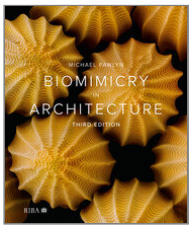
Biomimicry in Architecture



Michael Pawlyn

Nature has long served as a blueprint for striking design. Biomimicry takes this further – harnessing not just natural beauty but the groundbreaking functions and survival technologies that animals and plants have perfected over millennia. With the climate crisis escalating, biomimicry is no longer just an inspiration – it is an imperative. While industries such as manufacturing, transportation and product design have embraced biomimicry as a driver of sustainability, architecture has yet to unlock its full potential.

Image Generation

Artificial intelligence, creativity and design

Edited by Hamza Shaikh

How will AI transform the future of architecture and design? Is it a tool triggering creativity or a threat to human artistry? As AI image generation reshapes the creative world, architects and designers face a critical choice: embrace these new applications or risk being left behind. By exploring the impact of generative AI on design process, this book showcases how these tools can enhance the value of human creativity. Can AI help designers push the boundaries of their craft, or will it replace and automate the very skills that define us?

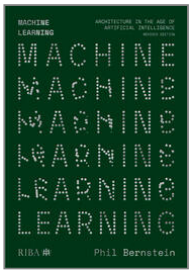
Machine Learning

Architecture in the age of Artificial Intelligence



Phil Bernstein

The advent of machine learning-based AI systems demands that our industry does not just share toys, but builds a new sandbox in which to play with them.' - Phil Bernstein The profession is changing. A new era is rapidly approaching when computers will not merely be instruments for data creation, manipulation and management, but, empowered by artificial intelligence, they will become agents of design themselves. Architects need a strategy for facing the opportunities and threats of these emergent capabilities or risk being left behind. Architecture's best-known technologist, Phil Bernstein, provides that strategy.

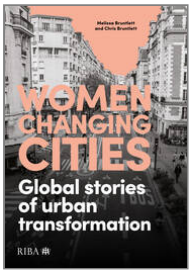
Women Changing Cities

Global stories of urban transformation



Melissa Bruntlett , Chris Bruntlett

The future of cities is female… As cities around the world face mounting crises - climate change, traffic congestion and growing inequality - the need for bold, people-first solutions has never been greater. Enter the women leading the charge. In Women Changing Cities, Melissa and Chris Bruntlett highlight the groundbreaking work of female mayors, planners, advocates and policymakers reshaping urban spaces for the better. From Paris to Bogotá, Manila to Montréal, these leaders are reclaiming streets, reimagining mobility and designing safer, more inclusive public spaces, despite fierce opposition.

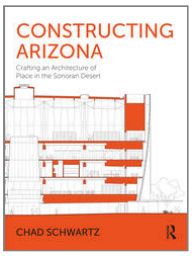
Constructing Arizona

Embracing an Architecture of Place in the Sonoran Desert



Chad Schwartz Southern Illinois University–Carbondale, USA

This book is the first to comprehensively present the architecture of the Sonoran Desert region of Arizona, balancing a breadth of projects with a depth of analysis. Building on over fifty interviews with noted members of the architecture community in Arizona and the critical first-hand analysis of their built work, this book reveals the inherent principles, vocabulary, and influences of the regional architecture while also tying its contemporary makeup to a lineage of constructing in the Sonoran Desert. Given the current state of our planet, these lessons will be of critical importance to communities across the globe that soon may have to adapt to living in similar conditions.

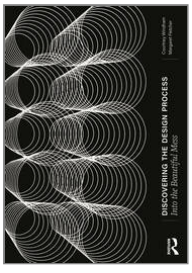
Discovering the Design Process

Into the Beautiful Mess



Courtney Windham , Margaret Fletcher Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama, USA

Designers seek moments of creative bliss when everything aligns, stress dissolves, and decisions flow effortlessly. This book celebrates that vibrant, messy process. Through rich photography of everyday studios and thoughtful conversations with artists, designers, and makers from across disciplines, it offers an intimate glimpse into how ideas are formed and refined. Whether you're a student, an emerging creative, or an experienced practitioner, this book invites you to recognize—and embrace—the unique nature of your own design journey, and find inspiration in the glorious chaos of making.

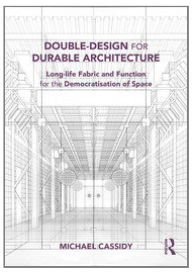
Double-Design for Durable Architecture

Long-life Fabric and Function for the Democratisation of Space



Michael Cassidy

Through the assessment of compatibilities of the physical requirements for buildings serving different uses over time, the book suggests an approach that establishes a long-life infrastructure within which shorter-life and recyclable material may be used in the fit-out to serve each successive use. Over time, the implementation of Double-Design would provide buildings that are more suited to changing needs. This is essential reading for practising architects, those entering the profession, and anyone interested in the built environment's future.

Encounters with Architecture

Insights from a Hundred Places

Howard Davis University of Oregon, USA

This book describes one hundred memorable places that have been important in the architectural career of the author, as a practitioner, teacher and writer. The illustrated essays provide insights from a variety of buildings and places on five continents: from different eras, from the everyday to the famous, from houses to public buildings, and from streets to cities. With hundreds of beautiful photographs, supplemented by helpful diagrams and drawings, the book is organized and written in a way that is accessible to a wide audience and will interest everyone who is fascinated by architecture and cities, including teachers, practitioners and students.

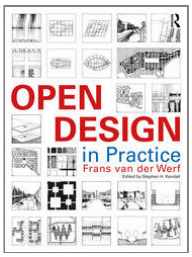
Open Design in Practice



Frans van der Werf

Series: Open Building

Architect and urban planner Frans van der Werf discloses in this book his own experiences as one of the pioneers of the worldwide Open Building approach. In this book he shares his practice over the course of four decades in four Urban Tissue projects and seven Support Structures in the Netherlands and abroad. They still stand today, as exemplars of how this approach can produce affordable user-centric environments of high-quality that balance the Common and the Individual spheres. This book is essential reading for students, architects, urbanists, developers and city authorities who want to consider Open Building for a truly sustainable environment.

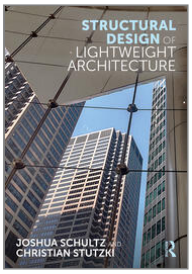
Structural Design of Lightweight Architecture



Joshua Schultz , Christian Stutzki

This survey of lightweight specialty structures provides in-depth case studies supplemented with technical guidance and an overview of fundamental theories. Drawing on almost 75 years of combined professional and academic experience, the authors guide readers through design of lightweight systems: spaceframes, grid shells, cable nets, ETFE membranes, rails, stairs, and canopies. Written for structural architecture students and early career professionals, this book is an essential introduction to the fundamentals of each lightweight structural system.

Creating Sensory Spaces

The Architecture of the Invisible

Barbara Erwine University of Washington, USA

Creating Sensory Spaces celebrates spaces enlivened with sensual richness and provides you with the knowledge and tools necessary to create them. Drawing on numerous built case studies in ten countries and illustrated with over 85 full color images, the book presents a new framework for the design of sensory spaces including light, color, temperature, smell, sound, and touch. Bridging across disciplines of architecture, interior design, engineering, phenomenology and perceptual psychology, this book informs the design of buildings and neighborhoods that reclaim the role of the body and all the senses in creating memorable experiences of place and belonging.

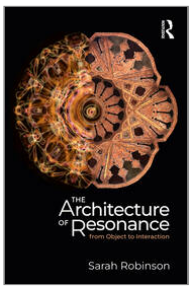
The Architecture of Resonance

From Objects to Interactions



Sarah Robinson

This book carefully details an alternative for thinking and designing that shifts attention from abstract formalism and object orientation to the creation of dynamic interacting fields of affective, tactile, kinaesthetic, ecological and social engagement.The book articulates resonance as a model and metaphor for the way we interact with our environments. Seamlessly combining architecture with cognitive science and neuroscience, environmental and evolutionary psychology, and social theory and anthropology, in clear, direct and engaging prose, this book will be essential reading for all architecture students as well as those in these varied fields.

(Un)Common Precedents in Architectural Design

Edited by Federica Goffi , Isabel Potworowski , Kristin Washco

This book calls for an attentive examination of the uncommon that inspires creativity, prompting a re-examination of both common and marginalised precedents. It addresses a critical need to re-examine architectural precedents, understanding why, how, and what we study to reveal the intentions, transmedia explorations, and referents behind the workings of a more inclusive architectural imagination nurtured in multicultural practices and teaching environments. The book offers an alternative to the compulsion to normalise, universalise, repeat, restate, and re-enact, transforming the documentation of far-removed precedents through first-person experiences.

Architecture as Environmental Media

Edited by Daniel Jacobs

This edited volume explores the agency of environmental media in architectural production. As design disciplines confront the changing landscapes and consequences of climate breakdown, media for communicating socio-environmental relations play an increasingly critical role in defining new narratives for the future of our planet. Exploring architecture and design through the lenses of media theory, environmental studies, visual studies, geography, and landscape, this book will engage students and scholars from a wide range of disciplines.

Climate Responsibility in Business Models

Management, Digital and Technological Perspectives

Adam Jabłoński WSB University in Poznan , Poland

The book provides expertise in strategic climate management in relation to the modern principles of digital and climate transformation examined through the concept of business models. This monograph aims to broadly illustrate the complexity of the issue presented through climate responsibility shaped at the level of business, the economy and society. As part of the presented model, a closed cycle of implementing the principles of climate responsibility in business models focused on management, digital and technological perspectives were identified.

Construct

Large Everyday Architecture

Iain Borden University College London, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

Construct introduces a new category of architecture and engineering in our cities. These structures are highly visible yet often ignored, large-scale and built without traditional designers. They are characterized by substantial technical innovation and expertise, embedded in the everyday lives of thousands of urban citizens, and serve as embodiments of cultural and political meanings. These constructions represent an overlooked but significant aspect of our urban landscape, combining technical advancement with cultural significance despite their often anonymous design origins.

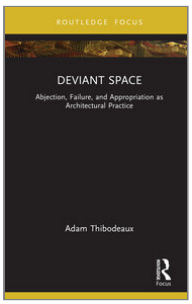
Deviant Space

Abjection, Failure, and Appropriation as Architectural Practice



Adam Thibodeaux

Deviant Space: Abjection, Failure, and Appropriation as Architectural Practice frames architecture as a fragile Symbolic construct, susceptible to appropriation, disruption, and reorientation by deviant bodies. Anchored in phenomenology and queer theory, it examines how spatial practices subvert architectural function, with particular focus on the tactics of men who have sex with men (MSM) in major North American cities during the AIDS epidemic.

Effect of Digital and Climate Changes in the Business Models of Companies

Edited by Adam Jabłoński WSB University, Poland, Marek Jabłoński WSB University in Poznan , Poland

The aim of the monograph is to present a modern and original approach towards designing and implementation of effective solutions that ensure an induction towards positive climate change. The monograph presents the application of digital business models and strategies combining solutions of digital and climate transformation. The monograph presents a set of digital solutions that change the functioning of technical organizations in a multiple crisis environment. Applied technological management supported by elements of automation and robotics will shape the emergence of new climate services.

Heritage at Risk

Improving Resilience and Awareness towards Preservation, Risk Mitigation and Governance Strategies

Edited by Marcello Balzani University of Ferrara, Italy, Federica Maietti University of Ferrara, Italy, Fabiana Raco University of Ferrara, Italy

The international scenario of calamitous events that still characterise all areas of the globe is deepened together with the experiences of the earthquakes and floods that have affected the Pianura Padana area and the central regions of Italy in the last ten years, included in the training project Academy 'After the Damages'. Following the results published in the first volume "Built Heritage in post-Disaster Scenarios", Heritage at Risk aims to continue the debate on recent innovations and advances in risk management, to contribute to the definition of strategies and the implementation of increasingly effective tools in terms of risk mitigation.

Mapping

Narratives, Practices and Spatial Inquiry

Edited by Gihan Karunaratne

Series: Routledge Research in Planning and Urban Design

Mapping has evolved beyond navigation into a method for interpreting spatial, ephemeral, and sociopolitical dimensions of contemporary life. This volume explores how cartographic practices are being reimagined across disciplines to understand and reconfigure urban space. The essays examine mapping as both representational and generative, spanning participatory mapping in informal settlements, film-based documentation of marginalized geographies, embodied cartographies, and data-driven analysis.

Medieval Courtyard Design

Converging Urban Morphologies from Europe to the Middle East

Edited by Khosrow Bozorgi

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

This groundbreaking study examines courtyard architecture across Paris, Florence, Siena, Granada, and Yazd to reveal how the deliberate creation of emptiness—the "bounded void"—functions as architecture's primary generative principle. Moving beyond conventional object-based analysis, the book demonstrates that architecture's essence lies not in built form but in calibrated absence.

Modern Architecture in the Balkans

From Le Corbusier to Tito

Lorenzo Pignatti

Series: Architext

This book is an attempt to comprehend the reasons for modernity in the Balkans, beginning with the famous Journey to the East undertaken by Charles-Édouard Jeanneret in 1911. However, the modernity that developed after the Second World War would not have existed without the figure of Josip Broz Tito. While there is no direct relationship between them, this book presents a series of intersecting relations, beginning with the interpretation of Yugoslavia's cities and architecture, to trace a path that gives this region an unquestionably central position in the international architectural panorama of the twentieth century.

Speculative Architectures after Minoritarian Futurisms

Joel P.W. Letkemann

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

Speculative Architecture after Minoritarian Futurisms is a work of architectural theory which understands architecture as a practice of speculation analogous to science fiction. While it might seem immediately obvious, especially given the discipline's legacy of fantastical invention and commitment to 'the future,' this book argues that this hypothetical conjunction offers a highly sophisticated critical perspective on the discipline, arguing that the only way to deal with the complex challenges of the present is in processes of speculation and ethical commitment to imagining futures evinced in minoritarian futurisms.

Atlas of Green Energy Transitions

Power, Conflict, and Possibilities

Edited by Matthew Seibert

Atlas of Green Energy Transitions: Frontiers of Power, Conflict, and Possibilities employs immersive first-person narrative descriptions and rich imagery to tell the oft-revealing stories of contestation, exploitation, and complication within the landscapes upon which the world's green energy transition depends. In response to these stories, counternarratives propose alternatives to silver-bullet ecomodernism, advocating for just practices and reciprocal relationships with our host landscapes. The book targets an audience of students and practitioners of the built environment while seeking to inspire the inner designer in all readers.

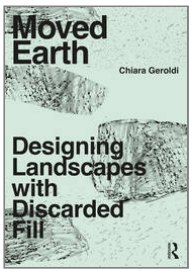
Moved Earth

Designing Landscapes with Discarded Fill



Chiara Geroldi

Moved Earth explores discarded fill to construct designed landscapes from a designer's perspective. This book shows how discarded fill offers opportunities to construct significant designed landscapes, with designers playing a positive role in a multidisciplinary environment. It addresses issues of design, form, and aesthetics; materials and meanings; openness and closure; processes and material movements; technical aspects; and the role of the designer through thirty-one international examples and four case studies. Moved Earth offers readers a unique insight into the opportunities discarded fill offers designers and is essential reading for landscape architects.

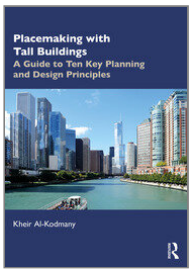
Placemaking with Tall Buildings

A Guide to Ten Key Planning and Design Principles



Kheir Al-Kodmany

This book reconceptualizes tall buildings as civic agents that deliver spatial legibility, cultural significance, and vibrant social interaction by embedding placemaking at the heart of vertical development. Drawing on global case studies, it articulates ten pragmatic planning and design principles that explain how holistic, context-sensitive design can weave vertical structures into their surrounding fabric, fostering inclusivity, environmental responsiveness, and a distinct sense of place. This work equips architects, planners, policymakers, and students with a comprehensive toolkit to transform tall buildings from isolated monuments into dynamic, human-centered environments.

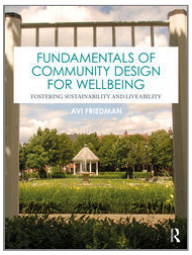
Fundamentals of Community Design for Wellbeing

Fostering Sustainability and Liveability



Avi Friedman McGill University, Canada

Fundamentals of Community Design for Wellbeing addresses the need to rethink the philosophy and form of residential environments due to recent social, economic, environmental and cultural shifts, including depletion of non-renewable resources, elevated levels of greenhouse gas emissions, and climate change. The book highlights planning strategies for liveability and wellbeing of communities from notable international case studies, addressing varied issues including accommodating elderly populations, designing walkable communities, and closing the affordability gap. This book is essential for students of urban planning, architecture and sustainability.

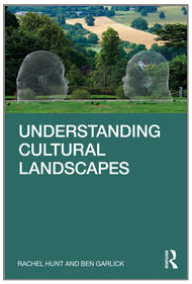
Understanding Cultural Landscapes



Rachel Hunt , Ben Garlick

Understanding Cultural Landscapes provides an introduction to the range of approaches characterising the study of landscape and culture. This textbook discusses the origins, underpinnings, and practical applications of social science and humanities scholarship concerning landscape, and its theorisation. This book will be valuable for both students and educators encountering, or teaching, the study of landscape within the humanities and social sciences for the first time. The incorporation of practical exercises and suggested reading enables the book to supplement independent study or be used as a teaching aid.

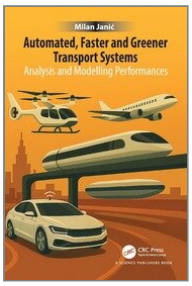
Automated, Faster and Greener Transport Systems

Analysis and Modelling Performances



Milan Janić Delft University of Technology, The Netherlands

Evaluates the performances of existing and future transport systems, based on the level of automation, operating speed, and greening effect. The road-based automated and electric cars, rail-based HSR (High-Speed Rail) and Maglev, air-based UAM (Urban Air Mobility) and supersonic LH2 (Liquid Hydrogen) powered SCAT (Supersonic Commercial Air Transport) and evacuated - HYP (Hyperloop) and submerged ETT (Evacuated Tube Transport) systems are reviewed. The infrastructural, technical, operational, economic, environmental, social, and policy performances are analysed, and analytical models of indicators have been developed.

City, Public Space, and Body

The Embodied Experience of Urban Life

Edited by Mahsa Alami Fariman , Chien Lee , Ahmadreza Hakiminejad , Asma Mehan

Series: Routledge Research in Planning and Urban Design

This book offers a timely and interdisciplinary examination of how bodies experience, shape, and are shaped by urban life, particularly in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic. Bringing together contributions from scholars, artists, and practitioners across diverse geographies, the book explores the entangled relationships between urban space, embodiment, and publicness through a variety of methodological lenses including ethnography, visual and performative arts, and critical urban theory. The book highlights underexplored themes such as gendered vulnerability, spatial justice, post-pandemic public space, and marginalised urban bodies in both Global North and South contexts.

Collective Landscape Futures

Edited by Anushka Athique , Duncan Goodwin , Ed Wall University of Greenwich, UK

This book critically reflects on dominant landscape techniques, discusses landscapes that are marginalised through globalising market forces, and focuses on the collective nature of landscapes–from planetary climates to intimate private spaces. Collective Landscape Futures investigates the common, shared, and public endeavours that produce landscapes. Chapters address varied concerns across diverse geographies, from wilding practices to extractive landscapes and from decolonizing approaches to tools for co-creation. This volume will appeal to scholars and activists working in environmental humanities, landscape studies, and landscape architecture.

Extended Mobility for the City as a Common

Furthering the Right to the City in Global Perspective

Edited by Lucia Capanema-Alvares , Romulo Orrico

Series: Rights to the City

This book offers a novel framework for understanding how urban inhabitants access and experience cities. It invites readers to examine the ways in which stigmatization and socioeconomic barriers combine to restrict access to urban opportunities for marginalized communities. Arguing that the right to the city is inseparable from the right to mobility, this book calls for a radical shift toward a welcoming and solidary city, both in transportation systems and in the inhabitants' destinations. This book is a resource for social science researchers and urban and transportation planning scholars as well as policymakers, practitioners, and activists seeking to foster more inclusive cities.

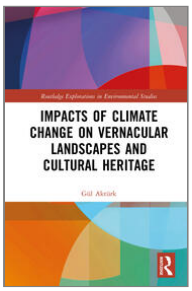
Impacts of Climate Change on Vernacular Landscapes and Cultural Heritage



Gül Aktürk

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

This book reveals the impacts of climate change and anthropogenic interventions on vernacular landscapes as a cultural heritage through an analysis of regional and urban development projects and local-level practices. Vernacular landscapes encompass customs, practices, places, objects, artistic expressions, and values that are innate to a particular place and time, with climate knowledge embedded alongside other environmental, cultural, and societal determinants. Bridging multiple fields, it will be of interest to researchers, academics, and students interested in cultural heritage, climate change studies, environmental studies, architectural and landscape conservation, and planning.

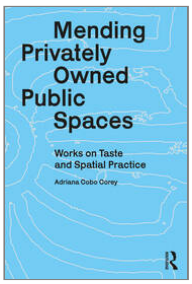
Mending Privately Owned Public Spaces

Works on Taste and Spatial Practice



Adriana Cobo Corey

This book explores how privately owned public spaces (POPS) are presented today as desirable additions to urban redevelopment projects, regardless of their inherently divisive social impact, usually delivered through, amongst other factors, carefully managed aesthetic codes. Providing a brief theoretical framework that covers definitions of spatial practice, participatory and collaborative strategies and exploring intersections between performance, architecture and urban design, the book examines cases from London, New York, Bogota, Ahmedabad and Hong Kong, to illustrate how taste-makers influence POPS and spatial design.

Protests Beyond the Plaza

Everyday Spaces, Urban Morphologies, and Strategies

Edited by Kateryna Malaia , Nathan M. Hutson

The chapters in this volume investigate some of the most important urban upheavals in recent history through different political, social and cultural contexts. Through a global cross-section of case studies, the authors envision the future of the successful urban protest as a whole-society movement in which all aspects of a city's morphology are effectively leveraged. Using interviews, mapping, architectural and planning-scale documentation of urban morphologies, the book traces the development of important protests and the evolution of protest strategy. It will be of interest to architects, urban sociologists, and anyone else interested in how the city shapes resistance.

Vacant Land Regeneration

Novel Strategies for Maximizing Local Impact

Edited by Rui Zhu , Galen Newman

This book provides readers with a comprehensive understanding of vacant land regeneration through the lens of influential research, groundbreaking case studies, and future trends, and equips readers with the knowledge needed to transform vacant spaces into valuable community assets. The book is structured into four key sections: urban policy and classifications; ecosystem services and resilience; remediation and public health; and community engagement. With insights from key researchers and urban planners, this book inspires a transformative approach to urban development. It is an essential resource for both scholars and practitioners in the field of urban regeneration.

Building Information Modeling: Framework for Structural Design

Nawari O. Nawari University of Florida, Gainesville, USA, Michael Kuenstle University of Florida, Gainesville, USA

Building Information Modeling: Framework for Structural Design introduces a structure and architecture synergy (SAS) framework that helps develop and enhance the understanding of the fundamental principles of architectural analysis using BIM tools. Based upon three main components: the structural melody, structural poetry, and structural analysis, along with the BIM tools as the frame enabler, this new framework allows users to explore structural design as an art while also factoring in the principles of engineering.

Management and Future Directions

Edited by Ramsha Khan CEES, India, Saurabh Shukla Uni of Catania, Italy, Preeti Chaturvedi Bhargava CSIR-IITR, India, Paolo Roccaro Uni of Catania, Italy

Emerging contaminants or contaminants of concern, which range from microplastics, industrial chemicals, cosmetics, and pesticides, to pharmaceuticals and pathogens, present unique issues and challenges to communities across the globe. The risk assessment and management of these potential hazards require an integrated, multi-disciplinary approach in connection with the holistic framework of One Health. This book explains the need for collaboration between researchers, policymakers, public health professionals, and other stakeholders to address the serious gaps between emerging contaminants and One Health. It offers practical strategies and solutions for managing emerging contaminants.

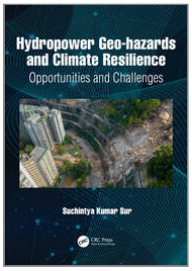
Hydropower Geo-hazards and Climate Resilience

Opportunities and Challenges



Suchintya Kumar Sur Jaipur National University, Jaipur, INDIA

This book focuses on the strategic approaches to create achievable goals via effective interpretation of geology and seismicity of site-specific consideration of hydro project site. It systematically addresses climate change issue that would lead to anticipate, to prepare for, and to respond to the hazardous events or severe disruptions caused by the climate change and to absorb the stress. It explains how hydropower energy is compatible to low carbon trajectory to meet the ambitious goal of Zero Carbon universe. This book is aimed at professionals in hydropower engineering, dam construction, geotechnical and geological engineering.

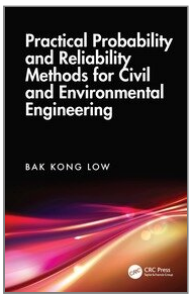
Practical Probability and Reliability Methods for Civil and Environmental Engineering



Bak Kong Low

This lucidly sets out useful probabilistic methods and their efficient implementations across civil engineering, including transportation, hydrosystems, environmental, geotechnical and structural engineering. It serves as a textbook for upper-level undergraduates and beginning graduate students.It makes use of Microsoft Excel's versatile constrained optimization Solver tool, using some simple VBA codes, including FORM, SORM, system reliability, importance sampling, direct MCS, and response surface techniques. Solutions can be downloaded free for hands-on appreciation and deeper understanding. PowerPoint slides based on the book are available for adopting course instructors.

Principles of Reinforced Concrete Design

Mete A. Sozen Purdue University, Toshikatsu Ichinose Nagoya Institute of Technology, Santiago Pujol Purdue University

This new edition presents a mixture of fundamentals along with practical methods and provides the basic concepts required for designing reinforced concrete (RC) structures, emphasizing principles based on mechanics, experience, and experimentation, while encouraging practitioners to consult their local building codes. This new edition includes updated material on slabs, ranging from pragmatic recommendations to detailed solutions based on mechanics and geometry. New examples, illustrations, and exercises have also been added to aid instructors and students. SI units have also been added to help broaden the reach of the book's coverage.

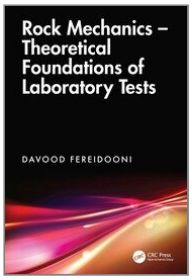
Rock Mechanics

Theoretical Foundations of Laboratory Tests



Davood Fereidooni

Rock mechanics is a multidisciplinary subject that uses the principles of mechanical science to investigate rock engineering behaviour. Rock Mechanics - Theoretical Foundations of Laboratory Tests is the first book that introduces the theoretical foundations of laboratory testing in an analytical manner. This book can be used as a textbook for undergraduate, master's, and doctoral students in engineering geology, civil engineering, geotechnical engineering and mining engineering (rock mechanics). It will also appeal to professionals in consulting engineering companies and rock mechanics laboratories, and to geological, civil and mining engineers.

Advanced Nanohybrids for Sustainable Environmental Solutions

Edited by Weiqing Zhang Guangxi Medical University, China, Firdoz Shaik Vignan's Foundation for Science, Technology & Research, India, Ranjit Pabbati Uni. College of Eng. Sci. and Tech, India

A new class of nanohybrids with organic and inorganic elements exhibits unique and enhanced physical, chemical, and biological properties that are used to achieve sustainable solutions to pressing environmental challenges. This book is focused on the applications of various advanced nanohybrids in different environmental fields. Detailed discussions and case studies explore how these advanced nanomaterials can address critical issues and offer new perspectives with practical approaches. It provides a comprehensive exploration of advanced optical properties, doping effects, and band-gap engineering for environmental applications and uniquely focuses on green hydrogen generation.

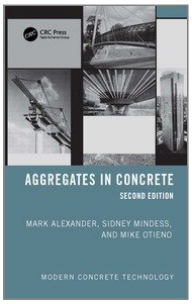
Aggregates in Concrete



Mark Alexander University of Cape Town, South Africa, Sidney Mindess University of British Columbia, Canada, Mike Otieno University of The Witwatersrand, South Africa

Series: Modern Concrete Technology

This gives an overview of aggregate sources, production and availability, and physical, mechanical and chemical properties. This is then applied to plastic and hardened concrete, and mix design, with emphasis on the influence of aggregates on concrete performance. A new chapter deals with sustainability, and also new material on aggregates in specialised rheological mixes. Special aggregates and their applications are discussed; especially the use of recycled aggregates, from CDW and recycled concrete, and aggregates derived from industrial and agro-waste materials, and porous aggregates for internal curing. The main specifications, standards and tests in use are also given.

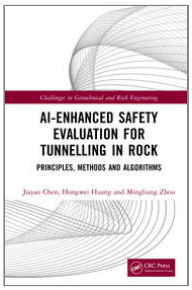
AI-Enhanced Safety Evaluation for Tunnelling in Rock

Principles, Methods and Algorithms



Jiayao Chen , Hongwei Huang , Mingliang Zhou

Series: Challenges in Geotechnical and Rock Engineering

AI techniques for rock tunnel construction offer innovative solutions for assessing rock mass quality and ensuring excavation safety in challenging geological conditions. Cutting-edge contact methods and non-contact methods such as digital photography can both provide continuous geological data during excavation. This can enable refined rock mass classification and sophisticated safety evaluation techniques tailored to complex geological environments. This book provides practical and refined solutions for the construction industry. It offers improved safety, efficiency, and reliability for tunnel projects, and serves as a valuable reference for graduate students and academics.

Battery Technologies for E-Mobility

Innovations, Applications, and Advanced Management Systems

Edited by Akash Samanta , Sheldon Williamson

Series: River Publishers Series in Energy Engineering and Systems

This book is a panoramic view of the innovations propelling the electric revolution. In the ever-evolving landscape of electric mobility, the triumphant fusion of batteries, smart-charging systems, and advanced battery management solutions are of utmost importance. Battery Technologies for E-Mobility unravels the intricate tapestry of battery technologies from their origins in electrochemistry to the cutting-edge of lithium-one and far beyond. It delves deep into the heart of smart charging networks and exposes the symbiotic dance between sustainable energy integration and optimized EV ecosystems.

Construction sites are unique, and characterization generally provides little data. Bayesian compressive sensing or sampling offers a highly efficient spatial data analytic and simulation method for the efficient modelling of spatial geo-data from sparse measurements, to quantify reliability and uncertainty, and to optimize site characterization. This outlines principles and gives Analytics of Sparse Spatial Data using Bayesian Compressive Sampling/Sensing software for graduate students, and geotechnical engineers, of those working with air quality data, soil or water pollution data, and meteorological data.

Sneha Gautam Karunya Institute of Science and Technology, Coimbatore, India, Chafai Azri , Md. Badiuzzaman Khan

This book provides a detailed exploration of bioaerosols in indoor environments, focusing on their sources, transport mechanisms, health implications, and mitigation strategies. It encompasses the biology, physics, and chemistry of bioaerosols, their interaction with indoor environments, and their influence on human health. It examines the role of HVAC systems, regulatory frameworks, and emerging technologies in understanding and controlling indoor air bioaerosols. It underscores the importance of proactive bioaerosol management in diverse indoor settings. It is aimed at senior undergraduate, graduate students, researchers and professionals in air quality, aerosols, and bioaerosols.

Engineering Materials, Structures, Systems and Methods for a More Sustainable Future

Edited by Alphose Zingoni University of Cape Town, South Africa

Engineering Materials, Structures, Systems and Methods for a More Sustainable Future comprises 275 papers that were presented at SEMC 2025, the Ninth International Conference on Structural Engineering, Mechanics and Computation. It will be of interest to civil, structural, mechanical, marine and aerospace engineers, as well as planners and architects. Two versions of the papers are available: full papers of length 6 pages are included in the e-book, while short papers of length 2 pages, intended to be concise but self-contained summaries of the full papers, are in the printed book.

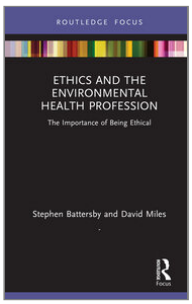
Ethics and the Environmental Health Profession

The Importance of Being Ethical



Stephen Battersby Environmental Health Consultant, UK , David Miles

Series: Routledge Focus on Environmental Health

This book provides an exploration of the discussion on how a stronger ethical basis for the work of EHPs can contribute to improved public health and examine the role of professional bodies in ensuring members of the profession act ethically as guardians of the public interest, without fear or favour. Ethics is an integral part of public health decision making and should be incorporated into public and environmental health policy development and decision-making. This work will examine what this means for EHPs.

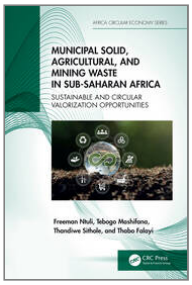
Sustainable and Circular Valorization Opportunities



Freeman Ntuli Botswana Uni of Sci and Tech, Tebogo Mashifana Univ Johannesburg, South Africa, Thandiwe Sithole Univ Johannesburg, South Africa, Thabo Falayi Namibia Univ of Science and Technology

Series: Africa Circular Economy Series

The book seeks to cover the application of the principles of the circular economy within the context of the processing and waste management industry in Sub Saharan Africa. It includes topics related to the circular economy in relation to the sustainable use of resources in the mining, process industry and waste management sectors and looks at how some of the resources from these sectors which are currently treated as "waste" can be converted into secondary resources that can help drive economic development. This book is aimed at researchers and graduate students in environmental and chemical engineering, and waste treatment.

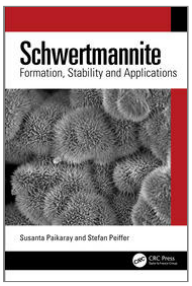
Schwertmannite

Formation, Stability and Applications



Susanta Paikaray , Stefan Peiffer

This book offers a comprehensive overview of the structure and solubility of the mineral schwertmannite, while also delving into characterization methods and techniques, environmental stability and the potential to retain pollutants. This book will benefit a large community of scientists and researchers working in acid mine drainage, since schwertmannite is the most abundant mineral in these sulfate-rich environments. It will be a valuable body of knowledge for research organizations and mining companies, as well as those teaching courses on mining, mineral chemistry, wastewater treatment, acid sulfate soils, soil geochemistry, and mine reclamation.

Integrated Perspectives in Offsite Construction

Edited by Vikrom Laovisutthichai

Series: BRI Research Series

Integrated Perspectives in Offsite Construction offers a comprehensive analysis of the multifaceted aspects of offsite construction and addresses critical gaps to advance this promising field. The book broadens the scope of offsite construction beyond manufacturing and assembly, incorporating the entire building life cycle from pre-construction (e.g., project initiation and design) to post-construction (e.g., occupancy and evaluation) to provide an integrated perspective. With its holistic view and practical insights, it is a valuable resource for researchers, practitioners, educators, and industry professionals seeking to navigate and advance offsite construction.

Health and Safety Programs in Small and Medium-sized Businesses

Setting Them Up and Making Them Work Effectively

Gregory G. Zigulis

This book is intended to help people newly involved in the development of workplace safety and health programs to understand principles and concepts that can help them roll out what is often referred to as a "safety program". Written for a broad professional readership, this book will be invaluable for all SME businesspersons and practitioners who need a seasoned expert to provide an understandable introduction to safety programs, whatever their situation. It's particularly relevant to start-ups and people given responsibility for workplace safety without a background in this area.

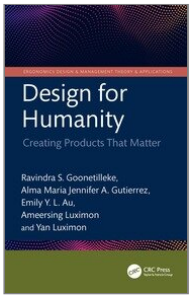
Design for Humanity

Creating Products That Matter



Ravindra S. Goonetilleke , Alma Maria Jennifer A. Gutierrez , Emily Y. L. Au , Ameersing Luximon , Yan Luximon

Series: Ergonomics Design & Mgmt. Theory & Applications

This is more than a book on design; it is a roadmap for creating solutions that matter. Built around the new GRIP framework (Gather, Refine, Ideate, Produce), the book emphasizes designing with people, not just for them. It introduces themes including design for all, empathy, creativity and ideation, sustainability, and ethics while offering hands-on tools such as storytelling, persona building, advanced prototyping techniques, including AR/VR testing. From shaping lovable products to aligning designs with market needs, the book combines the artistry of empathy with the rigor of engineering.

Elongate Mineral Particles

Characterization, Classification, and Risk Analysis

Andrey Korchevskiy Chemistry & Industrial Hygiene, Inc, Arvada, CO, USA, Ann Wylie University of Maryland, USA

This groundbreaking book explores the complex world of elongate mineral particles (EMPscritical occupational and environmental agents with significant public health implications. It carefully distinguishes between asbestiform EMPs, which pose serious health hazards to humans, and non-asbestiform elongate particles such as cleavage fragments, which have different characteristics and lower (or negligible) health risks. This distinction is vital for accurate risk assessment and appropriate regulatory approaches in both occupational and environmental contexts.

Series: Human Factors and Ergonomics

Human-Centered Design for Healthcare Safety describes a conceptual framework (SEIPS or Systems Engineering Initiative for Patient Safety) based on the Human Factors and Ergonomics (HFE) discipline and associated human-centered design approaches and methods that can help to create innovative solutions for enhancing healthcare safety. Healthcare safety remains a major concern around the world. With global crises, such as the economic downturn and the COVID-19 pandemic, we have observed deterioration in many aspects of patient safety, as well as major problems for health care workers, including burnout, stress, and issues of occupational safety and health.

Safety Management

Psychological Aspects of Implementing Organizational Change

Katarzyna Boczkowska Lodz University of Technology, Poland, Marta Stasiła-Sieradzka Silesian University of Technology, Poland, Marta Znajmiecka University of Lodz, Poland, Olga Zwardoń-Kuchciak University of Lodz, Poland

Despite efforts to reduce workplace accidents through technical innovations and detailed safety procedures, incident rates remain high. Studies have confirmed that the most common causes of workplace accidents are rooted in human factors including rushed decisions, inattention, risky habits, complacency and misused equipment. Organizations may invest heavily in systems and tools, but if the psychological and social aspects of human behavior are overlooked, these investments often fail to deliver. Understanding how individuals think, feel, and interact in group settings is essential to creating a genuinely safe and resilient work environment which this book explores.

Safety Mindset

Conversations that Work

Justin Hinks

This book offers a strategic framework and practical resources needed to transform safety culture through the power of better decisions. Readers will discover the "Safe 2 Home" approach that transforms safety management from a rigid science into an art of decision-making influence. The book presents over 120 ready-to-implement toolbox talks covering critical safety topics from fall arrest systems to equipment operation, each designed to create meaningful emotional connections with safety protocols. Safety leaders will develop and possess practical tools to build a proactive safety culture where thoughtful decisions actively save and improve lives every day.

Worker Well-being, Human Factors and the Gig Economy

Interdisciplinary Perspectives

Edited by Emily Yarrow Newcastle University Business School, UK, Julie Davies University College London, UK

There has been an exponential rise in global gig economy work. Given the growth of the gig economy and gig workers around the world, developing an understanding of the human factors behind this area of the workforce can lead many to disparate sources. This contemporary text integrates interdisciplinary learning and insights into relationships between human factors, worker well-being and the future of safer, more inclusive, and sustainable work, specifically in the gig economy. It offers an in-depth understanding of the role of human factors and the effects of disruptive technologies on worker well-being in a range of settings.

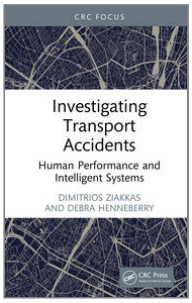
Investigating Transport Accidents

Human Performance and Intelligent Systems



Dimitrios Ziakkas , Debra Henneberry

The transportation industry faces unprecedented challenges as systems grow increasingly complex. This book introduces an integrated framework for transport accident investigations by combining traditional human performance analysis with advanced artificial intelligence capabilities. Moving beyond simplistic cause-and-effect models, the authors cover human factors, automation, hardware components, contextual variables, and organizational elements that collectively determine safety outcomes in complex socio-technical environments.

Modern Technologies in Ergonomics and Workplace Safety

Edited by Beata Mrugalska Poznan University of Technology, Poznan, Poland, Waldemar Karwowski , Tareq Z. Ahram

Series: Human Factors in Design, Engineering, and Computing

The evolution of workplace technologies demands a balance between innovation and human-centric design. This book examines how organizations can create sustainable, efficient workspaces while prioritizing employee well-being and environmental responsibility. Through research and real-world applications, the book demonstrates how the thoughtful integration of technology with ergonomic principles leads to improved productivity and enhanced working conditions.

Workplace Environmental Factors

Lighting, Noise, and Vibration

Edited by Waldemar Karwowski , Beata Mrugalska Poznan University of Technology, Poznan, Poland

Series: Body of Knowledge in Human Factors and Ergonomics

This concise volume examines how environmental conditions, specifically lighting, noise, and vibration, affect human performance, health, and comfort. As workplace demands evolve, so must our approach to design. This book covers the importance of aligning visual and auditory elements of work environments with the needs and limitations of the human body, whilst also enhancing productivity and minimizing risk. This book details the tools and insights needed to better support human well-being in complex environments.

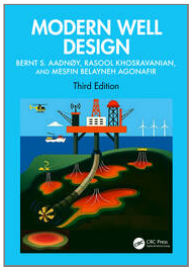
Modern Well Design



Bernt S. Aadnøy University of Stavanger, Norway, Rasool Khosravanian , Mesfin Belayneh Agonafir

Modern Well Design is a comprehensive guide that explores the complexities of well design and drilling operations. It delves into drilling fluids, geomechanical evaluation, casing design, and the latest developments in digitization and emerging technologies. This is an essential read for professionals looking for practical solutions to common drilling challenges and to advance their knowledge of drilling fluids, hydraulic optimization, and geomechanical evaluation. It is designed for petroleum engineers, drilling professionals, researchers and students in the field of energy and petroleum engineering.

Western Europe's Natural Wonders

Iceland, Pyrenees, and Western Alps

Gary L Prost

Series: Geologic Tours of the World

Western Europe's Natural Wonders is part of a series of books that provides a geologic guide to some of the most interesting features of the Earth's surface. This volume takes readers across three classic locations in Western Europe and illustrates the Mid-Atlantic Ridge in Iceland and classic locations in the development of geology in the Alps and Pyrenees. It examines plate tectonics from spreading centers to convergent margins and discusses the deformation of mountain ranges and sedimentary basins, mining, petroleum, and fossil locations along with volcanism, glacial features, and ice ages.

Xenobiotics in Environment

Impacts, Detection and its Remediation

Edited by Kiran Gupta Siddharth University, Uttar Pradesh , Kapil Gupta Department of Biotechnology, Siddharth University, India, Amit Kumar

This book explains the holistic knowledge of xenobiotics, their mode of action as well as toxic impact on living organisms at the cellular level. This book also enlightens readers about various mitigation approaches against xenobiotics, especially phytoremediation-based technology. The book also provides a critical overview of xenobiotic contamination in both abiotic and biotic components of the environment. Recent trends in various molecular remedial strategies like nanotechnology and microbe-assisted approaches have also been discussed. Omics Approaches in Xenobiotics are also discussed.

Farm Irrigation Management

Principles and Practices

Latief Ahmad SKUAST Kashmir, Kahkashan Qayoom SKUAST, Jammu and Kashmir, Sameera Qayoom SKUAST-K, Shalimar, Srinagar

Water is the lifeline of agriculture, and its efficient management is crucial for sustainable food production in an era of climate uncertainty and resource scarcity. Farm Irrigation Management provides a comprehensive guide to the principles and practices that govern water use in agriculture, offering insights into the latest scientific advancements, innovative irrigation techniques, and climate-resilient strategies to optimize water utilization. This book explores the intricate relationship between soil, water, and plants, delving into critical topics such as soil-water-plant interactions, irrigation methods, drainage, and precision water management.

Assuring Safe Operation of Robotic Systems under Uncertainty

Control and Learning Methods

Cong Li , Yongchao Wang , Fangzhou Liu , Xinglong Zhang

This book applies set-theoretic and reinforcement learning approaches to formulate, analyze, and solve the challenge of ensuring safe operation of robotic systems in an uncertain environment. The authors adopt learning-supported set-theoretic methods — specifically, the barrier Lyapunov function and the control barrier function — to achieve desirable robust safety with guaranteed performance in continuous-time nonlinear control applications. They also combine reinforcement learning with control theory to ensure safe learning and optimization. This book will be of interest to researchers, engineers, and students specializing in robot planning and control.

Krzysztof Przystupa , Mykola Beshley

The book focuses on the fundamental principles of IBN technology operation and integration for managing 5G and beyond. Intent-based networking can not only largely automate processes, but also improve connectivity and increase the efficiency of network design, deployment, and management. This book will be useful for engineers, researchers, and network professionals who want to deploy IBNs in 5G, SDN/NFV, IoT, and the upcoming 6G. Readers will learn how to make networks automated, secure, efficient, and client-centric.

Rolling Bearings

Tribology Damage Modes and Life Modelling

Guillermo Morales-Espejel

Rolling Bearings presents the most relevant damage modes in rolling bearings, describing their basic mechanisms, their competitive nature, and the way to model these damaging mechanisms. It includes traditional bearing life calculations, as well as a new formulation separating the surface from the subsurface survival. The book devotes separate chapters to exploring basic damage modes, including mild-wear, surface distress, fatigue-wear, particle entrapment and damage, among others. Written for mechanical, aerospace, industrial engineers, and tribologists, this book will also interest engineering students and researchers studying tribology, machine design, and mechanics.

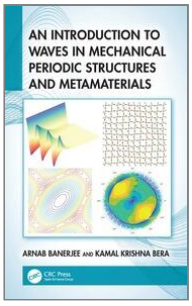
An Introduction to Waves in Mechanical Periodic Structures and Metamaterials



Arnab Banerjee , Kamal Krishna Bera

Metamaterials are artificial, engineered materials designed to manipulate wave propagation in ways not possible with conventional materials. This book presents a systematic and rigorous treatment of wave propagation in periodic structures, with a particular focus on mechanical and acoustic metamaterials. It bridges fundamental concepts and advanced topics, offering a unified framework to analyze discrete and continuous periodic systems. This book serves as an accessible resource for senior undergraduate and graduate students in structural engineering, mechanical engineering, applied physics, and materials science, as well as researchers interested in wave mechanics in metamaterials.

Joshua Reiss Queen Mary University of London, UK, Andrew McPherson Queen Mary University of London, UK

Series: Audio Engineering Society Presents

Audio effects are used pervasively in music performance and production, and creation of new digital audio tools is a significant industry. They are also commonly used in game production, broadcasting, and film and television. This book is intended as an educational textbook on audio effects, with relevance to audio signal processing, music informatics, sound engineering and related topics. It provides fundamental background information on digital signal processing, focusing on audio-specific aspects. This constitutes the building block on which audio effects are developed. It integrates theory and practice, relating technical implementation to musical implications.

Automotive Composites

Materials, Design, and Manufacturing

P.K. Mallick University of Michigan, Dearborn, USA

This textbook addresses the materials, design, and manufacturing of fiber-reinforced polymer composites for structural automotive applications. The use of composites in the automotive industry is critically important for design of lightweight structures to meet fuel economy standards, reduction of greenhouse gas emissions, and increased battery range in electric vehicles. This book discusses key issues around manufacturing and mass-scale application of these composites in the automotive industry. This textbook is aimed at mechanical and materials engineering students studying automotive composites as well as professional engineers developing these materials for industry application.

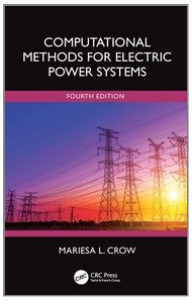
Computational Methods for Electric Power Systems



Mariesa L. Crow

As power systems increasingly operate under stressed conditions, computer simulation will play a large role in control and security assessment. Commercial packages routinely fail or give erroneous results when used to simulate stressed systems. Understanding the underlying numerical algorithms is imperative to correctly interpret the results of commercial packages. The first part of the book provides the basic concepts of linear and nonlinear computational methods. These methods are then extended to include more specialized approaches including time domain simulation, optimization, sparsity methods, and eigensystem analysis.

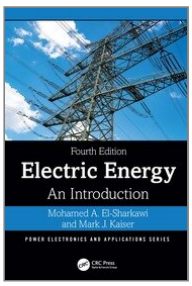
Electric Energy

An Introduction



Mohamed A. El-Sharkawi , Mark J. Kaiser

Series: Power Electronics and Applications Series

An introductory review of electric energy using examples, numerical calculations and theory to describe the basic elements of the field. Coverage includes electric infrastructure, the grid, system operations, renewable energy, alternating current circuits, three-phase power, electrical safety, power electronics, transformers, power quality, blackouts and future power systems. A problem-oriented, student-centric approach to electric energy in various forms and applications. The text is example-driven with numerous practical problems interspersed with descriptive text with broad coverage. Combines the fundamentals of traditional energy conversion with contemporary topics.

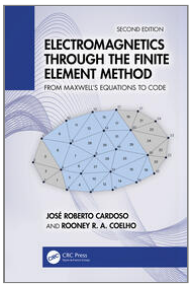
Electromagnetics Through the Finite Element Method



José Roberto Cardoso Universidade de São Paulo, Brazil, Rooney R. A. Coelho

This book presents the easiest way to learn finite element method (FEM) for electromagnetism - from static phenomena to high frequencies in a single book, based solely on Maxwell's equations. All the formalism associated with FEM is presented in detail, with simple numerical examples, duly commented to facilitate understanding of the method. This simplified approach presented in this new edition will not only benefit undergraduate students, but will also be useful to practising engineers and researchers looking to introduce themselves to these numerical methods.

Fundamentals of Software-Defined Networking

Towards Intelligent and Flexible Networks

Ali Sadiqui , Moulay Rachid Filali

The Fundamentals of Software-Defined Networking: Towards Intelligent and Flexible Networks is a comprehensive, beginner-friendly guide to Software-Defined Networking (SDN), designed specifically for educators, trainers, and professionals transitioning into modern networking. It offers a structured, standards-based approach that starts with fundamental networking concepts and builds up to advanced SDN architectures.

2ND EDITION

Learning Engineering Practice

James Trevelyan The University of Western Australia, Crawley, Australia

This is an essential, easy-to-read guide for students, early-career engineers, supervisors and human resources professionals, written by the world's leading authority on global engineering practices with decades of research, 40 years teaching engineering, and 50 years working as a professional engineer in several countries. This guide will teach essential engineering soft skills and specialized capabilities to work as an engineer that universities cannot teach.

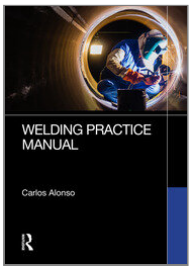
Welding Practice Manual



Carlos Alonso

These simple and very practical exercises for welders are categorized by the key processes (coated electrode, TIG, MIG MAG, and oxygas), the types of joint (screeds, angled, butt), the base material (carbon steel, stainless steel and aluminum), and the position in which the welding is performed (horizontal, cornice, ascending or descending vertical, under ceiling). It supports the certification tests for welders under the International Institute of Welding, and in line with the UNE standards for Europe, AWS standards for North America, and ISO standards. It suits trainees and apprentices in UK to Levels 1 to 3, and provides a reference for fully qualified welders.

2D Nanomaterials and Devices for Flexible Electronics

Edited by Balwinder Raj NIITR, India, Shobhit Saxena , Nandakishor Yadav , Tarun Chaudhary NIT Jalandhar, India, Mandeep Singh NIT Jalandhar, India

The text explains 2D materials, nanodevices, and analysis of their design parameters to meet the sub-nano-regime challenges for complementary metal-oxide-semiconductor devices. It further covers important topics such as 2D nanomaterial-based transistors, flexible sensors, wearable electronics, flexible energy storage devices, 2D nanomaterial-based antennas, and artificial intelligence-enhanced flexible electronics. It is primarily written for senior undergraduates, graduate students, and academic researchers in the fields of electrical engineering, electrical and communications engineering, materials science, nanoscience, and nanotechnology.

Thermal and Flow Measurements

T.-W. Lee

Thermal and Flow Measurements spans the basics of measurement methods to the advanced diagnostic applications in experiments and testing. It provides a foundational understanding of how to measure flow rates, temperature, pressure and other key parameters in fluid and thermal processes. This new edition features new sections on image-based particle velocimetry, high-speed velocimetry, satellite-based methods for scaled measurements, and AI in image analysis, advanced laser diagnostics, and remote sensing. The book is intended for senior undergraduate and graduate engineering students studying experimental methods and measurement.

A Discriminating Discussion of RF-MEMS

Past, Present and Future of a Repeatedly Hyping Technology, at the Dawn of 6G and Future Networks

Jacopo Iannacci

This book offers a unique bottom-up perspective of a technology for the manufacturing of low-complexity hardware components, which elevates this to a key enabling technology of 6G and future networks. This MEMS-based technology enables the fabrication of highly miniaturized, high-performance, widely tunable/reconfigurable and frequency agile passives, among which are low-loss/high-isolation micro-switches, multi-state RF power attenuators, delay lines and impedance tuners, high-order switching matrices, tunable filters, and more.

Advanced Mission Scenarios of the Three-Body Problem

Vladimir S. Aslanov

Advanced Mission Scenarios of the Three-Body Problem explores one of the classical problems of celestial mechanics through the lens of modern astrodynamics challenges. It examines current issues in modern astronautics related to the study and colonization of Mars, exploration of the Moon, space debris, and contactless space transportation technologies. The chapters present an original technology for contactless gravitational transportation of space debris using a heavy gravitational collector. This book is intended for space systems and spacecraft engineering industry experts and researchers studying space transportation and modern challenges in astronautics.

Bioengineering and IoT

Shaping the Future of Healthcare

Edited by Jayashree Katti , Atul Kathole , Dac-Nhuong Le

Series: Bioengineering

This book explores how bioengineering and IoT are revolutionizing healthcare through their groundbreaking convergence. It examines healthcare automation that streamlines delivery and management through electronic health records, pharmacy systems, and remote monitoring. The authors investigate how IoT enhances rehabilitation with smart devices for personalized care and patient monitoring, and adresses industry challenges through blockchain technology to improve data security and privacy. Essential reading for healthcare professionals, technologists, researchers, students, and anyone interested in the transformative intersection of bioengineering and IoT in healthcare's future.

Biogenic-Based Metal Nanomaterials for Sustainable Engineering Applications

Edited by Shrikaant Kulkarni , Hemantkumar N. Akolkar , Vijay M. Khedkar , Rajesh Ramasamy , Kirti R. Mahanwar , Nirmala R. Darekar

Provides a detailed and structured exploration of biogenic metal nanomaterials, from their synthesis and characterization to their diverse applications in sustainable engineering. The chapters cover basic principles and advantages of biogenic synthesis and delve into the various biological agents used in this process. It covers characterization techniques, discussions on structural, chemical, and surface characterization, exploring practical applications for a wide array of sustainable engineering uses. Case studies and real-world examples are included. It addresses the challenges and future directions of the field and potential solutions.

Biohydrogen Production

Recent Insights in Modeling, Storage, and Technology

Edited by Prakash Kumar Sarangi , Krushna Prasad Shadangi , Pravakar Mohanty , Sanjukta Subudhi

Presents the principles and methods for production of biohydrogen from renewable sources. It provides latest information addressing solutions for biohydrogen for clean fuel, waste management, waste valorization, reduced greenhouse gas emissions, and climate change mitigation. It overviews of the various prospects and challenges faced in biohydrogen production while also considering environmental issues and economic aspects. It examines in-depth both the production as well as storage aspects of biohydrogen production. Methods of hydrogen production discussed include gasification technology, catalytic pyrolysis, dark fermentative processes, and more.

G20 and Energy Security

Roadmap for Sustainable Development

Edited by Richa Kothari School of Environmental Sciences; Babasaheb Bhimrao Ambedkar University, Neeta Rani , Anita Singh Central University of Haryana, India

Series: Earth, Environment, and Sustainability

G20 is a group of twenty countries which are one of the biggest economies in the world and energy security as core area. This book covers acceleration of energy transition and low-carbon growth with emphasis on G20 countries. It covers inclusive energy transition with the use of renewable energy sources. Further coverage includes energy balances, production/consumption sectors, energy efficiency and data indicators, energy related environmental emissions, clean energy alternatives, and so forth. This book is aimed at Researchers and graduate students in energy security, sustainable development, and environment sustainability including professionals.

Generative Artificial Intelligence

Technology and Applications

Edited by Deepika Varshney , Preeti Nagrath Bharati Vidyapeeth's Coll of Engg, India, Srishti Vashishtha , Victor Hugo C. de Albuquerque

The book provides readers with a comprehensive understanding of generative artificial intelligence, including its underlying principles, algorithms, and applications. It further offers practical guidance on how to design, implement, and deploy generative AI systems in real-world scenarios. The text covers topics such as data preprocessing, model selection, training techniques, evaluation metrics, and ethical considerations. It is primarily written for senior undergraduates, graduate students, and academic researchers in the fields of electrical engineering, electronics and communications engineering, computer science and engineering, and information technology.

Green Etching Techniques for MEMS Applications

Sustainable, Fluorine-Free Etching Methods for Micro-Electro-Mechanical Systems

Kaiying Wang

Green Etching Techniques for MEMS Applications delivers an essential and comprehensive exploration of sustainable, fluorine-free etching methodologies for micro-electro-mechanical systems (MEMS). With growing environmental concerns around traditional MEMS fabrication, this book addresses a critical issue need by detailing advanced, eco-friendly alternatives that mitigate environmental impacts without compromising technical performance. It is a crucial resource for professionals, researchers, and students dedicated to advancing the sustainability of MEMS fabrication.

Green Tribology and Industry 4.0

Fundamentals and Sustainable Advancements

Edited by V Vasu , Gourav Khajuria , Upendra Maurya

Series: Application Tribology: Materials, Design, Manufacturing and Testing

Green Tribology and Industry 4.0: Fundamentals and Sustainable Advancements explores the integration of sustainable tribological practices with emerging Industry 4.0 technologies. It brings together expert insights on how smart manufacturing, Artificial Intelligence, and additive processes are transforming lubrication science and surface engineering to support greener, more efficient industrial systems. It also highlights advancements in eco-friendly lubrication techniques, such as Minimum Quantity Lubrication (MQL), and examines innovative areas like nano- and bio-tribology.

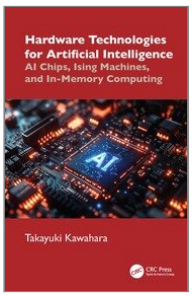
Hardware Technologies for Artificial Intelligence

AI Chips, Ising Machines, and In-Memory Computing



Takayuki Kawahara

In this comprehensive reference work for researchers, engineers, and students, Kawahara provides a one-stop exploration of next-generation computing at the LSI circuit level, with a focus on the integration of AI, advanced LSI design, Ising machines, and memory innovations. This is a valuable reference for students, engineers and researchers in this field alike. As it begins with the basics, it enables all readers to follow the direction of next-generation computing and its important technical content without the need for prior knowledge or reference to other books.

Intelligent Machining

Using Computational Intelligence to Optimize Manufacturing Processes

Edited by Kanak Kalita , Ranjan Kumar Ghadai , Xiao-Zhi Gao

Explores high-strength steel sections, charting their importance and utility. It elucidates the selection of a CNC lathe using the TOPSIS method. Bibliometric insights into multi-objective optimization and metaheuristic algorithms are also discussed as is the development of high entropy alloys. It details practical applications of computational intelligence, including optimizing investment casting process parameters, enhancing mobile robot navigation performance, and more. Fabrication is explored and also wear and thermal behaviors of advanced composite coatings. It also discusses the merging of computational techniques and traditional processes with chapters on various topics.

IoT Potential for Green Energy Solutions

Edited by Abhishek Kumar , Ajay Roy , Shamimul Qamar

Investigates IoT applications within the green energy domain, exploring the potential of IoT in energy distribution, consumption, and conservation. Chapters address many issues, like improvements in wind energy technology through novel materials and blade designs. It also looks into the integration of IoT technology in hybrid renewable energy systems, use of IoT to address environmental concerns such as noise pollution, role of IoT-powered irrigation systems for sustainable agriculture practices, etc. Other chapters look at IoT applications in industries including transportation, commercial fleet sustainability, agriculture, and energy storage and distribution.

Linear and Nonlinear Crystal Optics

Phenomenology, Symmetries and Angular Distributions

Benoit Boulanger , Simon Joly , Patricia Segonds , Yannick Petit

Series: Optical Sciences and Applications of Light

This book bridges theoretical foundations and practical applications in linear and nonlinear crystal optics, exploring light-crystal interactions from fundamental principles to advanced optical applications. It provides a thorough examination of electric susceptibility through constitutive relations and Maxwell's equations, featuring comprehensive tensor representations, angular distributions of optical parameters, and mathematical demonstrations backed by decades of research. Ideal for advanced students and researchers in physics, optical engineering, materials science, and crystallography.

Machine Learning Applications for Data Analysis in Healthcare Systems

Edited by Sudeshna Chakraborty , Jyotsna Singh , Praveen Kumar Shukla , Prasenjit Chatterjee

Investigates the impact of machine learning techniques on data analysis in healthcare, transforming the way we approach medical challenges, improve patient outcomes, and enhance healthcare systems. It investigates the application of machine learning in-hospital mortality among heart failure patients, machine learning and its potential in outbreak prediction, the design and development of anti-cancerous drug molecules, and also delves into heartbeat classification based on a machine-human interaction model. The book looks at the application of machine learning in clinical decision-making, predictive modeling, personalized medicine, genomics, and public health management.

Metal Oxides

Advances in Sustainability and Nanotechnology

Edited by Virat Khanna Maharaja Agrasen University, India, Rohit Jasrotia , Tejeet Singh , Gulab Singh

Series: Advances in Surface Engineering and Tribology

Metal Oxides explores the multidimensional applications of metal oxides from nanostructured innovations to sustainable solutions. The book begins with the fundamentals of metal oxides. It expands into nanostructured metal oxide thin films, photocatalytic applications, and nanoengineering approaches to enhance surface reactivity. Sustainable development and environmental impact are also addressed, including green synthesis approaches and environmental applications for water purification and remediation. This book is intended for researchers and upper-level students studying materials science, chemistry, nanotechnology, and environmental science.

Microwave Processing of Metallic Materials

Revolutionizing Surface Engineering for Green Manufacturing

Edited by Hitesh Vasudev LPU, India, Gurbhej Singh , Amit Bansal Gujral Punjab Technical University, India

Series: Advances in Surface Engineering and Tribology

Microwave Processing of Metallic Materials presents the adaptability and efficiency of microwave processing with interdisciplinary applications across the industrial sector. It explores a diverse variety of issues, including the production of superalloys and biomaterials, the analysis of internal structures, and the study of erosion wear behavior. Offering a comprehensive understanding of the basic concepts of microwave processing, the book illustrates its practical uses in creating materials with improved surface qualities. This book will interest industry researchers and graduate students studying advances in materials science, surface engineering, and manufacturing.

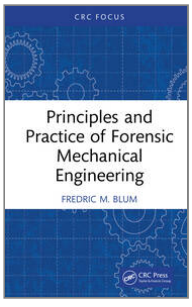
Principles and Practice of Forensic Mechanical Engineering



Fredric M. Blum

Principles and Practice of Forensic Mechanical Engineering explains the physical processes and causes of failures that result in physical or bodily damage. It discusses the nature of defects and defines the three types – design defects, manufacturing defects and service defects – with supporting examples of each. Drawing on the author's decades of experience, the book advises mechanical engineers how to investigate an incident, evaluate responsibility, and prepare a report of the results. This book supplies essential knowledge about forensic procedures to help mechanical engineers become involved in and efficiently practice forensics.

Problem Based Learning for Engineering Education

Developing the Engineers of the Future

Dillip K. Das Howard College

This book embarks on an in-depth exploration of Problem-Based Learning (PBL) in the context of engineering education. Its goal is to provide a comprehensive understanding of the genesis, potential, challenges, contemporary relevance and methodological approaches of PBL. The impetus behind this undertaking arises from the acknowledged challenges within engineering education, necessitating a fundamental paradigm shift. The book is a treasure chest for educators, researchers, and policymakers who want to make engineering education more effective and relevant, preparing the next generation of engineers to tackle the complex challenges our world faces.

Raman Spectroscopy of Biomaterials

Edited by Giuseppe Pezzotti

This book applies the equations and algorithms developed in the companion book (Raman Spectroscopy of Biomaterials: Theory and Quantitative Algorithms) to illustrative examples in the field of biomedical science, which include healthy and diseased hard and soft tissues in the human body, synthetic materials for biomedical devices, and a number of biological molecules in cells and bacteria. Through the above-selected applications, it is shown that Raman spectroscopy represents a key methodology to develop prompt and low-cost preventive care, to effectively diagnose diseases, to quantitatively assess the performance of biomedical devices, and to propose novel therapies.

Raman Spectroscopy of Biomaterials

Theory and Quantitative Algorithms

Edited by Giuseppe Pezzotti

This book rigorously establishes some key aspects of Raman basic science in the biomedical field and discusses the physics governing its application to both synthetic and natural biomaterials by disentangling spectrally convoluted dependencies on crystal orientation, chemical and stoichiometric alterations, and mechanical stress. A completely new set of working algorithms is given to extract structural, chemical, and mechanical information from the experimentally collected spectra, while orientation distribution functions are employed to obtain statistical descriptions of crystallographic textures in practical applications.

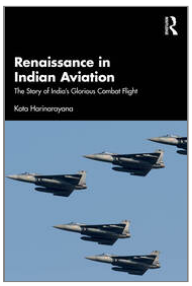
The Story of India's Glorious Combat Flight



Kota Harinarayana

This is the story of development of a new generation fighter called Light Combat Aircraft, Tejas, and the creation of aviation ecosystem in India. The book chronicles the successful development of a front ranking fighter, LCA Tejas. It provides a glimpse of state of technology in India when LCA programme was initiated, the technology gap that needed to be bridged to develop the aircraft, creation of a new organization to spear head development, challenges faced by the new Organisation. This book would be valuable for students, managers, technologists, systems engineers, decision makers in the government and public sectors.

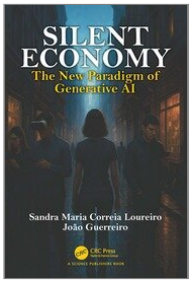
Silent Economy

The New Paradigm of Generative AI



Sandra Maria Correira Loureiro ULisboa, Portugal, João Guerreiro

This book explores the evolution of artificial intelligence (AI) and its wide-ranging impacts. Beginning with the concept of the silent economy, this work traces the development of AI from its early stages to the present, highlighting the emergence of generative AI. The narrative examines how AI influences organizational culture, societal well-being, and business decisions at strategic, tactical, and operational levels. The book also analyzes the evolving dynamics of the workplace, consumer behavior, and AI's ethical and legal implications.

Smart Electronic Devices and Systems for Biomedical and Healthcare Applications

Edited by Upendra Kumar , Rajesh K. Kesharwani , Raj K. Keservani

Explores the development of smart bioelectronics and biomedical devices using advanced information technology. It considers the integration of smart technologies in healthcare, employing big data analytics, the Internet of Things, machine learning, cloud storage, and other technologies for predictive modeling, information analysis, etc., for medical diagnosis and treatment. It covers areas such as medical image retrieval, machine learning for diagnosis, and biomedical applications based on mobile phone cell network systems. It also covers topics such as predictive modeling of vector-borne diseases and their pathogens using AI, future implications for new technologies and more.

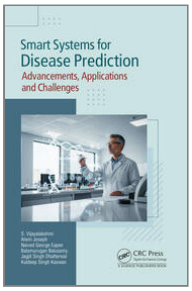
Smart Systems for Disease Prediction

Advancements, Applications and Challenges



S Vijayalakshmi , Alwin Joseph , Naived George Eapen , Balamurugan Balusamy , Jagjit Singh Dhatterwal , Kuldeep Singh Kaswan

This is a comprehensive book that explores the use of intelligent technologies to predict diseases accurately and efficiently. It covers a wide range of topics, including image and signal processing, behavioural analysis, and the integration of multimodal data in healthcare. The book examines the application of artificial intelligence, machine learning, and data analytics in creating predictive models for diseases. It also addresses the challenges, ethical considerations, and future directions in the field. This work emphasises the significant impact of intelligent systems on enabling early diagnosis, personalised medicine, and improving patient outcomes.

Symbiotic Intelligence

Advancing Forecasting Through Human-AI Collaboration

Edited by Hamid Jahankhani , Gordon Bowen Anglia Ruskin University, UK, Nitsa J. Herzog Northumbria University, UK, David J. Herzog

The book incorporates areas associated with AI Demand, including forecasting models, productivity, decision-making that is inclusive of stakeholders, and an enabler of sustainable processes. The scope of the book ranges from medical and healthcare applications of AI, roles that predictive AI can be applied and used in cybersecurity, to strategic intervention via the application of KPIs developed from AI, data pipeline improvement, forecasting in industries such as agriculture, housing stock, traffic management and crime, and sustainability in supply chains.

Target Tracking by Airborne Radar Systems (Two Volume Set)

Vyacheslav Tuzlukov

Automated target tracking is a necessary function of the airborne radar and radio control systems. At the present time, there is no a classified approach to designing and construction principles, functioning features, methods, algorithms and procedures of synthesis and analysis of the airborne radar target tracking systems by the target range, velocity and azimuth satisfying all long-term requirements.Volume 1 "Air-borne Radar Systems and Single Target Tracking" and Volume 2 "Fundamentals of Multitarget Tracking" of the two-volumes book "Target Tracking by Airborne Radar Systems" is intended to cover demands of this uncertainty.

The Road to B5G/6G Mobile Communication Networks: Technologies and Applications

Edited by Chih-Cheng Tseng , Albena Mihovska , Shao-Yu Lien

Series: River Publishers Series in Communications and Networking

This book provides essential resources for industry, academia, and research professionals for understanding the potential evolving roadmap of Beyond 5G (B5G) and 6G technologies and their diverse applications. In the critical era of the evolution of the 5G mobile communication networks, wireless mobile communication technologies have already pivoted toward the next stages: Beyond 5G (B5G) and the upcoming Sixth Generation (6G). This book is an insightful collection that explores cutting-edge technologies and applications guiding the paths toward B5G and 6G mobile communication networks.

The Role of Smart Technology and Industry 4.0 in Shaping Smart Cities

Edited by Vinay Kandpal , Manoj Kumar Nallapaneni , Deep Chandra

Examines how smart technologies impact the restructuring of urban areas and industrial sectors. It explores the use of a number of advanced technologies, such as the Internet of Things (IoT), artificial intelligence (AI), and big data analytics to develop more efficient, sustainable, and livable urban environments. The chapters examine the present condition and potential future advancements in smart urban development, encompassing areas such as smart grids and intelligent transportation systems. The chapters explore the difficulties and possibilities linked to this change, providing valuable perspectives on how firms might adjust and prosper in this emerging period.

Intelligent Solutions for a Digital Future

Edited by Bal Virdee London Metropolitan University, Ummer Iqbal , Ashish Khanna Maharaja Agrasen Institute of Technology, India, Moolchand Sharma Maharaja Agrasen Institute of Technology, Rohini, Delhi, India, Roman Danel

Series: Artificial Intelligence for Sustainable Engineering and Management

This book explores the convergence of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and the Internet of Things (IoT) in transforming healthcare delivery. It provides a comprehensive overview of AIoT healthcare systems, covering concepts, architectures, applications, challenges, and future directions. The book is primarily written for professionals and researchers involved in healthcare management, information technology, and artificial intelligence. Additionally, undergraduate and graduate students studying healthcare technology, AI, or related fields would also find it invaluable.

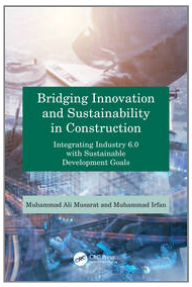
Bridging Innovation and Sustainability in Construction

Integrating Industry 6.0 with Sustainable Development



Muhammad Ali Musarat , Muhammad Irfan

This book comprehensively analyses Industry 6.0 and its integration with the UN's Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in the construction industry. Practical strategies and real-life case studies also help readers bridge the gap between advanced digital technologies and sustainable practices. Given the innovative nature of the subject matter and its substantial practical, theoretical, and societal implications, this book is a leading resource for industry practitioners and policymakers.

Artificial Intelligence and Robotics in Manufacturing

A Sustainable Future

Edited by Ankit D. Oza , Hreetabh Kishore , Ankit Sharma Chitkara University, Punjab, Atul Babbar Shree Guru Gobind Singh Tricentenary University

Series: Innovations in Smart Manufacturing for Long-Term Development and Growth

Artificial Intelligence and Robotics in Manufacturing: A Sustainable Future offers a comprehensive exploration of the scientific and technological advancements in robotics-based manufacturing. This book delves into a variety of topics, including applications in aerospace, nuclear, and medical industries. Emphasizing the use of advanced AI-based robotics, the book highlights recent breakthroughs in manufacturing techniques, specifically focusing on AI applications in fabrication and machining. Additionally, it examines the rapid evolution of AI technology and addresses cost-effective solutions within the manufacturing sector.

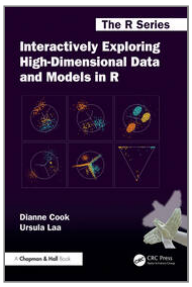
Interactively Exploring High-Dimensional Data and Models in R



Dianne Cook Monash University, Australia, Ursula Laa BOKU University, Vienna

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC The R Series

High-dimensional data visualisation is valuable for understanding dimension reduction methods, unsupervised and supervised classification. This book is organised into these three topics, following overview and introductory chapters. The dimension reduction chapters cover principal component analysis and nonlinear dimension reduction. The chapters on cluster analysis cover hierarchical and k-means algorithms, model-based and self-organising maps, and finish with ways to communicate results and how to compare different results. The chapters on classification cover linear discriminant analysis, tree and forest algorithms, support vector machines and neural networks.

Advances in Computational Fluid Dynamics

Edited by Basma Souayeh King Faisal University, Saudi Arabia, Katta Ramesh Symbiosis Institute of Technology, India

Advances in Computational Fluid Dynamics delves into the emergent ways that engineers are utilizing computer simulations to enhance efficiency, reduce costs, and innovate across aerospace, automotive, energy, and biomedical engineering fields. It provides the most recent tools and strategies for improving prediction accuracy, design, and optimization, such as AI integration and Machine Learning techniques. Case studies in aerodynamic designs, energy conversion processes, and cooling systems are included. This book will interest researchers, upper-level undergraduate, and graduate engineering students studying practical applications of Computational Fluid Dynamics (CFD).

Applied Statistics with Python

Volume II: Multivariate Models

Leon Kaganovskiy Touro University, USA

Applied Statistics with Python, Volume II focuses on ANOVA, multivariate models such as multiple regression, model selection, and reduction techniques, regularization methods like lasso and ridge, logistic regression, K-nearest neighbors (KNN), support vector classifiers, nonlinear models, tree-based methods,clustering, and principal component analysis. As in Volume I, the Python programming language is used throughout due to its flexibility and widespread adoption in data science and machine learning. The book relies heavily ontools from the standard sklearn package, which are integrated directly into the discussion.

Applied Statistics with Python

Leon Kaganovskiy Touro University, USA

Applied Statistics with Python, Two-Volume Set focuses on applied and computational aspects of statistics, ANOVA, multivariate models such as multiple regression, model selection, reduction techniques, regularization methods like lasso and ridge, logistic regression, K-nearest neighbors, support vector classifiers, nonlinear models, tree-based methods, clustering, and principal component analysis. It has been expanded from 8 chapters to 13 chapters and is intended for students in business, economics, biology, social sciences and natural science while also being useful as a supplementary text.

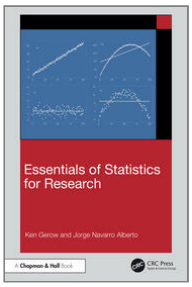
Essentials of Statistics for Research



Ken Gerow , Jorge Navarro Alberto

Offers a working introduction to essential statistical methods that uses an accessible conceptual understanding without excessive mathematical details, emphasizes the role of good judgment when choosing analysis approaches and work through many examples to illustrate the dance that a statistical analysis can be. Ultimately, the analysis should serve the science and shed light on the story contained in the data.

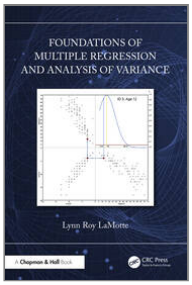
Foundations of Multiple Regression and Analysis of Variance



Lynn Roy LaMotte Louisiana State University Health Sciences Center School of Public Health

This book provides a rigorous development of the foundations of linear models for multiple regression and Analysis of Variance (ANOVA), based on orthogonal projections and relations among linear subspaces. It is appropriate for the linear models course required in most statistics Ph.D. programs. The presentation is particularly accessible because it is self-contained, general, and taken in logical steps that are linked directly to practicable computations. The broad objective is to provide a path of mastery so that the reader could replicate general linear models procedures in extant statistical computing packages.

Guide to Multiple Regression

Samia Challal

This book is intended to equip the reader with concept knowledge, on multilinear regression methods, and develop technical skills, while solving problems with the R programming language. The goal is not to become an expert in both directions. It is rather an incentive to do research on advanced models in data analysis once confidence is gained with the practice of some methods. We believe that using a computer is the only practical means of performing a linear or multilinear regression on a data set of even moderate size. Therefore, our purpose is to make these connections between theory, technology, and applications, as clear as possible.

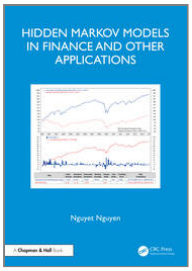
Hidden Markov Models in Finance and other Applications



Nguyet Nguyen

This book provides fundamental concepts and algorithms of the Hidden Markov Model (HMM) and its applications in finance, such as stock price predictions, and other areas such as speech recognition. Their wide range uses make HMMs very attractive to researchers in both academia and industry. Only a basic knowledge of probability, statistics, and programming is necessary, and readers will learn the concepts and algorithms of the HMM through definitions, real-life examples, and R code.

Machine Learning for Microbiome Statistics

Yinglin Xia , Jun Sun Department of Medicine, University of Illinois Chicago, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Biostatistics Series

This book aims to address the challenges of machine learning statistics, emphasize the importance of performance valuation by appropriate metrics and independent data, and describe several important concepts of machine learning statistics, such as feature engineering and overfitting. It comprehensively reviews commonly used and newly developed machine learning models for microbiome research and provides the step-by-step procedures to perform machine learning microbiome data, including feature engineering, algorithm selection and optimization, performance evaluation and model testing. It comments the benefits and limitations of using machine learning for microbiome statistics.

Mathematical Foundations of Artificial Intelligence

Basics of Manifold Theory

Momiao Xiong University of Texas School of Public Health, USA

Mathematical Foundations of Artificial Intelligence: Basics of Manifold Theory is the first volume in a two-part series. Together, they establish a unifying mathematical framework based on smooth manifold theory and Riemannian geometry. Unlike traditional texts, this book combines rigor with intuition, integrating formal theory, computational methods, and interdisciplinary insights and is ideal for graduate students and professionals in mathematics, statistics, computer science, artificial intelligence, physics, bioinformatics, and biomedical sciences.

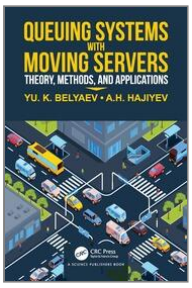
Queueing Systems with Moving Servers

Theory, Methods, and Applications



Yuri Belyaev , Asaf Hajiyev

Various queuing theory methods have been employed in understanding and managing traffic flows, airports and shipping facilities, communication systems, vertical (elevators and escalators) transportation, and others. The study of such systems is outside the framework of the methods of classical queuing theory, thus, new methodologies with moving servers have evolved. These systems are different and have a complicated structure but have a common idea, i.e. systems with moving servers. The book is dedicated to constructing and investigating mathematical models of queueing systems with moving servers.

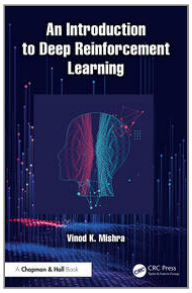
An Introduction to Deep Reinforcement Learning



Vinod K. Mishra

This book shows how artificial intelligence and machine learning (AIML) tools have transformed the workings of vast swaths of our private, working, and social lives beyond recognition. It homes in on deep reinforcement learning (DRL) with a special focus on its mathematical and algorithmic foundations. Undergraduate and early graduate students should find it to be a good guide to the fast-developing areas of DRL and its myriad applications. Hopefully, it will spur them to dive deep and understand the coming revolution in every aspect of society based on these ideas.

Artificial Intelligence in Mental Healthcare

Potential Applications and New Frontiers

Shivan Bhavnani , Ryan McKim

This book navigates the intricacies of AI in all stages of the patient journey from diagnosis, treatment, and prevention, offering a holistic view of the future of mental and behavioral healthcare. It explores how AI is revolutionizing key therapeutic areas within mental health, like substance misuse, anxiety disorders, and mood disorders. It also assesses use cases in back office and non-patient-facing areas including reimbursement processes, data collection and management, and revenue cycle management. Chapters are supplemented with a variety of real-world case studies that highlight the practical implications of AI in clinical and non-clinical settings.

BiteSize Python for Intermediate Learners

With Practice Labs, Real-World Examples, and ChatGPT

Di Wu

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC The Python Series

This book is designed for intermediate learners with a basic understanding of Python. It allows readers to take a slow and steady approach to building upon their understanding of Python code. Python programming is broken down into easily digestible lessons of less than 5 minutes each, following a tried and tested BiteSize approach. The reader will also play with case studies to solve real-world problems. Tips on how to incorporate Generative AI into a learning toolkit are provided, for purposes like feedback, practice exercises, code reviews, and exploring advanced topics. Recommended AI prompts can help readers identify areas for improvement, review key concepts, and track progress.

Designing the User Experience of Game Development Tools

David Lightbown

This is the definitive guide on how to design game development tools. The book begins with the foundations of user experience and how they apply to game development tools, then guides you through the User-Centered Design process – the gold standard in user experience design – which involves watching users work, understanding their goals, designing efficient and learnable user interfaces, and refining them through targeted evaluation techniques. The book is ideal for anyone who makes, uses, or benefits from game development tools. It explains complex concepts in a clear, accessible way and shares proven techniques backed by real-world examples and extensive references.

From Inception Through Solution Deployment

Charles F. Bowman , William M. Ulrich

Delivering an end-to-end strategy execution perspective, the book begins with strategy formulation and progresses through impact analysis, business and systems design, initiative scoping and funding, and solution deployment. End-to-end strategy execution culminates with well-designed, executable software systems that deliver on the majority of business strategies established by the C-suite and strategic planning teams. It provides organizations with a formal roadmap, allowing them to set their sights on and achieve their North Star—guiding them from strategy setting through strategy deployment.

Game Engine Architecture

Two Volume Set

Jason Gregory

In this new and improved fourth edition, Jason Gregory draws on his two decades of experience at Midway, Electronic Arts and Naughty Dog to present both the theory and practice of game engine software development. The broad range of technologies and techniques used by AAA game studios are each explained in detail, and their roles within a real industrial-strength game engine are illustrated. This book is intended to serve as an introductory text, but it also offers the experienced game programmer a useful perspective on aspects of game development technology with which they may not have deep experience.

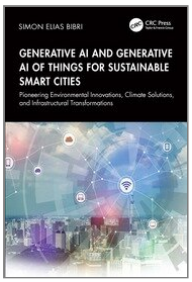
Generative AI and Generative AI of Things for Sustainable Smart Cities

Pioneering Environmental Innovations, Climate Solutions, and Infrastructural Transformations



Simon Elias Bibri

This pioneering book invites readers on a compelling journey into Generative Artificial Intelligence (AI) and its groundbreaking convergence with AI of Things (AIoT), introducing GAIoT as a transformative frontier in urban computing and intelligence. What sets this book apart is its first-of-its-kind focus on GAIoT as an innovative frontier shaping the future of sustainable urban development. It delivers actionable insights, conceptual and operational frameworks, case studies, and policy guidance-equipping diverse stakeholders with the tools to build cities that not only respond to change but also anticipate and shape it.

How Video Games Made the Metaverse

From Pixels to Portals

Kelly Vero

Drawing on over 30 years of industry experience, Kelly Vero explores the rich interplay between narrative, design, and technology, making the case for why story, far from being a cosmetic layer, is foundational to player engagement, emotional investment, and lasting value in games and virtual worlds. Crucially, How Video Games Made the Metaverse: From Pixels to Portals is about building worlds that people want to live in. Whether you're a product lead, a writer, or designer, this book explores how to integrate content, interaction, and community into a unified whole.

Inclusive Futures

Lessons from Emerging Contexts on Building Equitable Digital Systems

Edited by Arif Perdana , S Vijayakumar Bharathi , Kanchan Patil , Grace Wangge , Sabina Satriyani Puspita , Wei Kang

This book offers a comprehensive analysis of the role of diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) in the technology sector from a global perspective. Comprising seven in-depth chapters, the book highlights inherent biases within technology and strategies for constructing inclusive products and services. This book serves as a valuable resource for practitioners involved in the development of technology, hiring in the technology sector and leaders involved in policymaking of ethical and regulatory aspects of DEI in technology.

It's Not in the Manual

Real-World Leadership for Security and Risk Professionals

Michael Gips

Series: Security, Audit and Leadership Series

It's Not In the Manual shatters the illusion that effective leadership in security, risk, and resilience is all about titles, certifications, or rigid frameworks. In a world where cyber threats, insider risk, reputational landmines, and geopolitical chaos overlap, this book delivers something far more valuable: hard-earned wisdom, human vulnerability—and a wry sense of humor. Written with both erudition and pop culture sensibility, the book blends field-tested insights with sharp wit, drawing from sources as varied as Socrates and Snoopy, Bill Gates and Bill Bryson, quantum physics and playground fistfights.

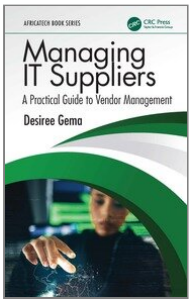
Managing IT Suppliers

A Practical Guide to Vendor Management



Desiree Gema

Series: AfricaTECH Book Series

The book provides practical guidelines for managing IT suppliers. The initial chapters lay the foundation by exploring the fundamentals of vendor selection and the principles of effective negotiation. Subsequent sections explore advanced topics such as drafting comprehensive SLAs, performance monitoring, and risk mitigation. Each chapter is designed to empower readers with the ability to apply the concepts directly to daily operations. Readers are exposed to a toolkit of strategies and best practices to manage IT suppliers with dexterity and confidence. This book is aimed at professionals in supplier relationship management, and graduate students in IT and management.

Realistic and Ethical Use of Artificial Intelligence

Maggi Savin-Baden Prof of Higher Education Research at Coventry University, UK, Zak Savin-Baden

Current perspectives on AI tend to focus on the wide parameters between fear and hope. Realistic and Ethical Use of Artificial Intelligence provides some (ethical) hope with realistic solutions. It deals with the complexities of AI, unpacking specific challenges presented by the AI problem and suggesting what we do about them. This up-to-date text is ideal for anyone looking for a deeper understanding of what counts as AI, the moral questions troubling both researchers and the general public, and how AI can be a fantastic tool if built and used ethically.

Risk Management for Video Game Professionals

Navigating Uncertainty in Game Development

Liam Wickham

Game development is a high-stakes, high-pressure world where failure often feels inevitable, and success relies on navigating uncertainty. This book gives developers, producers, and leaders the tools to manage risk proactively - before it becomes crisis. Whether you are leading a team through a live ops crunch, juggling dependencies across time zones, or simply trying to avoid the traps that derail so many good games, this book will help you ask better questions, have the right conversations, and treat risk as a creative ally.

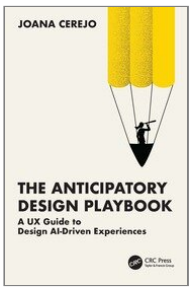
The Anticipatory Design Playbook

A UX Guide to Design AI-Driven Experiences



Joana Cerejo

The Anticipatory Design Playbook is a practical and thought-provoking guide to crafting anticipatory experiences in an age defined by artificial intelligence. Grounded in years of PhD research and real-world design leadership, Joana Cerejo offers a comprehensive framework for designing AI-driven systems that align with user intent, respond to evolving behaviors, and remain transparent, adaptive, and human-centered. More than a framework, The Anticipatory Design Playbook invites us to design with foresight—to create systems that are not just efficient, but context-aware, participatory, and resilient to change.

The Hybrid Mind

The Human-AI Convergence

Joseph X Ng

The Hybrid Mind explores the transformative potential of humans and AI systems collaborating to revolutionize risk management, oversight, and adaptive governance. Introducing Agentic AI—systems capable of autonomous decision-making while preserving human authority—the book outlines a hybrid inference architecture that combines Large and Small Language Models, machine learning, and probabilistic reasoning. Designed for business leaders, technologists, and policymakers, this book serves as both a strategic guide and a moral blueprint for the AI era, in which intelligence is shared, automation is consequential, and responsibility must be architected, not assumed.

The Values of Artificial Intelligence

How Smart Leaders Capture and Connect AI Value to Human Values

Edosa Odaro

The book provides senior leaders with a guide for capturing, connecting, and communicating AI's values. It shows how to ensure that AI projects deliver not only short-term but sustainable, long-term benefits. This book addresses the key challenge of realising AI's business value, focusing on how leaders can develop and implement AI initiatives that strategically align with goals. It bridges the gap between technology, business, and human perspectives to drive synergy and maximise impact. It emphasises communicating the benefits of AI projects to stakeholders to ensure short-term support and long-term success.

An Introduction to Ansys Fluent 2025

John E. Matsson

As an engineer, you may need to test how a design interacts with fluids. For example, you may need to simulate how air flows over an aircraft wing, how water flows through a filter, or how water seeps under a dam. Carrying out simulations is often a critical step in verifying that a design will be successful. In this hands-on book, you'll learn in detail how to run Computational Fluid Dynamics (CFD) simulations using Ansys Fluent. Ansys Fluent is known for its power, simplicity and speed, which has helped make it a world leader in CFD software, both in academia and industry.

AutoCAD 2026 for the Interior Designer

AutoCAD for Mac and PC

Dean Muccio

Focused around a hotel suite project, AutoCAD 2026 for the Interior Designer provides the Interior Design student with a non-intimidating, tutorial based approach to learning the Autodesk AutoCAD program. It accomplishes this by taking students that have no computer design experience from simple commands to complete projects in this single-semester sized text. This well organized and progressive approach to learning AutoCAD sets this text apart from others. To support all users, this book covers AutoCAD for both Macs and PCs.

Autodesk Inventor 2026

A Tutorial Introduction

L. Scott Hansen

This unique text and video set presents a thorough introduction to Autodesk Inventor for anyone with little or no prior experience with CAD software. It can be used in virtually any setting from four year engineering schools to on-the-job use or self-study. Unlike other books of its kind, it begins at a very basic level and ends at a very advanced level. It's perfect for anyone interested in learning Autodesk Inventor quickly and effectively using a "learning by doing" approach. Additionally, the extensive videos that are included with this book make it easier than ever to learn Inventor by clearly demonstrating how to use its tools.

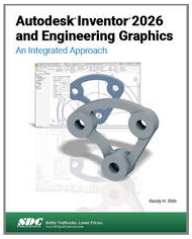
Autodesk Inventor 2026 and Engineering Graphics

An Integrated Approach



Randy H. Shih

Autodesk Inventor 2026 and Engineering Graphics: An Integrated Approach will teach you the principles of engineering graphics while instructing you on how to use the powerful 3D modeling capabilities of Autodesk Inventor 2026. Using step-by-step tutorials, this text will teach you how to create and read engineering drawings while becoming proficient at using the most common features of Autodesk Inventor. By the end of the book you will be fully prepared to take and pass the Autodesk Inventor Certified User Exam. This text is intended to be used as a training guide for students and professionals.

Autodesk Inventor 2026 Essentials Plus

Daniel T. Banach , Shawna Lockhart , Sheila Markazi

Autodesk Inventor 2026 Essentials Plus provides the foundation for a hands-on course that covers basic and advanced Autodesk Inventor features used to create, edit, document, and print parts and assemblies. You learn about part and assembly modeling through real-world exercises. Autodesk Inventor 2026 Essentials Plus demonstrates critical CAD concepts, from basic sketching and modeling through advanced modeling techniques, as it equips you with the skills to master this powerful professional tool. The book walks you through every component of the software, including the user interface, toolbars, dialogue boxes, sketch tools, drawing views, assembly modeling, and more.

Autodesk Maya 2026 Basics Guide

Kelly L. Murdock

Written by renowned author and 3D artist Kelly L. Murdock, Autodesk Maya 2026 Basics Guide is designed to give new users a solid understanding of the fundamental skills needed to create beautiful 3D models and stunning animations with Autodesk Maya. Using clear and easy to follow instructions this book will guide you through learning all the major features of Maya. The text is enriched by an extensive collection of video tutorials. Each chapter has a series of corresponding videos that parallel the tutorials in the textbook. They introduce you to the topics and allow you to watch and learn how functions are performed in a way that a text alone cannot do.

Autodesk Revit 2026 Architecture Basics

From the Ground Up

Elise Moss

Autodesk Revit 2026 Architecture Basics is geared towards beginning architectural students or professional architects who want to get a jump-start into 3D parametric modeling for commercial structures. This book is filled with tutorials, tips and tricks, and will help you get the most out of your software in very little time. The text takes you from concepts to site plans to floor plans and on to reflected ceiling plans, then ends with an easy chapter on how to customize Autodesk Revit to boost your productivity.

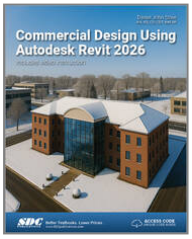
Commercial Design Using Autodesk Revit 2026



Daniel John Stine

Commercial Design Using Autodesk Revit 2026 is designed for the architectural student using Revit 2026. The intent is to provide you with a well-rounded knowledge of tools and techniques for use in both school and industry. This text takes a project-based approach to learning Revit's architectural tools in which you develop a three story office building. Each book also includes access to video tutorials designed to further help you master Autodesk Revit. General building codes and industry standard conventions are covered in a way that is applicable to the current exercise.

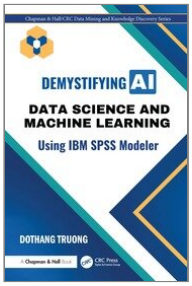
Demystifying AI

Data Science and Machine Learning Using IBM SPSS Modeler



Dothang Truong

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Data Mining and Knowledge Discovery Series

In this book, readers are guided through practical implementations using real datasets and SPSS Modeler, a user-friendly data mining tool. The approach remains consistent with a focus on application, providing step-by-step instructions for all stages of the data mining process using two large datasets, ensuring continuity and reinforcing concepts in a cohesive project framework. This book is a companion for beginners and experienced practitioners alike. It targets a broad audience, including students, lecturers, researchers, and industry professionals. It offers flexibility in learning pathways and deepens understanding of data science using easy-to-follow, software-based approaches.

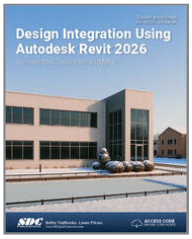
Design Integration Using Autodesk Revit 2026

Architecture, Structure and MEP



Daniel John Stine

Design Integration Using Autodesk Revit 2026 is designed to provide you with a well-rounded knowledge of Autodesk Revit tools and techniques. All three disciplines of the Revit platform are introduced in this textbook. This approach gives you a broad overview of the Building Information Modeling (BIM) process. The topics cover the design integration of most of the building disciplines: Architectural, Interior Design, Structural, Mechanical, Plumbing and Electrical. Civil is not covered, but adding topography to your model is. Each book also includes access to video tutorials designed to further help you master Autodesk Revit.

Engineering Graphics Essentials with AutoCAD 2026 Instruction

Text and Video Instruction

Kirstie Plantenberg

Engineering Graphics Essentials with AutoCAD 2026 Instruction gives students a basic understanding of how to create and read engineering drawings by presenting principles in a logical and easy to understand manner. It covers the main topics of engineering graphics, including tolerancing and fasteners, while also teaching students the fundamentals of Autodesk AutoCAD 2026. This book features independent learning material containing supplemental content to further reinforce these principles.

Finite Element Simulations with ANSYS Workbench 2025

Theory, Applications, Case Studies

Huei-Huang Lee , Paul J. Schilling

Finite Element Simulations with ANSYS Workbench 2025 is a comprehensive and easy to understand workbook. Printed in full color, it utilizes rich graphics and step-by-step instructions to guide you through learning how to perform finite element simulations using ANSYS Workbench. This book is designed to be used mainly as a textbook for undergraduate and graduate students. Each copy of this book includes access to video instruction. In these videos the author provides a clear presentation of tutorials found in the book. The videos reinforce the steps described in the book by allowing you to watch the exact steps the author uses to complete the exercises.

Interior Design Using Autodesk Revit 2026

Introduction to Building Information Modeling for Interior Designers

Maria Delgado , Daniel John Stine

Discover how Revit empowers interior designers to iterate faster, visualize in 3D, and produce error-free deliverables from day one. Meticulously crafted for both students and professionals, this book will teach you to use Revit the way interior designers actually work, regardless of your prior experience. In this project-driven guide you'll plan, model and document every detail of a two-story law office. To further enhance your learning experience, this text includes a comprehensive collection of chapter-based tutorial videos, tool-specific reference videos, and exclusive bonus chapters.

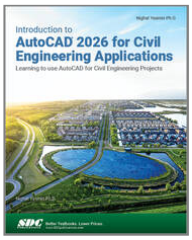
Introduction to AutoCAD 2026 for Civil Engineering Applications

Learning to use AutoCAD for Civil Engineering Projects



Nighat Yasmin

There is an old saying that an engineer describes every idea with a drawing. With the advances in computer technology and drawing software, it has never been easier, or more important, to learn computer aided design. To be effective, however, a drawing must accurately convey your intended meaning and that requires more than just knowing how to use software. This book provides you with a clear presentation of the theory of engineering graphics and the use of Autodesk AutoCAD 2026 as they pertain to civil engineering applications.

Introduction to Finite Element Analysis Using Creo Simulate 12.0

Randy H. Shih

The primary goal of Introduction to Finite Element Analysis Using Creo Simulate 12 is to introduce the aspects of finite element analysis (FEA) that are important to engineers and designers. Theoretical aspects of finite element analysis are also introduced as they are needed to help better understand the operations. The primary emphasis of the text is placed on the practical concepts and procedures of using Creo Simulate in performing Linear Statics Stress Analysis; but the basic modal analysis procedure is covered. This text is intended to be used as a training guide for both students and professionals.

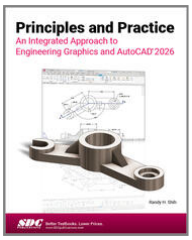
Principles and Practice An Integrated Approach to Engineering Graphics and AutoCAD 2026



Randy H. Shih

Principles and Practices An Integrated Approach to Engineering Graphics and AutoCAD 2026 combines an introduction to AutoCAD 2026 with a comprehensive coverage of engineering graphics principles. By adopting this textbook, you will no longer need to adopt separate CAD and engineering graphics books for your course. Not only will this unified approach give your course a smoother flow, your students will also save money on their textbooks. What's more, the tutorial exercises in this text cover the performance tasks found on the AutoCAD 2026 Certified User Examination.

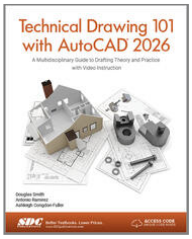
Technical Drawing 101 with AutoCAD 2026

A Multidisciplinary Guide to Drafting Theory and Practice with Video Instruction



Ashleigh Congdon-Fuller , Antonio Ramirez , Douglas Smith

A lot rides on your choice of technical drawing textbook: it could be the gateway leading students to a rewarding career or the foundation for an introductory class that fuels interest in a whole program. Technical Drawing 101 with AutoCAD 2026 is both. More than a traditional technical drawing textbook, it uniquely teaches both the theory and fundamentals of technical drawing and the basics of Autodesk AutoCAD. It covers topics ranging from the most basic, such as making freehand, multi-view sketches of machine parts, to the advanced, such as creating an AutoCAD dimension style containing the style settings defined by the ASME Y14.5-2009 Dimensioning and Tolerancing standard.

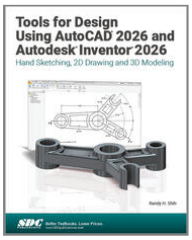
Tools for Design Using AutoCAD 2026 and Autodesk Inventor 2026

Hand Sketching, 2D Drawing and 3D Modeling



Randy H. Shih

Tools for Design is intended to provide you with an overview of computer aided design using two popular CAD software packages from Autodesk: AutoCAD and Autodesk Inventor. This book explores the strengths of each package and shows how they can be used in design, both separately and in combination with each other. This book is designed for high school and college age students wanting to learn the fundamentals of computer aided design with AutoCAD and Inventor and how the two can be used together. No prior CAD experience is required.

A Cultural History of Computer Graphics

Carolin Scheler

In response to the need of new methods to culturally decode digital imagery, this book starts from the production process and describes computer graphics as an independent method of expression inherently con-taining a specific ideological concept of realism. Through this study, it becomes clear that a certain sense of the world is always inscribed in computer graphics software development and consequent-ly the image creation process. This sense of the world is reflected by the effects on the relationship between image and reality. In its own unique way, every digital imaging method embodies its own sense of the world.

Applied Machine Learning on Sensing Technologies

Edited by Md Atiqur Rahman Ahad , Anton Nijholt , Md Abdus Samad Kamal , Björn Schuller , Matthew A. Turk

Series: Ubiquitous Computing, Healthcare and Well-being

The book will be related to applied machine learning and deep learning in the field of sensing, vision and sensor-based applications. Apart from a series of methodologies, it will have some- original methods,- exploration of new applications,- presentations on relevant datasets,- challenging applications,- ideas and future scopes with some guidelines.The editors are top experts in these arenas and published

Artificial Intelligence and Sustainable Innovation

Volume 3

Edited by Arvind Dagur , Sohit Agarwal , Dhirendra Kumar Shukla , Shabir Ali , Sandhya Sharma

This book brings together researchers, academicians, industry professionals, and policymakers to explore the transformative role of Artificial Intelligence (AI) in addressing global sustainability challenges. With a distinct focus on the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), it serves as a rich repository of research on AI for energy efficiency, climate change mitigation, smart cities, healthcare, and education. Researchers, academicians, research scholars, persons in industry, students, entrepreneurs, and technology enthusiasts will benefit from this book.

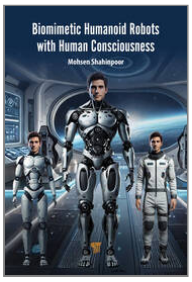
Biomimetic Humanoid Robots with Human Consciousness



Mohsen Shahinpoor

This book describes a non-fiction scenario in which humanity will survive in the universe immortally by the creation of look-alike biomimetic humanoid robots with a special consciousness in which the humanoid robot knows that it is modeling a human master (owner) with "an identity and a life vita" (resume, life story, and memories). The robot will have a consciousness or self-awareness of itself (IVA-consciousness) and will stay in the universe even after the human master has left.

Cause and Effect Business Analytics and Data Science

Dominique Haughton Bentley University, Jonathan Haughton Suffolk University, USA, Victor S. Y. Lo Fidelity Investments

Series: Chapman and Hall/CRC Series on Statistics in Business and Economics

Among the most important questions that businesses ask are some very simple ones: If I decide to do something, will it work? And if so, how large are the effects? To answer these predictive questions, and later base decisions on them, we need to establish causal relationships. The book is written in an accessible style, and will be of interest to data analysts and strategists in business, to students and instructors of business and analytics who have a solid foundation in statistics, and to data scientists who recognize the need to take seriously the need for causality as an essential input into effective decision making.

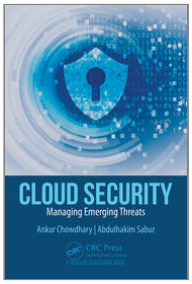
Cloud Security

Managing Emerging Threats



Ankur Chowdhary , Abdulhakim Sabur Taibah University, Saudi Arabia

This book offers a hands-on guide to cloud security from both offensive and defensive perspectives. It explores real-world threats like phishing, data exfiltration, and zero-day exploits, while equipping professionals with tools for threat modeling, DevSecOps, and penetration testing. Learn how to tackle authentication gaps, manage vulnerabilities, enforce zero-trust, and respond to incidents at scale. With AI-powered automation, compliance insights, and practical case studies, this book is a must-read for modern cloud security professionals.

Edited by Vithya Ganesan , S. Indu Vadhani , Subrata Chowdhury , Souvik Pal Assistant Professor, JIS College of Engineering, WB, India, Vishnu S. Pendyala

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Internet of Things

This book explores the critical issue of fairness in human-machine interfaces. It delves into the integration of technology and cognitive science to develop AI systems that are unbiased, reliable, and user-friendly. The book also sheds light on emotional data processing in AI accelerators and federated learning modules. Additionally, it covers machine learning, knowledge representation, and the application of knowledge graphs to understand and optimize the behaviour of AI assistance devices.

Computational Intelligence Solutions for Real-Life Problems

Theories, Applications, and Advances

Edited by Biswadip Basu Mallik , Gunjan Mukherjee , Rahul Kar , Özen Özer , Digvijay Pandey , Binay Kumar Pandey

Looks at the fast-growing field of computational intelligence in a wide range of areas and offers new perspectives for using AI to enhance effectiveness as well as deal with a diverse selection real-life issues and problems. The numerous and diverse case examples highlight the integration of computational intelligence in drug discovery and in the development and manufacturing of pharmaceuticals, in electronic science, in agricultural science, in manufacturing and industrial design, in finance and economics, in cybersecurity, in election integrity, in cancer prediction and analysis, for TVE (technical and vocational education) institutions, and more.

Cybersecurity for Internet of Health Things

Edited by Mohiuddin Ahmed Edith Cowen University, Australia, Nazim Choudhury University of Wisconsin, USA

Digital healthcare is an important aspect of the modern age. However, cybercriminals are motivated to disrupt this critical infrastructure due to the high return on investment. It is imperative that industry practitioners, academics, and the government work together to address the challenges associated with healthcare. This book covers the evolution, trends, techniques, countermeasures, and open research directions in futuristic healthcare. In addition, it will serve as an important reference for knowledge.

Digital Technologies for Wind Turbine Control and Integration

Edited by Badre Bossoufi , Ibtihal Ait Abdelmoula

Series: Advances in Digital Technologies for Smart Applications

This book examines and develops digital control techniques for wind power systems and their integration into the grid, with the goal of addressing issues related to the efficiency and quality of energy injected into the electrical network. It provides a comprehensive examination of digital control technologies for wind energy systems, covering a range of configurations, including existing ones (DFIG, PMSG, IM, etc.) as well as new ones (VIENNA, Quadri-rotor, etc.). The book discusses various control strategies such as Backstepping, Sliding Mode, and Predictive Control, and explores their development through Artificial Intelligence (AI) and the Internet of Things (IoT).

Doctoring Documents

Mistruth in History and Cybersecurity

Steven Simske , Dallen Simske

Series: River Publishers Series in Document Engineering

This book explores the primary methods, presented as a set of thirteen patterns, used to insert mistruth in historical narratives. These patterns culminate in the broadest of patterns, versioning and propaganda, which are used to show that mistruth is unavoidable in any historical narrative. This also supports the argument that a primary task of the historian is to provide their own contextual considerations sufficiently to help their readers create their own version. The value of a deep, mistruth-aware analysis of history is thus shown to be crucial for understanding how to protect data of all types in today's electronic society.

Future Learning with Large Language Models

Applications and Research in Education

Edited by Myint Swe Khine , László Bognár , Ernest Afari

Large language models (LLMs), advanced AI systems trained on vast text datasets, are reshaping education. This book explores their role in revolutionizing learning through cognitive reinforcement, personalization, curriculum-wide applications, and teacher training. It addresses challenges, ethical frameworks, and strategies for responsible integration. Offering insights for educators, technologists, and policymakers, it highlights LLMs' potential to enhance learning efficiency, improve assessments, and expand access to quality education, nurturing critical thinkers and innovators in an AI-driven era.

How Executives Should Think About AI

Straight Talk About the Inevitable

Stephen J. Andriole Villanova University, Pennsylvania, USA

The book speaks to AI's issues, opportunities, and risks. It's every professional's guide to what amounts to insider trading. It's not a blue ocean anything and it's not a north star. It's a conversation about how executives should think about AI. This conversation is as timely as it gets. It helps executives understand how AI will impact their companies and their professional success. It's straight talk about the most important technology since the Internet. Executives have no choice but to embrace AI to accomplish their professional goals. This book helps accomplish these goals.

Case Studies and Applications in Healthcare

Edited by Balakrishnan C , Jayapriya J , Vinay M , Sanjeev Kumar Singh , Nadarajah Manivannan

The book presents a comprehensive overview of emerging IoT technologies, IoT devices and sensors and their role in the healthcare industry. It offers recent developments in the creation, application, and impact of new IoMT data security, IoMT devices used in a variety of applications, including telemedicine, monitoring patients, and intelligence-based medical data analysis. It includes discussions on the use of medical data analysis to make various predictions and diagnoses that lead to the right treatment. The security of medical data from Internet of Things (IoT) devices, where there is a risk of data leakage during transmission from the device to the server, is discussed.

Quantum Computing

The Past, the Present, and the Future

Edited by Sam Goundar , K.Reddy Madhavi , J. Avanija

The aim of this book is to provide a comprehensive exploration of the recent developments in the field of quantum computing. The book introduces readers to the history, current state, and future prospects of quantum computing. It will provide a clear understanding of the challenges it faces in becoming a practical and transformative technology. This book presents quantum computing to a broad audience including academics, students, computer scientists, engineers, and mathematicians. It will assist experts and aspiring quantum computing scholars to learn new quantum computing skills and to improve their expertise and applications of the technology.

System Innovation for a Global Economy

Applied System Innovation XI

Edited by Artde Donald Kin-Tak Lam Fujian University of Technology, China, Stephen D. Prior University of Southampton, UK, Siu-Tsen Shen , Sheng-Joue Young , Liang-Wen Ji National Formosa University

Series: Smart Science, Design & Technology

System Innovation for a Global Economy contains the contribution to the 2025 International Conference on Applied System Innovation, (ICASI 2025, Tokyo, Japan, April 22-25, 2025). The book aims to provide an integrated communication platform for researchers from a wide range of topics including information technology, communication science, applied mathematics, computer science, advanced material science, and engineering. It enhances interdisciplinary collaborations between science and engineering technologists and is aimed at academics and technologists interested in the above mentioned areas.

Unleashing User Innovation

Multidisciplinary Perspectives on End-User Development and Generative AI

Edited by Mohammad Amin Kuhail , Mostafa Mohamad , Rawad Hammad , Mohammed Bahja

The book takes a multidisciplinary approach to end-user development, incorporating next-generation technologies and Industry 5.0 principles. By exploring the intersection of diverse fields, the book reveals how generative AI empowers individuals engaged in end-user development to unlock their creative potential. It emphasizes the role of generative AI in enabling these developers to create innovative software solutions effectively. With a focus on cutting-edge advancements, the book showcases how the integration of generative AI fosters a collaborative environment that bridges the gap between technical and non-technical users to democratize development and foster innovation.

Virtual Reality, Real Emergency

Integrating AR/VR in Computing and Medical Crisis Management

Edited by Arvind Dhaka , Farid Nait-Abdesselam , Amita Nandal , Dijana Capeska Bogatinoska , Pramod Singh Rathore , Arpit Kumar Sharma , Dmytro Zubov

In an effort to investigate the revolutionary potential of AR and VR technologies in the field of mechanical and medical emergency management, "Virtual Realities, Real Emergencies" was written. This book seeks to educate readers on how augmented and virtual reality (AR/VR) may transform response to emergencies, boost training, and facilitate better decision-making under pressure.

Climate Change and the Energy Transition

The Science, Politics, and Solutions for a Sustainable Future

Anirudh Singh

Series: From Atoms to Atmospheres

Climate Change and the Energy Transition attempts to remove some of the key knowledge barriers and proposes a radically new strategy to treat the climate crisis. The book takes the reader on a learning journey through the cause of global warming, the impacts of climate change, and the science behind changes in the Earth's climate system. A detailed introduction to how the Earth's climate system is monitored by NASA, ESA and NOAA using projects such as the CERES project follows, and how the IPCC teams together with climate modelling centres to predict future climate change using climate models is explained.

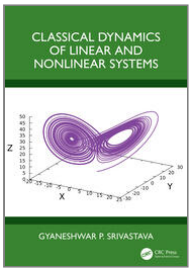
Classical Dynamics of Linear and Nonlinear Systems



Gyaneshwar P. Srivastava

Classical Dynamics of Linear and Nonlinear Systems offers a comprehensive exploration of dynamical systems from fundamental principles to advanced applications. This textbook presents a unified treatment of classical dynamics, bridging the gap between linear and nonlinear systems while providing both theoretical foundations and practical applications. The book transforms abstract theoretical concepts into practical understanding through rigorous mathematical and numerical frameworks and illuminating examples, making it ideally suited for advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students enrolled on physics, applied mathematics, engineering and materials science courses.

Classical Optics and Electromagnetic Waves

N.E. Bickers

Classical Optics and Electromagnetic Waves offers an exploration of optics, the physics subfield examining light's properties and applications. Beginning with the mathematical foundations of electromagnetic waves in matter, the text develops geometric optics as the short-wavelength limit of Maxwell's Equations, establishing a framework for understanding wavefronts, light rays, and intensity variations. The work progresses methodically through image formation using mirrors and lenses in the paraxial approximation, employing transfer matrices for precise calculations.

Quantum Many-Body Physics

A Path Integral Approach

Luca Salasnich

Series: Textbook Series in Physical Sciences

Quantum Many-Body Physics: A Path Integral Approach offers a fresh perspective on quantum phenomena in condensed matter physics. This comprehensive first edition provides a powerful and versatile framework for understanding complex problems in systems such as ultracold atoms, superfluids, and superconductors.Designed for graduate students in physics and related disciplines, this book serves as an essential resource for those aiming to advance their studies in quantum mechanics. Researchers in condensed matter physics, quantum optics, and quantum information will also find valuable insights to support their work on the next breakthroughs in the field.

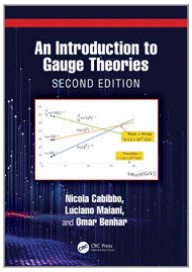
An Introduction to Gauge Theories



Nicola Cabibbo University of Rome, La Sapienza, Italy, and Istituto Nazionale di Fisica Nucleare, Roma, Italy, Luciano Maiani University of Rome, La Sapienza, and INFN Rome, Italy, Omar Benhar INFN, Roma, Italy

Written by world-leading experts in particle physics, this new book from Luciano Maiani and Omar Benhar, with contributions from the late Nicola Cabibbo, is based on Feynman's path integral formulation of quantum field theory. Key elements of gauge theories are described—Feynman diagrams, gauge-fixing, Faddeev-Popov ghosts—as well as renormalisation in Quantum Electrodynamics.

Bioactive Glass Materials for Biological Applications

Edited by Raghavendra Gujjala National Inst of Tech Warangal, India, P. Syam Prasad Nat Inst of Tech, Warangal, Dheeraj Kumar Gara Jain Univ, Bengaluru

The book envelopes the complexities, challenges, and advancement in developing new class of bioactive materials for versatile applications. It outlines the materials involved, bioactivity against bioinert materials, phase change materials, biomolecular nature, synthetic biodegradable polymers, and bioactive glasses. The processing techniques of the bioactive glasses for versatile applications is also covered. A comprehensive focus is on the review of additive manufacturing routes suitable for biological applications with ability to print various bioactive materials whilst carrying living cells. It is aimed at graduate students and researchers in glasses and ceramics, and biomaterials.

From Raw Cutting Toward Precision Machining

A History of Waterjet Technology

Edited by Peter H.-T. Liu

This book on waterjet technology builds on the previous book by the author, Versatility of Waterjet Technology, and explores the rich and fascinating history of the field. From early developments to its emergence as a precision machining powerhouse, the book chronicles key milestones, people, and innovations that shaped waterjet technology. The book also examines the vital roles of marketing and education in transforming waterjet systems from niche tools into global industrial solutions.

Edited by Mangalaraja Ramalinga Viswanathan , Arunachalam Arulraj , Pandiyarajan Thangaraj , Ernesto Chicardi Augusto , Arun Thirumurugan Universidad de ATACAMA, Chile, P. Sakthivel

Series: Series in Materials Science and Engineering

Volume One provides a panoramic view of the vibrant and multidisciplinary field of 2D materials. It includes content on recent advances in graphene, gas sensing, optoelectronic and photonic devices, electrochemical sensors, and energy applications. It also provides a thorough exploration of MXenes. Volume Two provides a comprehensive exploration of the evolution, properties, and applications of 2D materials. Beginning with the historical and scientific background, it looks at the diverse functionalities of graphene, such as its role in biosensors and energy storage. It expands to other 2D materials like transition metal diselenides for solar cells, MXenes, and fullerene.

Analysis of the Global Water Crisis – Illustrating Regions with Extreme Water Scarcity to Those with Relative Abundance

Medani P. Bhandari

Series: River Publishers Series in Social, Urban, Economic and Environmental Sustainability

This pioneering work provides a comprehensive exploration of the world's most pressing water issues. It offers a global overview of the water crisis, meticulously categorizing regions based on their water availability: from areas facing extreme water scarcity to those enjoying relative abundance. By examining diverse case studies, it presents specific examples from regions struggling with severe droughts, high to moderate water stress, moderate water security, and those blessed with ample freshwater resources. The book delves into the underlying causes of the global water crisis, including climate change, population growth, pollution, and unsustainable water management practices.

Emerging and Innovative Smart Materials for Water Treatment Applications

Piyal Mondal Indian Institute of Technology Guwahati, India., Satish Kumar , Mihir Kumar Purkait Indian Institute of Technology Guwahati, India.

This book explains the fundamental and advanced topics related to the field of different nano and macro structure-based materials towards combating the problem of water treatment focussing on smart and advanced materials, their necessity and advantages over other conventional materials. The sources and effects of hazardous contaminants, the shortcomings of conventional treatment have been discussed in detail along with the beneficial properties of various smart materials including stimuli-responsive, carbon-based, bio, nano-structured materials.This book is aimed at researchers and graduate students in chemical and water engineering, and materials science.

Handbook of Artificial Intelligence in Water Management

Towards Net Zero Emissions

Edited by Soufiane Haddout Ibn Tofail University, Morocco, Tonni Agustiono Kurniawan University Teknologi Malaysia, Skudai

The Handbook of Artificial Intelligence in Water Management explores the intersection of artificial intelligence (AI) technologies and water management strategies aimed at achieving net zero emissions. It delves into the cutting-edge applications of AI in various facets of water resource management, ranging from optimizing water distribution systems to enhancing wastewater treatment processes. This book is a valuable resource for advanced undergraduate students, researchers, and industry professionals interested in utilizing AI to mitigate environmental impacts, enhance resilience, and achieve net zero emissions in water management.

Overtourism in Cities and Small Islands

Edited by Lino Briguglio , Marie Avellino , Jim Butcher

Series: Europa International Perspectives

This volume examines overtourism in cities and small islands, identifying shared challenges and unique factors affecting the two. It explores how tourism success threatens the qualities that attract visitors, disrupting local life, displacing communities through gentrification, and commodifying cultural heritage. The book questions whether overtourism will self-correct when destinations lose appeal or if we're witnessing permanent transformation of places, essential reading for policymakers, tourism professionals, researchers, and students.

Venezuela: Democracy at a Crossroads

Justyna Marzec

Series: Europa Country Perspectives

Today, democracy is assumed to be the dominant system in the world. It guarantees the development of states as well as the wellbeing and security of societies both internally and externally. However, the practice of state functioning shows that systemic transformation is non-linear and specific to a given state. This shortform volume attempts to identify the main trends affecting the transformation process in Venezuela, offering a concise overview for students, researchers and professionals interested in Venezuelan politics.

Asset Appreciation and Predatory Raiding in Russia

Changing Value, Changing Hands

Ararat L. Osipian George Washington University, Washington DC, USA

Series: Europa Economic Perspectives

This book investigates predatory raiding in Russia - depriving lawful owners of businesses and property through criminal methods wrapped in legality. Unlike Western raiders targeting distressed companies, Russian raiders target profitable enterprises, property, and land. Asset appreciation influences target selection. Raiders employ non-economic instruments: legal battles, corruption, fraud, and violence. The research uses video footage of hostile takeovers to analyze predatory raiding. For understanding raiding movements and anti-raiding campaigns, asset re-valuation may be more significant than 1990s privatization.

The Regions and the European Community

The Regional Response to the Single Market in the Underdeveloped Areas

Edited by Robert Leonardi

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Regions and the European Community (1993) analyses the role of sub-national institutions in the regional economic development process in the EC's less-developed countries: Greece, Ireland, Portugal, Spain and Italy. The advantages and disadvantages of the European single market are examined, as are the impacts of the EC's sectoral policies on the alleviation of regional disparities and an in-depth analysis of the Integrated Mediterranean Programme.

The Barons of European Industry

Edited by Anthony Rowley

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Barons of European Industry (1974) examines the ownership and control of industry in the leading countries of Western Europe. In individual chapters on France, Germany, Britain, Italy, Benelux, the Netherlands, Ireland and Denmark, the authors describe the structure and operation of the large industrial empires of each country. It deals with the power structure and economic base of European industry, as well as with the influential individuals and organizations which dominate it.

Economic Divergence in the European Community

Edited by Michael Hodges , William Wallace

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Economic Divergence in the European Community (1981) looks at the widening differences between the economies of the member states of the European Community. The economic designers of the common market had confidently assumed that the removal of trade barriers would bring about a natural convergence among national economies, and an acceleration in the pace of economic growth. This book closely examines the assumptions and suggests ways in which the Community's limited financial instruments and capabilities for co-ordinating economic and monetary policies might better be used to promote these aims.

Mental Health Care in the European Community

Edited by Steen P. Mangen

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Mental Health Care in the European Community (1985) is a study of the developments and constraints in the mental health policies of the full-member states of the European Community. Discussion is largely devoted to issues in the Sixties, Seventies and early Eighties, although the contributors have attempted to set each nation's policies in the wider historical context. Each case study links the expansion of psychiatric services 'in the community' to changes occurring in the health and welfare services generally. In so doing the authors describe and assess the scale of political, financial and planning constraints and outline the prospects for mental health care in the EC.

Ethics & European Security

Edited by Barrie Paskins

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The alliance between the United States and its Nato partners has been strained severely in recent years. Ethics & European Security (1986) develops a broad understanding of the problem of European security and American backing based on Christian ethics. There are disagreements and differences of emphasis among the contributors but they have in common the view that an exclusive preoccupation with the military dimension is damagingly one-sided. Instead the contributors argue that moral and theological concerns are a vital part of the politics and mechanics of European security and must be incorporated in any effort to devise new policies for security in Europe and the West.

The Operation of the European Social Fund

Doreen Collins

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Operation of the European Social Fund (1983) examines the process of European integration at work by taking a detailed analysis of one particular area, namely the European Social Fund. It looks at the ESF in itself, its origins, objectives and finance, and the application of the Fund in Britain. A tentative conclusion is formed as to the success of the ESF in promoting British integration into the EC.

Western Europe

Technology and the Future

Stanley Woods

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Western Europe (1987) looks at the 'technology gap' myth around the comparison of the high technology industries of Western Europe and those of the United States and Japan. It compares and contrasts the environment for innovation in the US, Japan and Western Europe, analysing differences in the respective technological bases, industrial structures, patterns of demand and government policies to find just where West European frailties lay.

The Romanian Economy in the Twentieth Century

David Turnock

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Romanian Economy in the Twentieth Century (1986) surveys the country's resources and examines the development of the different sectors of the economy. It considers the economy at the different stages of its development, and shows how the depression of the 1930s hit particularly deep, and how this was followed by the destruction of the Second World War. It analyses the adoption of Soviet-style planning and discusses the various attempts to reform this system, as the country changed into the 1980s.

Economic Integration and Growth in Europe

A.J. Marques Mendes

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Economic Integration and Growth in Europe (1987) is an in-depth study of the economic effects of integration and an analysis of economic growth in the EEC. It develops an alternative framework to the conventional Customs Union approach to the theory of economic integration and uses this new framework to measure the effects of the European experience of economic integration. The main conclusions are that integration has had a large effect on trade and that the benefits of integration have mainly arisen from export growth.

Regional Development in the European Economic Community

Political and Economic Planning

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Regional Development in the European Economic Community (1962) examines the considerable disparities in economic development between the various regions in the original six countries of the EEC. It considers the principles basic to regional policies in general, how far in fact they are influenced by social and how far by economic reasons. Two of the less-developed regions of the Community, Southern Italy and South West France, are then discussed in detail and the various schemes put forward for their development are described and analysed.

Environmental Profiles of European Business

Dion Vaughan , Craig Mickle

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Environmental Profiles of European Business (1993) surveys the reactions of European businesses to environmental concerns. Basing their findings on detailed and confidential interviews with boardroom executives from the UK, Germany, France, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands, the authors examine leading business sectors, including the automotive, chemical, steel, metal processing and electricity industries. In each case the characteristics of the sector, the environmental pressures, government attitudes and industry responses are described.

European Technological Collaboration

Margaret Sharp , Claire Shearman

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

European Technological Collaboration (1987) traces the response to international technological competition by European industries and governments, in promoting greater collaboration both in research and development and in new manufacturing and marketing initiatives. It examines the relative position of European industry in high-technology sectors, and the move towards collaboration on the part of industrialists and governments, and it covers European Community programmes such as Esprit, Race, Brite and Eureka. It concludes with a critique of the case for and against collaboration at a European level.

Joseph Harrison

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Spanish Economy in the 20th Century (1985) looks at the trials and tribulations of Spain, one of the most politically isolated and economically backward countries in Europe in the 20th Century. Monarchy, dictatorships, civil war, parliamentary republic – Spain experienced them all and it was not until the much-vaunted 'Spanish miracle' of 1961–73 that the country's economic fortunes began to turn around. Foreign tourists and emigrant remittances, together with foreign capital looking for cheap labour, brought a great deal of rapid economic development that was accelerated by Spain's entry into the EEC.

Europe's Domestic Market

Jacques Pelkmans , Alan Winters

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Europe's Domestic Market (1988) provides a critical analysis of the European Community's aim to achieve a unified European domestic market by 1992. It discusses the kind of common market which might be achieved and the economic benefits which might follow. It also explores how far other economic measures need to be undertaken, and the other conditions which may need to be satisfied, if governments, industries and public opinion are to endorse the steps necessary to make the European economy more dynamic. Lastly, some comments are proffered on the potential effects of a unified market on the British economy.

Free Trade and Competition in the EEC

Law, Policy and Practice

Helen Papaconstantinou

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

To what extent are Member states of the EEC bound to operate under principles of free trade and undistorted competition? How much of a free market really is the EEC in so far as the States themselves are concerned? Free Trade and Competition in the EEC (1988) examines these issues and attempts to establish the conditions under which a State may operate in the market. It looks at the extent to which Member States may intervene and regulate this market through general measures and tamper with free market forces without infringing the principle of free competition and whether state liability can be established.

Continuity and Change in European Society

Germany, France and Italy since 1870

Martin Kolinsky

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Continuity and Change in European Society (1974) surveys the political and social development of France, Germany and Italy against the background of a wider Europe, showing the complex relationship between political change and social continuity. It deals with the impact of industrialisation on the political structures of each country. Fascism and Nazism are examined in detail, looking at common features and the wider sociological trends. Lastly, the book examines post-1945 Europe and the formation of the European Community. Social and political change in each country is separately charted and the continuing pattern of European social relations is examined.

The Common Fisheries Policy of the European Community

Mark Wise

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Disputes over fishing rights stir national feelings despite the modest socio-economic importance of fishing in most member states. The Common Fisheries Policy of the European Community (1984) takes an impartial view in examining the development of the European Community's Common Fisheries Policy from its obscure origins in the 1960s to its reform in the 1980s. It draws together the major characteristics of Europe's diverse national fishing industries, and not only sheds light on the complex and often poorly understood workings of the EC itself but also describes the almost insuperable political problems of allocating and conserving an important international resource.

Electric Power in Victorian Britain

Volume III: Electric Power, Politics and Culture

Edited by Nathan Kapoor

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

This volume of primary sources examines electric power, politics and culture in Victorian Britain. The materials review the formalization of electric power infrastructures or "grids" as they took shape on a local, national, and imperial scale, and explore how citizens, novelists, doctors, politicians, and electrical engineers imagined electric power networks impacting the present and future.

American Imperialism in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History, 1775–1919

Volume I: From Lexington and Concord to the Louisiana Purchase, 1775–1803

Edited by Alys Beverton

This volume charts the establishment and early growth of the American empire, exploring how people in the United States collided with others who jeopardized the realization of their imperial ambitions, principally Native Americans and rival European colonists. It also considers the ideas which underpinned this process—ideas which insisted that the United States could build an empire which would promote the spread of republican government in the New World.

American Imperialism in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History, 1775–1919

Volume III: From the Mexican-American War to the Spanish-American War, 1846–1898

Edited by Adam Burns

This volume navigates the course of US imperialism between two major wars – the Mexican-American War (1846–1848) and the Spanish-American War (1898) – both of which saw significant US territorial expansion, and explores the so-called "winning of the West," the controversial Alaska Purchase of 1867, early US intrigue in the Caribbean, and the nation's expansion into the Pacific in the years leading up to the formal annexation of the Hawaiian Islands in 1898.

Electric Power in Victorian Britain

Volume II: Electric Power in Practice

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

The materials in volume two explore how the transformation of electric power imprinted on the political landscape of Great Britain and the Empire. Outside the lecture halls and laboratories, electric power became a source for inventors, politicians, economists, and the public to explore, define, and lament how energy consumption should look. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students and scholars of the History of Science.

American Imperialism in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History, 1775–1919

Volume IV: From the Treaty of Paris to the Paris Peace Conference, 1898–1919

Edited by Adam Burns

This volume documents the formation of the United States' colonial and informal empire in the Pacific, Caribbean, and Central America at the turn of the twentieth century. Taking the cessation of hostilities with Spain as its starting point, this final volume traces the evolution of United States imperialism through to the end of the First World War. A host of historic perspectives are presented through a range of source material, including letters, government documents, and published material.

Electric Power in Victorian Britain

Volume I: Electric Power Imagined

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

The materials in this volume cover the works of the natural philosophers, mathematicians, engineers, and entertainers for whom electricity became a vessel to say new things about energy and create a new means of generating motive force. The papers, books, and experiments explore the ways in which electricity transforms from a force of nature into a source of energy. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students and scholars of the History of Science.

Industrial Women, 1760–1914

Edited by Deborah Simonton University of Southern Denmark, Denmark

This four-volume collection of primary sources explores women and industry during the long nineteenth century. Women and industrial work are at the heart of the industrial revolution. They were often the most numerous workers and important contributors to the protoindustrial workforce based on domestic industry. The volumes examine women's work in the home, in the factories, and the law and regulation surrounding women and industry during this period. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students and scholars of Women's History.

AI for EVERYTHING

Artificial intelligence (AI) is all around us. From driverless cars to game winning computers to fraud protection, AI is already involved in many aspects of life, and its impact will only continue to grow in future. Many of the world's most valuable companies are investing heavily in AI research and development, and not a day goes by without news of cutting-edge breakthroughs in AI and robotics. The AI for Everything series will explore the role of AI in contemporary life, from cars and aircraft to medicine, education, fashion and beyond. Concise and accessible, each book is written by an expert in the field and will bring the study and reality of AI to a broad readership including nterested professionals, students, researchers, and lay readers.
